BORAH TO QUIZ ALL PARTIES

COOLIDGE WILL WIN, HENNING'S TRIP INDICATES

Dems Prefer Wildcat and Chaos to Cal.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 18.—[Special.]—All hope of electing John W. Davis two weeks from next Tuesday has now been abandoned by the Democratic campaign managers. This information comes to me from a source of unquestioned authority.

The La Follette managers never have had any hope of electing the Wisconsin senator on Nov. 4, or at any other time, despite his victory prophesying on the stump.

To stop Coolidge with a deadlock of the electoral college is now the last resort objective of both the Democratic and the third party. For the third party this has been the objective all the time.

Sliding Rapidly to Oblivion.

For the Democratic party it represents a retirement to another position which offers the last chance of wresting victory from defeat.

With the election thrown into congress, the Democrats would be confident of landing either Mr. Davis or Gov. Bryan in the presidency. Their theory is that conservative Republicans, in order to prevent Brother Charley Bryan achieving the presidency by virtue of his choice for Vice President by the senate and of the failure of the deadlocked house to choose a President—that conservative Republicans in the five equally divided delegations in the house would vote for Davis and effect his election. Mr. Davis himself, during the last week, has frankly discussed this as a promising possibility.

Trailing a Forlorn Hope.

The Democratic managers also take into consideration the possibility that conservative Democrats in the senate and conservative Republicans in the house might make a deal whereby Davis would be elected President by the house and Dawes chosen Vice President by the senate.

To accomplish the defeat of President Coolidge in this manner, however, either the Da is or the La Follette managers, or both, must perform wonders in the next fortnight, in my opinion. My survey of the political situation, state by state, indicates that the President will have a majority of the electoral votes and that this result will be apparent when the returns are received on the night of Nov. 4.

How the Thing Sizes Up.

Here are the states, with their electoral votes, which I now set down as safe for Coolidge:

Maine	6	Michigan	15
Rhode Island	5	Iowa	13
Pennsylvania	38	Utah	4
Indiana	15	New Hampshire	4
Colorado	6	Connecticut	7
Idaho	4	Ohio	24
Massachusetts	18	Kansas	10
New Jersey	14	Oregon	5
Illinois	29	California	13
Wyoming	3
New York	45

If Coolidge carries all these states and no others, he will be elected by a majority of 33 in the electoral college. There are no states in this list which the La Follette leaders have any sincere hope of carrying, and none to which the Democrats lay claim, in their inner councils, except New Hampshire and Rhode Island. Take both from Coolidge, and he would still have left in this list enough to enable him to win by a majority of 15.

Doubtful but Leaning to Cal.

There are five states which I now class as doubtful but in which Coolidge appears to be in the lead. They are:

Maryland	8	Nebraska	9
West Virginia	8
North Dakota	5	Total	41
Minnesota	12

If Coolidge should succeed in capturing all of these states in addition to those which seem safe for him, he would have 263 electoral votes, a majority of 115.

I set down as safe for Davis the following states:

Virginia	12	Alabama	12
Florida	6	Texas	20
Arkansas	9	Georgia	14
North Carolina	12	Mississippi	10
Tennessee	12	Kentucky	13
Louisiana	10
South Carolina	9	Total	139

These Seem to Like Davis.

In addition there are three states which are doubtful but in which, I believe, Davis possesses the present advantage. They are:

Delaware	3	Missouri	18
Oklahoma	10
		Total	31

This reckoning gives Davis a prospective total of 170 votes in the electoral college.

To La Follette I assign without question Wisconsin and North Dakota.

CAN YOU REMEMBER BACK IN 1913 AND '14?

[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune.]

In 1913 a special session of the Democratic congress passed and put into operation the Wilson-Underwood tariff law.

In 1914 industry was on the toboggan, factories were closing, and millions were thrown out of employment.

A colossal business smash was only averted by the war, which brought billions of dollars' worth of war orders to this country and stimulated an unhealthy prosperity.

MARY LEE JOBE, ALPINIST, IS WED TO CARL AKELEY

New York, Oct. 18.—[Special.]—Carl Akeley, explorer, naturalist and sculptor, and Miss Mary Lee Jobe, almost as widely known as an explorer and mountain climber, were married today in All Souls' church, Gramercy park.

Mr. Akeley, for years an active worker for the American Museum of Natural History, formerly of Field museum, Chicago, was divorced by Mrs. Delia Akeley in Chicago on March 22, 1923. The first Mrs. Akeley accompanied her husband on many of his big game hunting trips.

The bride, a graduate of Bryn Mawr college and Columbia university, was the first person to climb Mount Sir Alexander, one of the highest peaks of the Canadian Rockies. She is a fellow of the Royal Geographic society of London and a member of the American Alpine club, the Canadian Alpine club, the Club Alpin Francais, the Bryn Mawr College club and the Daughters of Ohio.

Mr. Akeley, once an intimate friend of President Roosevelt, was a storm center last March, when his "Chrysalis," a bronze group, depicting man emerging from the shaggy hide of a gorilla, was rejected by the National Academy of Design.

Repave Link Bridge Today; Traffic Detour

Sunday traffic southbound in Michigan avenue will have to detour at Ohio street today and for the next three Sundays to permit the city bridge department to do some repair work on the link bridge. The southbound motorists will have to use either the State or Dearborn street bridges until the city bridge department can pave the link bridge with rubber paving.

RICH YOUTH WEDS ANNE STILLMAN

Her Parents Meet, Nod, and Pass in Silence.

New York, Oct. 18.—[Special.]—Miss Anne Stillman was married to Henry Pomeroy Davison, son of Mrs. H. P. Davison and the late Mr. Davison, a partner in J. P. Morgan & Co., this afternoon at Mondanna, the country place of her mother, Mrs. James A. Stillman, at Pleasantville, N. Y. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Endicott Peabody, head master of Gorton school, of which Mr. Davison is an alumnus, and the father of his sister-in-law, Mrs. F. Trubee Davison.

Fifteen state troopers guarded the three entrances to the big estate and refused admittance to all except those invited. Shortly before the arrival of James A. Stillman, the bride's father, a servant was sent from the house to the main gate, where he instructed the guard not to hold up Mr. Stillman's motor car.

Gift of $1,000,000 Necklace.

Miss Stillman wore a wedding gown of white satin, trimmed with white chiffon. Around her head was a diamond band bearing a single emerald in front. This was the gift of her mother. Her father's gift was a string of pearls reported to be worth more than $1,000,000. He has been collecting the pearls for years and presenting her with a few each birthday.

Mr. Stillman remained for only an hour. He did not give the bride away. That was done by his son, James A. Stillman Jr. F. Trubee Davison was his brother's best man. The former banker and Mrs. Stillman bowed to each other, but did not talk.

Miss Frances Davison, sister of the bridegroom and a classmate of Miss Stillman at Westover, was her maid of honor.

Only Two Hundred Guests Present.

There were only 200 guests, mostly relatives or intimate friends of the families, though among them were John Cane, Mrs. Stillman's chauffeur, and George Williams, the Negro head porter at Grand Central terminal, who for years has taken care of Miss Stillman's baggage on her trips to and from Pleasantville.

Soon after the reception—Mr. and Mrs. Davison left by motor on their honeymoon. Their destination could not be learned.

HIS BLIND WIFE AFLAME, INVALID UNABLE TO AID

Henry J. Dericken, an invalid, was selling cigars in his little shop at 1620 Mabel avenue, Evanston, last night. His wife, who is blind, was upstairs cooking their supper.

Suddenly the old man heard screams. Next his wife, her clothes aflame, ran down the stairs into the store. Dericken, the invalid, was helpless. C. C. McDougall, 1021 Asbury avenue, Evanston, who had been buying cigars, took off his coat and attempted to put out the flame.

Later at the Evanston hospital the physicians said Mrs. Dericken would probably die.

COURT RECORDS CITED TO SHOW "SPEED LAXITY"

Dever Asks Police, Judges Co-operate.

In support of his contention that leniency on the part of municipal judges has been largely responsible for the epidemic of speeding, Chief of Police Morgan A. Collins yesterday produced court records submitted by his captains showing wholesale dismissals by certain jurists.

These reports disclose that not only motorists going at twenty-five miles an hour were discharged by the scores but also that dozens of drivers caught sipping along city streets at speeds of thirty, thirty-two, thirty-five and even higher, have been turned loose without a fine.

The cases cited date back several days as the court reports are delayed in reaching the chief's office by the routine of police procedure.

Dever Asks Harmony.

The judges went on with their policy yesterday, however, and the police just as persistently continued to carry out Chief Collins' orders to enforce the twenty mile speed law to the letter.

Mayor William E. Dever, though siding with his chief, issued a statement which, in effect, was an appeal for harmony between the courts and the police.

"I think we all should agree as methods of enforcing laws," he said, "not so as to create hardships for motorists but so that we may do whatever is in our power to put an end to the slaughter going on in our streets.

"The present laws seem inadequate to protect human life, but such as they are they should be enforced strictly. The police have no choice but to enforce them. The whole subject is simple. There need be no quarrel over what the law demands or provides and, certainly, in view of the more than 500 deaths in Chicago this year, there can be no dispute as to the police department's duty.

Surprised at Olson's Stand.

"I am surprised to read that Chief Justice Olson believes the maximum speed in Chicago should be thirty-two miles an hour. The legislature in its wisdom has provided that thirty-five miles an hour shall be the maximum speed for motor vehicles on country highways where there is no congestion and little danger. How Judge Olson can justify a speed of thirty-two miles an hour in the city's crowded streets is more than I can understand."

Chief Collins, who scanned reports from his captains showing the judges have been discharging dozens of offenders who exceeded thirty miles an hour, made it plain that he sought no controversy with Judge Olson. He said he would merely have to enforce the law until Judge Olson should suggest another remedy for cutting down the speed evil.

WHAT REPORTS SHOW

Among the reports submitted to Chief Collins was the following, showing some of the cases dismissed by Judge Curran in the last few days:

Oct. 15—Dorothy Jacobs, 5832 Michigan avenue, 32 miles on 47th street at State street.

Oct. 17—John Higgins, 6729 Oglesby avenue, 31 miles on Lake Park avenue at 43d street.

France Gets Japs' Secret Naval Plans

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, Oct. 18.—The French ministry of war has received confidential reports on the Japanese air and naval forces of 1924, which indicate highly useful building and training plans. The report dealing with purchases of airplanes and training of aviators does not hesitate to say that Japan is preparing for war.

THE TRIBUNE presents a summary of two reports from an unquestionable source, friendly to American interests.

The Japanese naval estimates for 1924 entail more than $100,000,000 for building, although the navy was only slightly injured by the earthquake last year. The French experts estimate that this is two and one-half times what is necessary to maintain the Japanese navy in the ratio established by the Washington agreement after allowances have been made for all the losses the navy suffered in the earthquake.

Building Eighty-four Warships.

The total tonnage now being built is 178,065. Eighty-four war craft of all types are now in various stages of building.

In addition, four cruisers and an unspecified number of submarines, estimated at forty, and a destroyer are authorized for construction in the immediate future. The French report gives no details on cruisers, but assumes that they will not be inferior in size, speed and armament to corresponding vessels built by the other great powers.

The report also emphasizes the fact that the 5-3 naval ratio is highly misleading, as it does not apply to such units as cruisers up to 10,000 tons, destroyers, or submarines. The report concludes with the statement that Japan is now making a huge effort to expand its sea power.

Buys Numerous Planes.

The report on airplanes goes into greater detail and presents even more drastic conclusions. It begins with a statement on the difficulties encountered by French diplomats and agents in obtaining information. It asserts that the Japanese are particularly reticent regarding naval aviation.

The main purpose of the general staff is defined as "to provide the nation with a powerful naval air force, especially seaplanes, capable of flying long distances and with large freight capacity."

Within the last six months the Japanese have acquired two each of the following types of planes: Rochbachs super-seaplanes (the most powerful hitherto devised) and Neuport types 21 and 29. Three each of the following types: Salmson and Caproni giant, and Farman type, 50. They have acquired six of the latest "Goliath" super-seaplanes. Rochbach and Caproni giants are being manufactured on a large scale in Japan.

Urges Further Investigation.

Orders for naval aircraft are being placed as much as possible in Germany, Italy, or England. In that order. Orders for land planes are placed principally in France, but also in Italy.

The reports conclude with a statement that further investigation should be made as the agents who prepared the report are convinced that Japan in preparing some military action in the Orient, which affects France in its wide interest in China, Siam, and Indo China. No mention of the United States is made, as the report deals exclusively with the Japanese preparations from the viewpoint of the interest of France.

WALSH REVIVES $10,000,000 'SLUSH' CHARGE

5 Witnesses Called to Washington.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Senator William E. Borah's campaign fund investigation committee decided last night to open sessions in Washington next Tuesday with the examination of witnesses from Philadelphia whose names were given to the committee by Attorney Frank P. Walsh, counsel for Senator La Follette.

This will be followed by the calling of other witnesses from the east, including Samuel Gompers and officials of the American Federation of Labor, who have been collecting special funds for La Follette; Clem Shaver and James W. Gerard, chairman and treasurer, respectively, of the Democratic national committee, and T. V. O'Connor, vice chairman of the United States shipping board, who has made charges that La Follette was receiving money from Russian soviet sources.

Investigate La Follette's Charge.

"This should reveal whether or not a conspiracy exists such as alleged by Senator La Follette," said Chairman Borah last night. "We consider it our duty to go ahead."

Mr. Walsh occupied the day's session at the Federal building with reading of letters and his own statement, on behalf of Senator La Follette, in which he sought to show that the Republicans of the nation may now be collecting between $10,000,000 and $12,000,000 for the purpose of electing Coolidge and Dawes.

His evidence was intended to show extra solicitations of money and expenditures outside of the budget of $3,000,000 which Chairman William M. Butler had explained to the committee.

"We know what the developments were in the Newberry case," said Mr. Walsh. "We know what was done with the money and Senator La Follette will not be terrorized with the thought that it is a reflection on the voter."

Witnesses to Be Called.

He announced that Attorney Samuel Untermeyer of New York would be associated with him on the cross-examination of witnesses.

The first witnesses to be subpenaed for the Washington session are:

JOSEPH R. GRUNDY of Bristol, Pa., president of the Manufacturers' association of that state, author of strong letters soliciting money, perusal of which first aroused the ire of Senator La Follette in this matter.

EDWARD T. STOTESBURY, said to be Philadelphia's wealthiest man, a partner of J. P. Morgan & Co., whose name appears on the letter head of the "Ways and Means committee for the Republican national committee of Pennsylvania," in the Grundy letters.

CHESTER W. HILL of Philadelphia, secretary of the same committee.

NATHAN T. FOLWELL, president of the Manufacturers' club of Philadelphia.

SAMUEL M. VAUCLAIN, president of the Baldwin Locomotive works.

Alleges Three Big Funds.

Mr. Walsh told the committee that he would show the collection of three big funds, one the regular fund of the national committee, a second fund by the bankers, and a third fund by the manufacturers and business men.

The two latter funds are to be used specifically against La Follette, according to the Walsh statement.

"What of it?" asked an official of the Republican national committee last night. "Is it a crime for business men to combine to raise money to defeat a movement which they consider a distinct menace to the country, and no crime for the garment workers to be assessed and the railroad men to be taxed, and the La Follette organizations in several ways to scrape money for their purposes. The conservatives have as much right to back up their opinions as the radicals."

G. O. P. Officials Unmoved.

Republican officials gave little attention to this latest campaign move of the La Follette group.

One specific charge made by Mr. Walsh, on behalf of his latest client, did not stand long. The Kansas City attorney, who defended the "Rebels" at St. Joseph, Mich., said to the committee:

"Senator La Follette had been advised that at a meeting of the National Bankers' convention in Chicago a few days ago a speech was made requesting that all trust companies be requested to give one-twentieth of 1 per cent of their capital; and the national banks one-tenth of 1 per cent of their capital, as contributions to fight La Follette in the west.

"Edward T. Stotesbury was made chairman of the committee to collect the money. Senator La Follette asked me to ask the committee to subpoena Mr. Stotesbury when Grundy was subpoenaed."

Reynolds Makes Hot Reply.

To this charge, George M. Reynolds, former president of the Bankers' association, chairman of the board of the Continental and Commercial National bank, said:

"It is a downright and damnable lie, this charge that the American Bankers' association levied on its membership for political funds. I know this charge is absolutely untrue. No one in the association ever dreamed of such a political move. It would be impossible, even if proposed.

"The membership of the association embraces bankers of all political faiths. Hence no one could think of such a thing as levying assessments for political funds for any party, candidate, or group of candidates."

Brings in a Banker.

Later in his story Mr. Walsh sought to corroborate this Chicago rumor by reading letters showing that a Greater New York contributors' committee was organized in New York among the bankers, with George W. Simmons, vice president of the Mechanics and Metals bank, as chairman. This is said to have been a nonpartisan movement to defeat La Follette.

Just for good political measure, Mr. Walsh jumped on William V. Hodges, treasurer of the Republican national committee.

"Senator La Follette asks me to say to this committee that more than a year and a half ago there was a resolution introduced into the senate to inquire into the rapid and excessive elevation in the price of sugar," said Mr. Walsh. "The economists at that time gave their opinion that, allowing everything for legitimate profit, cost of production, and labor, the price of sugar had been advanced so much that the excess amounted to $80 a year for every family in the United States.

Struggle Over Sugar Tariff.

"In response to that resolution investigations were begun by the department of justice and by the tariff commission. Nothing came out of the investigation of the department of justice, so far as we have been able to find.

"About three months ago a report was made, after a bitter struggle in the tariff commission, to the President of the United States, calling his attention to the fact that there was an abuse here that should be corrected by him under the elastic provisions of that act. No action has been taken by the President upon that. [This is the report which the President tucked under his arm when he went to Plymouth on his July vacation, and upon which he said he would render a judicial rather than a political decision.]

Connected with Sugar Lobby?

"Senator La Follette says that the treasurer of the Republican National committee, William V. Hodges, is the paid representative, or was at the time he became treasurer, of the sugar interests in Washington, and appeared before the tariff commission, and also did other work with members of the tariff commission and others interested to keep up the price of sugar.

"The mere fact that he is treasurer of a political party with this matter still under advisement by the President is a scandal of national proportions in itself, and he [Senator La Follette] would like to have the opportunity to have his counsel cross-examine Mr. Hodges and lead up to what he is getting his contributions. And he says it is a great part of the duty of this committee in developing, if it be a fact, that this is a slush fund, to show the benefits, if any, derived by these great contributors from government privilege, or from matters that may become matters of governmental action."

Senator Borah said that Mr. Hodges would not be called again to the stand for the present.

Grundy Letters Read.

Mr. Walsh first took up with the committee the Grundy letters, presenting them all in the record as they appear under the dates of Sept. 19, 24, and 29, Oct. 2 and Oct. 9. The letters are solicitations for funds. What Mr. Walsh considers the most important evidence of this feature of his case is found in a letter addressed to Dr. William J. Rouse of Philadelphia, in which Mr. Grundy states:

"Several letters have been sent to you emphasizing some of the issues of this campaign. Pennsylvanians have too much at stake to be indifferent. Our thirty-eight electoral votes may be safe for Coolidge and Dawes, but our money and energy must be given to help carry doubtful states and doubtful congressional districts."

"I understand," Mr. Walsh commented, "there is some question as to where this money was to be used. We propose to show by the correspondence which has been intercepted or turned over to us by those who did not agree with this way of running our government, that the effort is being made directly to carry the northwestern, western and southwestern states, and to carry them with the money collected by the beneficiaries of the present business combinations and, as we will show later on, by the very money of the farmers in these states that is in the banks in the city of New York today."

Peril Not Imaginary.

Mr. Walsh then continued reading from the letter:

"The Republican national committee has asked and appointed me to raise every possible dollar in Pennsylvania, outside of the Pittsburgh district. Will you send all you can? Not a day should be lost. Our country, our government, our institutions and industries are in peril—a real peril, not an imaginary one.

"It's Coolidge or Bryan and Bryan will have to pay his indebtedness to La Follette. I appeal to your patriotism. Let me have the largest contribution you can spare. We are all making sacrifices."

A notation at the foot of the letter states:

"The above committee is the only agency authorized by the Republican national committee to solicit campaign contributions for it in eastern Pennsylvania."

Mr. Walsh termed the letters of Grundy "the most brazen, the most amazing piece of materialism that has ever come into politics in our country.

In another letter Mr. Grundy wrote:

"This state and city are strongly opposed to all that Senator La Follette stands for, but there are a few danger spots in the northwest, states where the voters have been misled, where the issues have been misrepresented, where facts have been distorted, and where prejudice and self-interest rather than reason and broad patriotism have been appealed to."

Republican Record Cited.

The other letters are more general appeals, addressed to "Citizens of Pennsylvania," setting forth the accomplishments of the Republican administration, particularly the work of Secretary Mellon. One letter that aroused Senator La Follette states:

"Is it not time that we, as Pennsylvanians, look the political situation squarely in the face and call things by their right name?

"We have in La Follette and Wheeler a Lenin and Trotzky, with a formidable band of followers made up of the vicious, ignorant, and discontented element, openly organized for battle.

"They will likely cast millions of votes next November, perhaps enough to defeat the Republican party. There is little or no chance of Davis being elected. Without a majority for any party in either the electoral college or the house of representatives, Charles W. Bryan would be elected Vice President by the senate and become President of the United States on the 4th of March.

"Seats in the Saddle."

"That means W. J. Bryan for secretary of state, God only knows who for secretary of the treasury, and other cabinet positions, and some radical for secretary of labor. It would mean quick restoration of the Underwood-Simmons tariff, followed by general unemployment and stagnation of business. The south would be in the saddle, with the radicals riding closely behind.

"The consequence would be felt in every activity of our business and public affairs. There would be all sorts of disturbances in our foreign relations and our domestic industry would immediately be so weighted down as to result in a large governmental deficit, with a consequent increase in taxation.

"We need only the familiar examples of history to admonish us that we would not be far removed from the disaster, devastation, and bloodshed that have attended other similar uprisings.

"Even in our own times we have before us the experiences of Russia and other European countries which have been overrun or threatened by the Red menace. Let us have no hallucinations about the conditions we are confronting.

"The defeat of Coolidge means a long stride toward national disintegration and ruin.

"Are we going to ignore the gravity of the situation, or shall we meet it by educating the ignorant, improving the condition of the discontented, and thwarting the activities of vicious demagogues? Surely we should be moved to adopt measures, immediate and strong, which an enlightened self-interest suggests."

Sent to Government Beneficiaries.

Mr. Walsh said that the evidence would develop that the Grundy letters were sent to a list of government beneficiaries.

Mr. Walsh at this point asked that W. G. Gaither of Washington, D. C., member of the ways and means committee for the district, be subpoenaed to explain his methods of solicitation. He next read letters sent out by George W. Simmons of the Mechanics and Metals bank, in which it was stated in one point of the argument that Mr. Bryan would be elected President if the La Follette plan succeeded. A paragraph to which attention was directed, read:

"As a business proposition, your associates should contribute liberally, almost regardless of party affiliations, to prevent the success of this movement, which is an avowed attack on the Constitution, would place the Supreme court at the mercy of the political whims of congress, and would elect Supreme court judges by politics."

Cites Kansas City Collection.

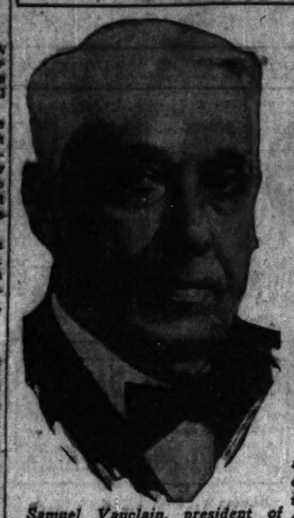
Mr. Walsh then switched to Kansas City and said that Joseph B. Shannon, Democratic attorney of that city (said to be an intimate friend of Mr. Walsh) had informed him that two special funds were being collected in that city for the Republicans. He named John T. Kennedy as the collector for one fund, and J. W. Perry, a banker, as collector for another fund. He had heard that $78,000 was raised in one hour.

A great deal of the solicitation, Mr. Walsh said, was being done by wire, and he asked that the Western Union and Postal officials be subpoenaed to produce telegrams.

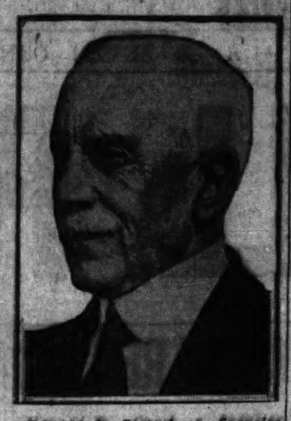
Mr. Walsh called attention to another avenue of propaganda and expenditure, the communication broadcast by G. Franklin Reem, president of the American Economic institute, which led Mr. Walsh to make a speech on railroads and strikes and section hands' wages.

Referring to railroad propaganda, Mr. Walsh asked that W. W. Atterbury, vice president of the Pennsylvania, be called to explain placing of campaign material on dining car menus.

CALLED IN "SLUSH" INQUIRY



Samuel Vauclain, president of the Baldwin Locomotive company, will be summoned before the senate committee investigating campaign expenses.



Edward D. Stotesbury, financier and chairman of a campaign fund committee, will also be subpoenaed to testify in Washington regarding collections.

DEMOCRATS HAVE $300,000

Washington, D. C., Oct. 18.—The campaign fund raised by the Democratic party to date was given as $300,000 in a statement issued today by the Democratic national committee.

The statement declared it was the expectation to increase this amount to $1,500,000 "at the outside." No details of collections or expenditures were given.

Coupled with the announcement was comment on the Republican collections as shown by testimony before the senate campaign expenditures committee in Chicago, including a list of the corporations with which some of the heaviest Republican contributors are connected.

Cite Coolidge's Statement.

Reference also was made to the White House announcement of yesterday that President Coolidge was gratified at the manner in which the financial affairs of the Republican campaign had been conducted. The Democratic statement then called attention to the circular soliciting Republican donations recently circulated in Massachusetts, and continued:

"Is it to place his seal of approval on this clear evasion of the spirit of the law that President Coolidge breaks his wonted silence?

"Is it upon the shaking-down of a Colorado beet sugar corporation, through the $10,000 contribution by the president, A. E. Carlton, that Mr. Coolidge sets his seal of approval?

President of Sugar Company.

The statement then says that Mr. Carlton is president of the Holly Sugar corporation, which owns four beet sugar factories in California, three in Colorado and one in Wyoming, and that William V. Hodges, treasurer of the Republican national committee, is general counsel for the Holly Sugar corporation.

NEW INVENTION SAVES $4.50 TON ON COAL.

Chicago.—What is said will revolutionize the heating problem and will mean a substantial saving on coal for the public is a recent invention controlled by B. Z. Pearson, 135 E. Superior street, Chicago, Illinois, which is a perfected coal and labor saving device for hot air furnaces, stoves, and kitchen ranges. This coal saver will eliminate furnace care one-third and dust and clinkers as well. So sure is he of the absolute success of this invention that he will guarantee at least 25% saving on coal. Some save as much as 50%. Write the inventor today for his special trial offer and how you can make this tremendous saving in coal. Agents wanted everywhere.—Adv.

BOB JUST A BOOB FOR WALL STREET, FORD DECLARES

Played "Interests" Game on Shoals, He Claims.

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 18.—[Special.]—Henry Ford, scanning the national political situation said today that he considered Senator Robert M. La Follette "a conscious or unconscious tool of Wall street," and declared that nothing had occurred to change his opinion that President Coolidge should be elected next month.

He also said that the Muscle Shoals controversy was closed and that under no circumstances would the Ford company reopen negotiations for the property.

Sure Cal's Going to Win.

Of the presidential situation Mr. Ford said: "I have not changed a particle in my views of Calvin Coolidge. I do not know Mr. Davis but I do know that President Coolidge comes from a kind of Puritan stock that can do its own thinking. He knows the undercurrents of our national life and he has an invaluable gift for knowing when to say 'no.'"

Mr. Ford blames Wall street for the Muscle Shoals opposition which resulted in formal withdrawal of the company's offer for the property.

"Wall street," he said, "doesn't care to have the power trusts' stranglehold broken. If we had obtained Muscle Shoals we quickly would have exposed the present profiteering and greatly reduced the cost of power."

If the presidential election is thrown into congress, Ford said he thought Wall street had sufficient control of that body to dictate the next President.

Played Wall Street's Game.

"La Follette and other senators who fought Muscle Shoals played Wall street's game, knowingly or unknowingly," he said. "Wall street wants it for exploitation. It doesn't want the people to know the actual cost of power. I don't say that La Follette knowingly is Wall street's candidate. I do say he is acceptable to them. I think La Follette is honest, but sentiment for him is subsiding."

Sorry, Try Again, Says Cal.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 18.—Official withdrawal of Henry Ford's Muscle Shoals offer was announced by the White House today. Copies of a letter from Mr. Ford to President Coolidge and of the President's reply were made public.

The President told the Detroit manufacturer he could understand how he might feel justified in withdrawing his offer. The President expressed the hope, however, that Mr. Ford would renew his interest in the project if congress concluded to restore the property to private ownership.

DILLON OUT TO TAKE CULLERTON PENSION POST

JOHN P. DILLON, past president

John P. Dillon, assistant chief inspector in the bureau of streets and a city employe for twenty-eight years, is a leading candidate to succeed John P. Cullerton, former fire commissioner, as a trustee of the municipal employes' pension fund. The election of the trustees will be held next Saturday in the offices of the election commissioners in the city hall.

Mr. Dillon, a and charter member of the street and public utility inspectors' union, is generally credited with authorship of the 1921 statutes governing the Chicago municipal employes and policemen's pension funds. He also wrote the Chicago park employes' pension fund law, and, as technical adviser to the Milwaukee pension committee, aided in the preparation of laws providing pensions for the police and firemen of that city.

Four thousand of the 9,000 contributors to the municipal employes' pension fund are said to have petitioned Mr. Dillon to seek election as a trustee of the fund.

DEVER MESSAGE ASKS COUNCIL TO PICK CAR PLAN

Tells Efforts to Lessen Traffic Jam.

Prompt action on one of the several suggested solutions of Chicago's traction problem, which will be given the city council next Wednesday, is urged in Mayor Dever's annual message to the aldermen, made public last night. The message is a summary of departmental progress for the year. It points to a considerable reduction in operating costs without a sacrifice to the taxpayers.

In another communication to be given the aldermen on Wednesday the mayor will review his fruitless attempts to negotiate a traction plan acceptable to the officials, security owners and banker backers of the surface and elevated lines.

The traction message will outline financial details of the administration's alternative program for the construction of a municipally owned and operated competitive elevated-subway system, determined upon by the mayor and his advisers when their parleys with owners of existing facilities failed. Construction of an independent transportation system by assessment on benefited property will probably be recommended by the mayor.

"L" Offer In Too.

Routes and other engineering phases of the alternative program will be dealt with in a report to the council by Maj. R. F. Kelker Jr., engineer for the local transportation committee.

The administration plan will be accompanied by the offer of the Chicago Rapid Transit company to undertake subway construction as soon as authorized by the city as well as that company's application for franchises permitting the extension of elevated lines into now unserved areas at an estimated expenditure of $23,000,000.

"The situation now demands prompt and thorough study and consideration by your committee on local transportation," the mayor declares in the annual message, "so that its views, together with such recommendations as it may make, can be presented to your honorable body for consideration and action at the earliest possible moment."

Discuss Traffic Congestion.

The message recounts the steps taken recently to relieve loop traffic congestion, including the elimination of vehicular left hand turns the rerouting of street cars and motor busses reducing the number of their left hand turns in the downtown district from twenty-five to five, and the establishment of safety loading zones for the protection of street car passengers and the acceleration of vehicular traffic.

Eight and one-half miles of street car line extensions will have been completed before the end of the year, according to the message, a greater total mileage of extensions than was constructed during five previous years.

The widening and double decking of South Water street from the Michigan avenue link bridge to Washington street is under way and will be completed within thirty months, the message predicts. Substantial progress is being made, the mayor reports, by the railroads now housed in the La Salle street, Dearborn street and Grand Central stations toward plans for consolidation of their passenger and freight facilities in a union terminal.

River Straightening Contemplated.

"All of the tentative plans perpared and considered by the engineering commission have as a basis the straightening of the Chicago river; one union passenger station to replace the present three stations in the area; the opening of additional streets; the release of part of the railroad holdings and the commercial development of property over the tracks and other facilities of the railroads," the message says.

Legal obstacles to the development of an industrial harbor in Lake Calumet have been cleared away and it only remains for the city council to determine whether the project shall be undertaken by the city or by private enterprise, according to the message.

Briefly, the message records the accomplishments of major developments of municipal activity as follows:

The bureau of engineering has laid 99,814 feet or 56.78 miles of new water pipe, installed 927 new fire hydrants, made 4,942 water meter connections and installed 10,735 new taps during the year. More than 38,300 water meters will be in service before the end of the year.

During the first eight months of the year, the ten larger water pumping stations pumped 205,221.66 million gallons of water, an average of 25,655.7 million gallons a month. The total pumpage of 1924 exceeded that of 1923 by 4,900 million gallons.

Water Receipts Increase.

The bureau of water reports that based upon the receipts of the first nine months of this year, the gross receipts of the bureau for the entire year will surpass that of 1923 by approximately $500,000.

The board of local improvements during the last nine months has held hearings on public improvements involving the expenditure of $25,000,000, 30 per cent in excess of the entire amount of work done by the board in 1923.

Till Oct. 1 there had been completed by or under the supervision of the board forty miles of sewers at a cost of $1,260,000; thirteen miles of house drains at a cost of $61,967; 172 miles of sidewalks at a cost of $1,613,550, and approximately 1,500,000 square yards, the equivalent of 100 miles, of paving at a cost of $2,361,940.

Police Arrest 170,283.

The police department made 170,283 arrests during the last nine months and recovered stolen property valued at $6,313,712.74 for its owners. Its activities in the suppression of illegal liquor sales, vice and gambling has caused a noticeable decrease in crime, it is asserted. Nearly all of the 6,000 speakeasie resorts which prospered a few months ago have been wiped out, the message declares.

Revenue for the city from an unexpected source was found in the municipal reference library, which produced a net profit for the nine months of $1,296 from the sale of pamphlets containing copies of city ordinances, reports and departmental codes.

HEARING "SLUSH FUND" CHARGES

Frank Walsh (extreme right), representing La Follette, is shown presenting his charges against the G. O. P. to the senatorial subcommittee consisting of (left to right) Senators Bayard, Delaware; Caraway, Arkansas; Borah of Idaho, chairman, and Shipstead, Minnesota. John M. Nelson, La Follette's campaign manager, is at the far end of the table.

CHINESE VILLAGE WON AND LOST 5 TIMES IN BATTLE

Hand to Hand Fights Mark Struggle.

BY CHARLES DAILEY.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune.]

CHINWANTAO, headquarters Peking armies on battlefront, Oct. 16.—(By Courier to Tientsin, Oct. 18.)—The ten day battle for the possession of Chiumen pass was resumed more vigorously than ever at midnight tonight after a twelve hour truce for the removal of the dead and seriously wounded from the battlefield which had not been cleared for forty-eight hours.

There were so many casualties that there were not sufficient doctors to care for them. Most of the wounded suffered from shrapnel, high explosives, and machine gun fire. The rifle casualties were few.

Continuous trains with wounded are moving south, many going as far as Paoting-fu, eighty miles south of Peking, since all hospitals to the east of this are filled. It is impossible to estimate the number of casualties, but they probably total 10,000. Most of those hurt are now becoming infected even before entrainment, owing to the inability to give them even first aid.

Advantage Now with Chang.

The developments of the last twenty-four hours apparently have removed for the time being the danger of Gen. Wu Pei-fu having to remove his Peking forces from Chinwangtao, for which preparations were being made two days ago, although he has not been able to drive the Manchurian forces back through the pass.

On the result of the battle now going on depends the future zone of operations. While the momentary advantage remains with Gen. Chang Tso-lin the great amount of reinforcements arriving forecasts a drive by Gen. Wu to regain the pass and to assume the offensive on theplains beyond the great wall.

May Decide War.

Unquestionably the conflict now going on is the greatest battle of modern China and may decide the fate of the war. THE TRIBUNE'S correspondent has been on the front since the arrival of Gen. Wu Sunday morning, during which he has been at headquarters twice when it was attacked by Mukden airmen.

Following three days of almost hand to hand fighting in the valley inside Chiumen, the strategic village of Hsimenchih, which changed hands five times, was shelled. This village is only ten miles north of Chinwangtao and its outskirts are held by the Peking troops.

Retakes Town at Heavy Cost.

When the troops of Tsao Ying, the president's brother, were driven from the village on Tuesday, retiring upon Liuchang, eight miles north of Chinwangtao, all preparations were made for a retirement on Changtao, about twenty-five miles to the west. But Gen. Wu threw in new divisions and retook Hsimenchih at frightful cost although unable to advance farther.

CHI TELLS PLANS

BY JOHN POWELL.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune.]

SHANGHAI, Oct. 18.—Gen. Chi Haieh-yuan, commander of the victorious Kiang-su forces of the central government, arrived in a small village about five miles from the city this afternoon, and was interviewed there by THE TRIBUNE correspondent. He said his chief object in starting and prosecuting the war with Chekiang province was to end opium and arms smuggling in the Shanghai district. Now that the major object had been accomplished, he promised a clean administration for this part of China.

Gen. Chi has been prevented from entering the city by about 15,000 defeated Chekiang troops, still bearing arms, who are massed on the railroad near the borders of the metropolis. These troops agreed today to surrender if paid $20 each.

Gen. Chi also said that as soon as peace was finally established he hoped to proceed with the Hwai valley conservation project in Kiangsu province, which has largely been responsible for famines in eastern China and which was considered in the American congress this year when the remission of the Boxer indemnity bill was passed.

PAY ROLL BANDITS GET $2,300.

OTTUMWA, Ia., Oct. 18.—John Quinn, clerk in a drug store, was held up and robbed of $2,300 today as he stepped from a car in front of the store on his return from a bank.

TRIBUNE WILL AID IN RAISING FUND FOR CHURCH THAT BURNED

At the request of the Rev. Carl Tanner, pastor of the Greater Bethel A. M. E. church at 42d street and Grand boulevard, one of the largest Negro churches in the world, whose building was destroyed by a mysterious fire Friday night, THE TRIBUNE will receive and acknowledge contributions for the rebuilding of the church.

The fund is already under way. Mayor Dever, in addition to ordering a special inquiry by Corporation Counsel Busch and Fire Commissioner Connery into the cause of the fire, sent the Rev. Tanner his personal check for $100. Gorge E. Brennah and P. A. Nash, who were told of the mayor's gift, followed with their checks for similar amounts, and it has been announced that United States Senator Medill McCormick, who is out of the city, will make a contribution upon his return.

A group of detectives are investigating the matter of responsibility for the fire.

T. R. CRAMS 72 SPEECHES INTO CAMPAIGN WEEK

Auburn, N. Y., Oct. 18.—Theodore Roosevelt, Republican nominee for governor, finished a week of campaigning with a record of seventy-two speeches when he spoke here tonight. He has made 146 addresses since he opened his campaign.

Though there were already eighteen stops on his program for today, Col. Roosevelt added one by paying a visit to the town of Perry.

He was behind his schedule when near the end of the day and had to cut his last few speeches to three minutes each.

Col. Roosevelt took no especially new lines in his talks today, reiterating his warning that "the principal object behind much of their (the Democrats) legislation is to build up the Tammany machine in this state."

At Avon a man in the crowd shouted, "Turn around so we can see you," and the nominee replied:

"I don't lay any claim to being handsome, but I do lay claim to packing a punch and being square."

STONE KLANSMEN AFTER BIG MEET IN WORCESTER

Worcester, Mass., Oct. 19.—A mob of 800 in the business center of the city early this morning stoned automobiles and beat up members of the Ku Klux Klan, who had been attending a gathering of the organization here. The attacks followed a meeting of 10,000 klansmen in the New England fair grounds. Outside the grounds a crowd collected and threats were made.

Guarded by a reserve force of thirty policemen and accompanied on a part of their way by motorcycle officers, the klansmen left the field with only a few scattered cases of stone throwing reported. At midnight the inclosure was emptied.

Munding, Slayer, Is Sued on $3,000 Promissory Notes

A suit to recover $3,000 said to be due on promissory notes and interest was filed yesterday against George Munding, now in jail at Wheaton in connection with the recent murder of Mrs. Julia Douglas, wealthy Hinsdale widow. The suit is brought by Herman C. Maehler, 4027 Irving Park boulevard.

SHOT IN FIGHT OVER GIRL.

Isaac McNee, 35 years old, colored, 644 West 13th street, was shot last night as he watched several young colored men fight over a girl in front of 639 West 13th street. The girl was Lillian Hilson, colored, 19 years old, and she admitted to the police that she had caused the trouble.

HART AND BRIDE HOPE THEY WILL BE FORGOT NOW

Hall-Quest's Friends Censure Pittsburgh U.

Hopeful that now he and his new bride will be forgot by the press and public, Frederick W. Hart returned yesterday to Chicago with Mrs. Hart, the former Shirley K. Hall-Quest.

Mr. Hart received interviewers, but told them that as usual he had "nothing to say." He wants only an opportunity to devote himself to his profession as a certified public accountant.

Mrs. Hart Taking Rest.

Tired from nervous strain and traveling, Mrs. Hart is in seclusion in Chicago and no one is to know where she is staying, her husband said. Both are glad to have the trying situation at an end.

Meanwhile rumors were current that the students of the University of Pittsburgh were taking steps to make a formal demand on the school trustees immediately to reinstate Dr. Alfred Lawrence Hall-Quest, whose resignation was asked and accepted, because of the publicity following his divorce.

Professor's Lawyer Talks.

John A. Massen, Chicago counsel for Dr. Hall-Quest, returned yesterday morning from Pittsburgh. He declared steps were being taken to secure the professor's rights. Intimations were that the action of the school body in asking Dr. Hall-Quest's resignation was not taken by the entire board of trustees, which includes Andrew Mellon, secretary of the treasury; Gov. Gifford Pinchot, Senator David A. Reed, and many other distinguished men.

Telegrams of indignation at the university's stand continued to reach Dr. Hall-Quest, one of them from W. C. Bagley, head of the teachers' college at Columbia university.

"I cannot understand why your resignation should have been either expected or accepted," Prof. Bagley wrote. "Rest assured that we will do all possible to aid you."

JUSSERAND TO DELAY HANDING OVER ENVOYSHIP

Washington, D. C., Oct. 18.—(By the Associated Press.)—The name of Emile Daeschner has been submitted to the Washington government by the French embassy here as the successor for Jules Jusserand as French ambassador.

The announcement came as a surprise in diplomatic circles here. It had been understood that M. Jusserand on his recent trip to France on leave of absence was given the impression by French foreign office officials that he would not be relieved at present.

Since the present ambassador, who has served twenty-one years in Washington, has personal interests in this country which it will take time to close up, it is not expected that M. Daeschner will succeed him for a month or two.

FORMER SALOON MAN'S BODY FOUND.

The body of a man taken out of the lake near the foot of Barry avenue with a bullet wound in the chest was identified as that of Gustav Johnson, a former saloonkeeper, 45 years old, 3104 North Robey street. He was despondent over financial trouble.

TITLE "MRS." MAY BAR TWO N. Y. WOMEN FROM PRESIDENTIAL TICKET

New York, Oct. 18.—[Special.]—The selection of women presidential electors for a place on the ballots to be cast next month is responsible for a novel little tangle in practical politics, etiquette and law, which confronts the Democratic state committee today.

The board of elections here, it is learned, has filed protests against placing the names of Mrs. Martin Vogel and Mrs. Eleanor Morgenthau on the ballots for Nov. 4, following their selection as presidential electors by the state Democratic convention.

It's all because the three letters, indicating their married status, have been included in the names to be placed on the ballots. This title is illegal, in the opinion of John E. Voorhis, president of the board of elections, inasmuch as no person may register either as Mr. and Mrs.

Mrs. Vogel is the wife of Martin Vogel, well known Democrat, who was assistant treasurer of the United States in charge of the subtreasury here during the Wilson administration. Mrs. Morgenthau is the daughter-in-law of Henry Morgenthau, former ambassador to Turkey.

"We have never had a 'Mrs.' name on the ballot before, and I believe it is illegal," Mr. Voorhis said today.

WIFE MADE HIM DISMISS PRETTY CLERKS, HE SAYS

His wife demanded that he discharge all the pretty girls in his employ, Harry J. Schwartz, genral manager of a large loop shop, complained in his bill for divorce from Mrs. Florence Schwartz, 5612 South Park avenue, which he filed yesterday.

Mrs. Schwartz also threatened to kill him with a dagger while he slept, the bill alleges, and he was forced to hide in his bedroom all night.

Again, Schwartz declares, she struck him with a nursing bottle after accusing him of having gone to a dance with another woman. Once she threatened to kill him with a revolver, according to Schwartz, who said he threw the gun out of the window.

PICKPOCKETS AID FAKE PASSPORT BUREAU OF REDS

Berlin Police Reveal How Soviets Enter U. S.

BY GEORGE SELDES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BERLIN, Oct. 18.—The Berlin police today placed on exhibition everything found in the Russo-German Communist party's false passport factory. This evidence proves conclusively that the Communist party is supplying all credentials for bolshevik agents to operate in America and other countries. Lists found show that 622 bolshevik agents were sent abroad to agitate a revolution since the passport factory was established.

The police also established the fact that the Communist party had a pickpocket department, as with the American passports went letters, birth certificates, Moose, Ku Klux Klan, and other identification papers from stolen pocketbooks. The soviet agents either went to America with the full contents of the stolen pocketbooks, including the passports, or with true passports upon which photographs of bolsheviks had been pasted.

Find Yanks' Passports.

Among the American passports on view today were those of Leonard Mins of Yonkers and Hugo and Theresa Petro of Baltimore. Mr. Mins' passport was No. 85531, and the Petro passport was No. 428377. Among the Petres' stolen effects was a receipt from the steamship Lapland for a ticket on Aug. 28. Both passports were signed by Secretary of State Hughes.

Proof was found that the Communist party not only violates the American immigration law, but all those given passports were Soviet agents, now operating in America. In addition to American rubber visa stamps were found real letters bearing the signatures of Secretary of State Hughes and the local consul general, Mr. Coffin.

Assume New Identities.

Another interesting feature, the police say, was the system of training Bolshevik agents to assume the personality of the persons whose false passports they carried. Thus, when birth, vaccination, marriage certificates or hunting licenses were supplied, the communist officials also gave a history from birth to the present, giving incidents and accidents so the agents could prove a complete alibi should anything be suspected. This was useful in European transit, where suspects sometimes were held up a day or two while the police made inquiries concerning the persons named on the passports.

MAYBE YOU'LL HAVE TO SERVE AS APPRENTICE

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 18.—[Special.]—Parenthood will soon have to be licensed just as today plumbers and barbers must obtain licenses to certify they are capable of properly discharging their duties in their trades, according to Dr. Hornell Hart, professor of social economy in Bryn Mawr college.

Dr. Hart declared that such a method of obtaining "skilled parents" would soon have to be resorted to, improbable as it may seem now, in an address today.

"The race is fast going down hill," Dr. Hart said, "and the deterioration cannot be checked until scientific methods of reproducing the race are resorted to. As it is now persons least able, intellectually and materially, to provide for children are having 'rafts of them,' and persons qualified to surround their children with the proper environment are having very few."

SEEK NEW YORK MAN HERE.

Chicago police have been asked to search for Jacob Batherman, who disappeared from his home in New York City last month. Any one knowing his whereabouts is asked to write to his son, Samuel Batherman, 33 Avenue D, New York.

41 WOMEN GO ON BRITISH TICKETS FOR PARLIAMENT

All Face Battles to Win Seats.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, Oct. 18.—Nominations were made today of candidates for all constituencies of Great Britain and northern Ireland for the coming election. Fifty-four members of the new parliament are returned unopposed. Of these thirty-three are Conservatives, ten Liberals, ten Laborites, and one Irish Nationalist, T. P. O'Connor, who sits for the Liverpool division, where the population is overwhelmingly Irish.

Among the candidates nominated today forty-one are women, of whom twelve are Conservatives, seven Liberals, twenty-one Laborites, and one Independent. All these are fighting for seats. There are only sixty seats out of a total of 615 where there are triangular contests.

Liberals Dislike Bargain.

There is increasing evidence of the Liberals' unhappiness about the deal with the Conservatives, and indications are that the Liberal managers will not be able to deliver their vote.

MacCallum Scott, formerly the Liberal whip, in a letter in the Times today denounces the fusion and protests against the Liberals' opposition to the Russian treaty and predicts a Liberal debacle. Lord Inchcape, great Liberal ship owner, writes in a similar strain.

Expect Little Change.

Election insurances by Lloyds today indicate the opinion of experts that there will be no great change in the new parliament.

$5,600 IN PRIZES OFFERED AT ART SHOW HERE OCT. 30

Preparations are being made at the Art institute for the thirty-seventh annual exhibition of American paintings and sculpture which will open in the institute on Oct. 30. The event is considered the biggest of the year in Chicago art circles.

Nine prizes will be awarded amounting in all to $5,600. Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Logan have offered a special prize of a medal and $1,000 for the best portrait. In 1923 seventy paintings, nine pieces of sculpture, 268 prints and 145 other objects of art were sold at the exhibition.

Through the efforts of the Friends of American Art 154 important pictures, thirteen pieces of sculpture and thirty prints have been added to the permanent collection of the institute. The organization formed for the purpose of encouraging American artists has expended $236,000 for paintings, sculpture and prints since its inception in 1910.

"MA" FERGUSON CAN HOLD OFFICE, HIGH COURT SAYS

Woman's Bondage Over, Opinion Declares.

Austin, Tex., Oct. 18.—[By the Associated Press.]—The last vestige of the ancient bar against women in office was swept away by the Texas Supreme court today in holding Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson of Temple, and all other women in the state eligible to elective positions.

Attempts to bring out of the dim past and establish as present day law the fragments of an old order were cast out by the highest court of the state, which pronounced women as independent entities on an equality with men.

Citizen Cannot Stop Her.

While holding that Mrs. Ferguson is qualified to vote, the court also held unconstitutional that part of the statute which seeks to confer on a private citizen the right to bring suit testing the qualifications of a candidate for governor. This right belongs to the legislature, the court said.

The court held that Mrs. Ferguson is not disqualified by her sex, by her married status, or by the fact that she is the wife of James E. Ferguson, impeached governor, who has been declared by the state senate to be ineligible henceforth to hold office in Texas.

Victory for All Women.

The decision is regarded as a complete victory, not only for Mrs. Ferguson, but for women throughout the land, as it was one of the first cases directly to test the effect of the suffrage amendments.

The suffrage amendments to the federal constitution and the state constitution were interpreted as giving women not only the right to vote, but also the right to hold office.

ENLISTED MEN TO PLAY FOOTBALL FOR "CAL'S CUP"

Army and Navy Gets New Prize from President.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 18.—[Special.]—"In the interest of good, clean, healthy recreation for the people of the entire country and to encourage and stimulate athletics among the enlisted men of the services," President Coolidge in an address of dedication today presented to the army and navy a cup to be contested for annually by two football teams from the ranks of the officers and enlisted men of the two forces comprising the national defense.

"I offer this cup, to be known as the 'President's cup,' for contest between football teams of the army and navy, from units or subdivisions of forces, under such terms as the secretary of war and the secretary of the navy may determine," the President said.

All Ranks to Participate.

"Provided, however, that the teams shall be composed of enlisted men and officers in about the same proportion as are officers and enlisted men in the services.

"I desire to mention the great benefits to mind and body that result from participation in good, clean, wholesome sport. The people of the United States have always been devoted to manly contests, and I know of no better way to give to them a true example of sport in its best form than to offer such a cup as this for a trophy to be contested for by the army and navy."

The first contest for the cup will take place on Nov. 22 at Griffith stadium, where the President witnessed the last two games of the world series. The two teams will be comprised of one officer and ten enlisted men.

Cup Is a Beautiful One.

The presentation of the cup took place today when Col. Clarence O. Sherhill, the President's aid, Lieutenant Commander H. V. Bryan, the athletic officer of the scouting fleet, and Maj. Paul W. Bade with an enlisted man of the army and the navy met the President to accept his trophy. The cup itself is of generous proportions, embossed in blue and gold and surmounted by the American eagle.

RICH MAN FOUND DECAPITATED; WOMEN SOUGHT

Pittsburgh, Oct. 18.—The headless and silken pajama clad body of John Lapaglia, wealthy Italian merchant, was found in his apartment today. The head had been severed by an axe and the assassin had carefully covered the body with silk bedclothes.

The police said that Lapaglia was the victim of Black Handers, bootleggers, or a woman. They are searching for two young women, said to have been frequent visitors to the apartment, and for the occupants of an automobile, bearing Ohio license plates.

ARMY CANCELS TROOPS' PART IN HAWAII WAR TEST

Navy Forces to Carry On Pacific Maneuvers.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 18.—The spring cruise of the battle fleet to Australia and the joint army and navy maneuvers at Hawaii are designed, it was learned today, to provide a capstone to a strategic study painstakingly erected by both services during the last three years.

The plans, as completed, show a radical change from those which were first outlined. An adverse opinion from another department of the government was understood to have led to the modification. It was said to have been based on the fear that the moral effect of the Washington conference disarmament agreement might be nullified if the proposed war games were staged in the Hawaiian sector so soon after the conference.

Troops Won't Be Sent.

Because of the change, the war department will not participate to the extent of sending troops, Secretary Weeks said today. There had been some discussion of the possibility that a test might be made of the speed and ability of the services to get troops to the Hawaiian islands, in connection with the naval cruise.

Drawn to furnish the basis for national defense provisions during the next decade, the maneuvers will comprise a theoretical attempt of an enemy force to seize the Hawaiian group as a first step in its eastern advance. The possibility of ejecting such a force before its position could be consolidated would be a corollary problem.

The battle fleet, augmented by certain portions of the scouting fleet in the Atlantic, will play the attacking rôle in the first phase, defense of the islands being left to the army garrison, the national guard and reserve and naval ships attached to the fourteenth district, which includes the islands. The marine corps also will participate to a degree not yet worked out.

Base at San Diego.

It was recalled, however, that an expeditionary base similar to the one on the Atlantic coast at Quantico recently was established at San Diego and concentration there of a special force inaugurated.

Under the plan originally proposed by navy experts, the program was to start the defense study at mid-Pacific in 1923 and work it back to the American coast, each intervening line of defense furnishing the location of a separate study. Now it is intended to start at the coast and work outward.

PLAN FETES FOR GOBS

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

SYDNEY, Oct. 18.—The American society of New South Wales already has prepared plans for the reception of officers and men from the ships of the American navy due in Australian waters next July. So that the crews may be relieved of unnecessary red tape and feel that the visit is of a friendly, individual character, the society has asked the navy department in Washington to permit it to establish an entertainment bureau. A lengthy program is being arranged, including dinners, river and land trips, and sporting contests.

Uptown Trade Show Is Closed; 200,000 Attend

The fourth annual exposition and trade display of the uptown Chicago Chamber of Commerce, which has been in progress in Broadway armory the last week, closed last night. A dance in the Butterfly room of the armory, attended by members of the executive committee, exhibitors and their friends, was the grand finale of the week's program. It was estimated by those in charge that more than 200,000 persons had attended the exposition.

The first of a series of noon meetings yesterday was well attended.

A. F. of L. Still Tries to Unionize Bank Employes

New York, Oct. 18.—[Special.]—A resumption of the efforts of the American Federation of Labor to unionize bank employés was called to the attention of several Wall street banks today. Court Denies Writ for 41 Negro Troopers in Prison

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 18.—The United States circuit court of appeals here today upheld the decision of Judge John C. Pollock of the United States district court at Leavenworth, Kans., in denying writs of habeas corpus to 41 Negro troopers of the 44th United States Infantry who were sentenced to life imprisonment by a general court-martial in December, 1917, for their part in a race riot at Fort Sam Houston, Texas, Aug. 23, 1917.

COOLIDGE CALLS HAMSTRINGING OF COURTS A PERIL

Optimistic Reports Come to White House.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 18.—President Coolidge believes the question of proposed limitation of powers of the United States Supreme court to be one of the main issues of the campaign and in a message to Charles Nagel of St. Louis, today urged that he speak "on the great constitutional issues that is so profoundly involved in this campaign." The President has opposed such a proposition in recent speeches.

Grateful for Support

Mr. Coolidge thanked Mr. Nagel, who was a member of President Taft's cabinet, for his declarations so far in the campaign, and also sent a message of appreciation to Sam Lazarus of St. Louis, who has been connected with the Democratic party there, for his support as reported recently.

Several callers bearing optimistic reports on the political outlook, were received today by the President, including R. C. Creager, Republican national committeeman for Texas, who said the party would show a "surprising" vote in the solid south this year. He also insisted Republicans have a "real, bonafide" chance to elect a governor of Texas against the opposition of "Ma" Ferguson, the Democratic candidate.

Sutherland Is an Optimist

Senator Cameron of Arizona told Mr. Coolidge the situation in the southwestern states was most satisfactory from a political standpoint. Howard Sutherland, former senator from West Virginia, called at the White House today after a visit to that state and declared Republicans would carry it.

Mr. Coolidge expects to go further into his program for agricultural relief at conferences next week with some farm leaders. Details of the conference he has proposed to call in connection with the investigation he has suggested through a special commission have not been finally worked out.

BOB ABANDONS WESTERN TOUR, GOES EAST AGAIN

Sioux Falls, S. D., Oct. 18.—[By the Associated Press.]—Determined to devote the last two weeks of the campaign to a swing through middle west and eastern states, instead of making a trip to the Pacific coast, Senator Robert M. La Follette rested here today. He intends to leave Sioux Falls tomorrow for Omaha, Neb., where he will speak Monday night.

From Omaha he will turn eastward for addresses in Rock Island, Ill., Tuesday night and Peoria, Ill., Wednesday night.

Tentative arrangements have been made for him to again invade Ohio, New York, Pennsylvania and probably Michigan and to address at least one meeting in New England, in all probability in Boston. Definite decision has been reached to have Mr. La Follette wind up his campaign two weeks from tonight in Cleveland.

Alluring

If a bank were to offer ten per cent interest on savings it would sound alluring but you would rightly doubt the advisability of depositing with it. Likewise when you entrust your vision to an optician select one that does not offer too much for too little.

TOMORROW SET ASIDE AS TAG DAY FOR CHILDREN

Mayor Dever Issues Formal Proclamation.

A proclamation was issued yesterday by Mayor Dever, setting tomorrow aside as Tag day. Representatives of the Chicago Children's Benefit league will collect money for the support of fifty charitable institutions. The proclamation indorses the work of the league, as benefiting all races and creeds, and the charities making the day's appeal, as being worthy of the generous contributions of the citizens of Chicago.

Police and city employes are asked to afford the women taking part in the work every assistance and courtesy.

The Demand Increases

For seventeen years one day annually has been given over to this tag day. Each year witnesses a larger demand upon the league's charities, it is explained, and this year the quota has been placed at $150,000, to be distributed among the following institutions:

Augustana Nursery, Bethesda Day nursery, Bethlehem crèche, Bohemian Orphans' Home, Catholic Social Center nursery, Central Baptist Children's Home, Charity Alliance, Chase House Day nursery, Chicago Foundlings' Home, Children's Receiving Home of the Lutheran Women's league, Children's South Side Free Dispensary, Danish Lutheran Orphans' Home, De Paul Day nursery, Emerson House Day nursery and kindergarten, Englewood Hospital Children's ward, Ephpheta School for Deaf, Erie Chapel Institute, Evangelical Lutheran Home Finding Society of Illinois, Evanston Day nursery, Garibaldi Institute Auxiliary, Illinois Children's Home and Aid society [aid department], Illinois Technical School for Colored Girls, Jackson Park Sanitarium and Stockyards Day nursery, Madonna Center and Day nursery, Margaret Etter crèche, Mathen Day nursery, and the Methodist Deaconess orphanage.

Others on the List.

Still others are the National Park Seminary Day nursery, Norwegian Lutheran Children's Home society, Olivet Institute, Outing Association for Crippled Children, Paulist Day nursery, Provident Hospital Children's ward, Resurrection nursery, Sarah Hackett Stevenson Memorial nursery, St. Anne's Day nursery, St. Columbkille's Day nursery, St. Elizabeth's Day nursery, St. Elizabeth's hospital, Children's ward, St. Joseph's Home for the Friendless, Children's department, St. Juliana's Day nursery, St. Margaret's home, St. Mary's Home for Children, St. Mary's of Nazareth Hospital Children's ward, St. Mary's Settlement Day nursery, South Chicago Day nursery, Wesley Memorial Hospital Children's ward, West End Catholic Woman's Club Day nursery, Woman's Auxiliary Board Presbyterian hospital, Women's and Children's hospital, Children's ward.

Kids' Charities Praised by Coolidge

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

October 6, 1924.

My dear Mrs. Frankenthal:

Thank you for your letter about the work of the Chicago Children's Benefit League.

At different times various of my friends have told me of the splendid work the League has been doing for the children of Chicago, and I am glad it is being continued so effectively.

You can be assured of my good wishes for your efforts in its behalf.

Most sincerely yours,

Calvin Coolidge

The Chicago Children's Benefit league tag day is tomorrow, and they hope to raise $150,000. Fifty charities will be benefited by this tag day. Above is President Coolidge's letter of indorsement.

Tag Day Today to Aid Disabled Polish War Vets

Mayor Dever, the city council, and the executive board and officers of the Alliance of Polish War Veterans all have sanctioned a tag day to be held today in thirty-two Chicago districts contiguous to the Polish churches in the city, for the benefit of disabled war veterans of Polish nationality. The day will also mark the opening of a drive for funds for these veterans, particularly those in need of hospital care, both mental and physical.

WALES' AMBITION IS TO DANCE AS WELL AS YANKEES

Ottawa, Ont., Oct. 18.—[Special.]—The Prince of Wales this afternoon confessed that he had an ambition; that while he supposed it might come as a shock to some, nevertheless the ambition remained and it is to be as good a dancer as any male in United States.

To Miss Elean Murdock, daughter of Canada's labor minister, who was the first Canadian girl to dance with the prince at the ball given in his honor by Lord and Lady Byng, the prince confided that one of his ambitions was to be a perfect dancer. "You dance just like an American," Miss Murdock told the prince.

"That's one of my ambitions," replied the prince, adding that he considered the message the most pleasant he had heard since his arrival in Canada. The prince will again be on United States soil on Tuesday afternoon and he announces that he hopes he will have plenty of dancing prior to sailing for home.

ELSIE CONDEMNS HIGHT; DEMANDS SEPARATE TRIAL

Mount Vernon, Ill., Oct. 18.—Filing an affidavit in which she charged that Lawrence M. Hight, former Ina, Ill., clergyman, with whom she was jointly indicted for the murder by poison of her husband, Wilford Sweeten, and his wife, Anna Hight, was a "willing tool" of the prosecution, Mrs. Elsie Sweeten today began her fight for a separate trial.

Would Testify Against Her.

Mrs. Sweeten further charges that if she were tried jointly with Hight he would go on the witness stand ostensibly in his own behalf but in reality as a witness against her.

It is further set out that Hight has been tried by a "select number" of ministers of the Methodist Episcopal church and that before these men he made a confession of the crime which was false insofar as it applied to her. She states that some of these church officials, whose testimony would be "very prejudicial to her interest," have been called to testify against her.

State Charges Conspiracy.

State's Attorney Frank G. Thompson is prepared to reply to the motion with the contention that the slaying of Wilford Sweeten was due to a conspiracy and that both parties are equally guilty and should be tried together.

Mrs. Sweeten's affidavit was filed after Judge J. C. Kern had overruled a motion to quash the indictments and the woman had entered a plea of not guilty.

Hight did not enter his plea at this time. Judge Kern ordered that Hight enter his plea next Wednesday morning and that the attorneys at that time argue the question of granting Mrs. Sweeten a separate trial.

4 MORE SAFETY LOADING ZONES ARE ESTABLISHED

Safety loading zones for the convenience of street car patrons are to be established tomorrow morning at the intersections of Lake, Adams, Jackson and Van Buren streets with State street, it was announced yesterday by Commissioner of Public Service Leo Winiecki. Similar zones have been in operation on State street at Randolph, Washington and Madison streets, as well as other important loop corners for several weeks.

In addition to providing a safe zone for passengers boarding or alighting from cars, the new system has speeded street car and vehicular traffic through the loop district considerably, Mr. Winiecki asserts. Approximately 5 minutes is saved each street car in its passage through the business district. Vehicular traffic which was halted behind a loading or unloading street car in the past, now passes around the safety zones on the right, uninterruptedly.

SEEK RECOVERY OF TAXES BOUND UP IN ESTATES

Vast Amounts of Securities Escape Levy.

Taxable securities valued at approximately $72,198,992, the personal property of estates in process of administration in the Probate court, have escaped assessment for 1924 tax levy purposes, the board of review was told yesterday by Assistant Corporation Counsel Leon Hornstein.

Failure of the board to assess the estates at their full cash value for the present year as indicated in scores of complaints which he filed last month, may result in the institution of mandamus suits by the city to compel the revision, Mr. Hornstein intimated.

The complaints, prepared after a search of the state inheritance tax department and Probate court records, show that a total of $26,754,292 in taxable securities in the estates have been valued at only $4,555,300 by the board of assessors, contrary to statutes requiring the assessment to be made on a full cash value basis.

Have Escaped Years.

Most of the estates have escaped taxation for years, and while, it would be proper for the board of review to assess back taxes against them, the city is not recommending such a course at this time, Mr. Hornstein declared in a letter to Charles V. Barrett, Edward R. Litsinger and Patrick A. Nash, members of the board.

"All we ask," the letter says, "is that your board do its plain duty and assess the property of these estates at its full, fair, cash value for the present year. By next year, most of these estates will be closed in the Probate court and the securities will be distributed to the heirs. Judged by the experience of the past, in most cases the heirs will promptly conceal them from the taxing officials."

"We realize," continues Mr. Hornstein's letter, "that it is extremely difficult for your board to make assessments according to law as to all classes of personal property for the reason that a great deal of it is concealed.

Hidden from View.

"Many millions of bonds owned by living persons are in safety deposit boxes and hidden from your view. During the lifetime of these persons they pay practically no personal property tax on these securities. Upon their death, however, a wholly different situation arises.

"The securities owned by them are exposed to the light of day. A public official, the appraiser of the inheritance tax department of the state, examines all securities, makes a list of them, and fixes their value. While the estate is in process of administration the amount of personal property belonging to the estate is definitely known and its value has been accurately determined by a public officer."

Mr. Hornstein's letter recalls the city's unsuccessful attempt to secure a city-wide revaluation of real and personal property by the board of assessors and the board of review last year. Definite information concerning the value of securities in estates was given the board of assessors, but the result, according to Mr. Hornstein, was a valuation of only 5 per cent of the proper amount.

YANKEE BEAUTY, THRICE MARRIED, SHOOTS HUSBAND

HAVRE, France, Oct. 18.—[United Press.]—A scandal involving a famous American beauty, thrice married, was precipitated today by charges of Lucien Deubel, prominent French sportsman, that his wife deliberately shot him with a shotgun, following a quarrel. Mme. Deubel wished to remarry her second husband, he charged.

The shooting took place at a hunt at the Chateau Des Hogues and was at first attributed to an accident. Mme. Deubel was arrested yesterday, however, the police claiming to have additional evidence that the shooting was deliberate. Deubel then came forward with the accusation that his wife fired upon him at close range as he was stepping from an automobile in front of the chateau.

Mme. Deubel's maiden name was Miss Marguerite Waterloo of New York City. Her first husband was Guy Hache. She married her second husband, Max Martin, when he was only 16 years old.

Loss of $20,000 Leads to Suicide in the Lake

The loss of $20,000 in a financial transaction is believed to have prompted the suicide of Gustav Johnson, 45 years old, 3104 North Robey street, whose body was found in the lake at the foot of Barry avenue yesterday. There was a bullet wound in his chest.

CITY WILL HONOR 'CHICAGO' FLYERS BY BIG RECEPTION

Air Magellans to Be Given Two Costly Autos.

Chicago's first opportunity to show its real appreciation of the merits of the flyers who carried the name of the city around the world on the airplans "Chicago" will come on Sunday, Nov. 9. On that day Lieuts. Lowell Smith, who as commander of the around-the-world air squadron, flew his pennant on the flagship "Chicago," and Lieut. Leslie Arnold, who was his mechanician on the flight, will be the guests of the city at a meeting in the Auditorium theater.

Lieut. Smith and his assistant will be presented with two Packard automobiles. For the first time pictures depicting the flight around the world will be shown. Operatic and theatrical stars will participate in a program expected to surpass that presented at any theatrical benefit the city has ever known.

Arranged by Army and Navy Club.

The reception for the flyers is being arranged by a committee of the Army and Navy club of Chicago, headed by Capt. J. W. Van Alyea and representatives of twenty civic organizations. This committee was intrusted with the work of arranging the reception by the original committee appointed by the Chicago Association of Commerce and affiliated organizations. When the world flyers were expected in Chicago on their way back to the Pacific coast a hasty reception was arranged.

Owing, however, to the fact that the flyers were forced to land in Maywood, miles outside of the city and the date of their landing was uncertain, the reception was regarded unsatisfactory as an evidence of Chicago's interest in the flyers. The committee appointed at that time, which was organized at the suggestion of Col. Ray Smith, president of the Chicago branch of the National Aeronautical association, undertook to give a more fitting reception later on.

After several conferences it was suggested that the Army and Navy club, representing present officers of the army and navy and those who took part in the world's war, should take charge of the reception. Capt. Van Alyea, at the suggestion of Maj. Gen. George H. Harries, arranged the program for Nov. 9. The clubs which had originally been interested in the reception are cooperating with the club, and each of them will take a box at the entertainment.

Flyers Sure to Be Here.

Meantime arrangements have been made with Maj. Gen. Patrick, chief of the United States army service, which assure the presence of the flyers at the reception. A telegram from Maj. Gen. Patrick states that Lieuts. Smith and Arnold will be ordered to Chicago for Nov. 9 and 10.

SHENANDOAH AT TACOMA; WAITS 8 HOURS TO LAND

Starts 7,000 Mile Trip Back East Today.

Camp Lewis, Wash., Oct. 18.—[United Press.]—Anchored to her mooring mast here tonight after a day of circling over it, unable to descend without releasing precious helium gas, the navy's dirigible Shenandoah being refueled, will leave at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning for San Diego, Cal., on the return 7,000 mile journey.

Arrangements made to fly over Seattle and the Puget Sound naval station are dependent upon weather conditions, unfavorable weather being considered a cause of leaving for the south without the "courtesy" trip.

Hampered by Fog, Then Sun.

Since early this morning the big air cruiser wandered about over Tacoma and adjacent territory. It was unable to land at first because of fog. Then, when this difficulty had been removed by the sun, it was forced to stay aloft by the sun itself.

Because of the heat, the helium gas became so rarified that a landing could have been effected only by releasing some of the precious vapor and so her officers kept the dirigible aloft at an angle of 15 degrees until the cool of afternoon had condensed the gas to the point where three tons were added to the weight of the craft and a landing was considered possible.

She nosed up to her mast shortly after 5 p. m. and made fast, her crew getting down to earth for the first time since Thursday morning at 8:15, when she cast off from San Diego for the stormy journey northward.

Kept Waiting Eight Hours.

The Shenandoah was in the air approximately eight hours after her arrival over the field here, while her crew impatiently studied the topography below, the range of plain, river and sound waters, the towering bulk of Mount Tacoma and specks on the ground showing where groups of people stood watching her circlings or drove by automobile to points of vantage.

Continually her radio sputtered with official and press messages, telling those below how the crew fared and what might be seen from their course aloft.

Make the Home Beautiful —without Extravagance

There are so many varieties of Oriental weaves and such a wide range of prices beginning at as little as $7.50 for a Ladic or Belouchistan mat, and graduating upward—that practically every home can afford to have at least a few without overstepping the household expense budget.

No matter what kind you buy, the service it will give makes the price small. You don't have to be a judge of Oriental Rugs to appreciate these values. Let us help you choose the right rugs for your particular needs.

2—Develop a Practical Highway System.

3—Regrow Our Vanished Forests.

NATIONALISM.

Nationalism to a great many modern intellectuals is a stumbling block in the way of altruism. Its pride is supposed to be poison in the cup of universal brotherhood and to be the red meat of militarism. People feeding on it and poisoned by it are supposed to be easily made victims of a designing system which wants war for profit.

Europe had a period when nationality was of no consequence. We call it the dark ages. Constitutional government was growing out of the check the barons put on the king. Nationalism was growing out of the check the king put on the barons. It was the growth of the latter which finally helped the farmer to harvest a field of wheat without first picking the iron wear of a battle out of it, if anything of it or him had been left.

A Gascon was just as much at home tramping down a Cheshire field as a Lancastrian was at home in pillaging Norman town and countryside. Louis of France was as happy over in England with barbed cavalry ruining the crops as Burgundy was happy in France helping the Plantaganets to ruin crops. Simon of Montford, a Frenchman, was a better Englishman than many English barons. The Gascons preferred to slit a French throat in Poitou rather than an English throat in York.

The incredible nonsensical military adventures of the middle ages had their source in the lapse of nationality and the readiness with which people now compact in national units betrayed each other. Nationality at least built a wall about the gardens of a land. Joan of Arc helped to persuade all Frenchmen that it was not reasonable that an Englishman should have pretensions to the government of France and bring a pillaging army over every time parliament would give him a little money.

The English kings finally taught the English barons that while they might have a right to trial by their peers, or say they had, they did not have the right to start private wars with each other. The object of the distracted people of the middle ages was to supplant feudalism with nationalism and get coherency, security, and a chance to fatten their pigs in peace.

The internationalism of the feudal ages was an unpleasant anarchy such as China is suffering now. The nationalism which is decried by sentimentalists today was the hope of people five and six hundred years ago. Internationalists probably find in this the evolution of the human breed, tending away from the parochial dimensions of the palatinate and the status of the earl's man towards first a consciousness of the brotherhood of shires and then to the brotherhood of nations.

It may be. Who are we to limit the millennium? Six hundred years ago the Earl of Utah might have invited the Japanese into California to get a split of that land. Six hundred years from now the Japanese may not want California. What we know is that California with a nation behind it is sitting pretty and that China which is not a nation is having the colic.

THE OREGON AND NEBRASKA ACTS.

The vital importance of retaining in the courts the power to protect the rights of the individual is being illustrated by reference to the Oregon and Nebraska acts affecting the schools. In Oregon a law was passed which would virtually abolish parochial and private schools. The law has been held unconstitutional by a federal court in Oregon and an appeal is now pending in the Supreme court of the United States. In Nebraska, under the influence of war feeling, an act was passed prohibiting the teaching of any foreign language in the grammar grades of the public schools. The Supreme court has held that act unconstitutional.

Both cases are good examples, not merely of what may happen, but of what most certainly will happen, if there is no independent and judicially trained agency to arrest upon constitutional rights. The Oregon law was the result of sectarianism attempting to deprive a minority of a constitutional right. The Nebraska law was the result of racial feeling attempting to deprive another minority of a constitutional right. In both instances the legislaures were expressing, as they always will express, what they feel is the mood and demand of a majority at the moment, regardless of our constitutional liberties.

We do not propose to argue here upon the expediency or inexpediency of either of these laws. It is possible that circumstances might arise which would justify the elimination of any other language but English from our teaching. We do not think such circumstances are in the least likely to arise, but if they did the way to meet them is not by destroying the court's power to protect the constitution. It is to amend the constitution.

This applies likewise to the Oregon case. Circumstances might arise that would justify concentration upon the public schools. It is not likely that such circumstances will arise, but if they should the way to meet them is to amend the constitution, not to abolish it by abolishing its protection.

It might be better if every child were given the democratic experience of the public schools and thus be taught early to know all sorts and conditions of men. But we are not ready to concede that parents should be compelled to give over their children to the agency of the state for such education as the state sees fit to give. We have public and private secondary schools, public and privately endowed colleges and universities, and we are not willing to say the citizen shall be refused the right to choose among them. That would be not only a long step toward standardization, bureaucracy, and state socialism, which we are opposed to, but also a waste of the richly varied resources of education which our country affords. But the right of choice is the more precious thing and we want to keep the court's power to protect it from the attacks of politics, partisanism, prejudice, or passion.

HOW THE PEOPLE RULE.

La Follette says his proposed amendment authorizing congress to pass laws over the decision of the Supreme court presents the issue whether the people shall rule through their elected representatives or be ruled by a bare majority of the Supreme court.

A statement raising several questions, one of which was decided upon the adoption of the constitution and accepted as settled by every generation of Americans since that day—the question whether the people rule through their elected representatives in congress and the legislatures. They choose to rule through three branches of government, the executive, the legislative, and the judicial, each branch of equal dignity, with respective powers and duties, and all limited by a written constitution.

The founders of the constitution and the people of the United States who approved the constitution did not propose to rule through their congressional representatives alone. They created a government of limited powers, not a government, like the British, of unlimited powers vested in a legislative body, the parliament. They limited their elected representatives by their own sovereign will expressed in a written constitution, which they created the supreme law of the land, retaining to themselves the power to change it upon certain conditions.

The founders of our constitution and the people of that day had no illusions about the infallibility of congress or the executive. La Follette talks as if congress were an infallible expression of the people. The American of 1787 had had too much experience of the willingness of a legislative body to misgovern and oppress to be willing to put in the power of congress the power to pass any law it saw fit to pass. They proposed to limit the power of congress, the power of the elected representatives of the people by definite rules, and when Senator La Follette talks about the right of the people to rule through their elected representatives he ignores the fact that they deliberately refused to commit themselves to rule through them and created additional ways of ruling.

That is one of the chief merits of our great constitutional system, that the people did not give to congress the right to rule for them as they pleased, but only as the people themselves directed them through the constitution to rule.

IN DARKEST AMERICA.

Though we are gasping in the clutches of the octopus, slaves of the economic oligarchy, victims of injunction judges, oppressed, defrauded, and enchained, let us note in the midst of our misery that our savings deposits are now more than eighteen billion dollars, which is more than half of all our bank deposits and almost equal to our total savings and individual deposits in 1913. This means that in the last ten years of our slavery, while the population has increased 14 per cent, individual deposits have increased 83 per cent and savings 102 per cent. School childrens' savings are now over twenty millions.

Or as Senator La Follette's socialist allies would say: "Rise, ye slaves, and strike. You have nothing to lose but your chains and savings accounts."

SHALL THE PROTECTION COME DOWN?

With La Follette breaking away from his Supreme court curb proposition and falling back more and more upon unproved charges of sinister conspiracy and plutocratic control, with Davis chattering rather hopelessly along in the rear of the procession, trying to get some one interested in his whereabouts, it seems to us that when we get down to brass tacks the tangible, practical issue in the campaign is whether the tariff shall be cut down or kept up. La Follette and Davis are both for cutting it down. Coolidge is for keeping it up.

We are told by La Follette and by Davis that the tariff act is a tariff of iniquities, which mulcts the farmer and all consumers of our manufactured products without mercy. Put out the Republicans and this outrage will end, the tariff will come down, prices of what the farmer buys will come down, and the ill-gotten gains of all malefactors of great wealth will come down.

Something will come down, if the protection of American industry comes down in the face of a reviving European industrial production. We agree on that with La Follette and Davis. Something will come down and it is wages and jobs and the consumption of American products.

Wage earners and white collar workers who were out of jobs in 1914 when the previous Democratic tariff had got in its work, might think that over a bit now. Farmers who want the prices of things they buy brought down might also recall what happens when the home market collapses. The American farmer for years has voted for a protective tariff because, if it sustained high prices, it also sustained high purchasing power and high consumption, which more than compensated him for the prices he has paid. The American farmer has not voted blindly against his own interest all these years in supporting the protective system and therefore the American standard of living. He has shown more intelligent self-interest as well as more breadth of view than the mass of wage earners who have voted Democratic administrations into office and themselves out of jobs.

When highly industrialized countries in Europe are able to produce at a low cost level and with stabilized currencies and foreign loans are able to get raw material and renew export trade, the consequence of cutting down the protection of American industries cannot fail to be injurious if not disastrous not only to wage earners directly but to agriculture through general business depression. American business, paying high wages, and meeting high costs on an American level, cannot combat the cheap production of Europe, and the wage earner, clerk, or farmer who is now cheering for La Follette or even Davis is not cheering for himself, though he thinks he is.

Neither La Follette nor Davis has any chance of being President, but it is important to our business recovery, both agricultural and industrial, not only that Coolidge and Dawes be elected but also a senate and house which will keep up the economic defenses of the country, not tear them down when they are most needed. Men and women who want to maintain the protection of American recovery and prosperity will vote not only for Coolidge and Dawes but for Republican senators and representatives to maintain the protective dike and the homes behind it.

THE COMMUTER'S TICKET.

A cottage under oaks is as a stone house by the surf. Acorns falling in the night are as portentous as the beat of breakers against the rocks. They hit the roof with thumps all out of proportion to the distance traveled and the size of the falling object. A knock at the door at night is one of the minor thrills of life or a prelude to one of the major. After the bolt has been thrown, travel at night has significance. A knock at the door after curtains have been drawn may be friendship, necessity or peril.

Who comes rustling the dried leaves? It may be that new life or death has come or is coming in another cottage over the hill. Unbar the door and look out to see what face is revealed in the shaft of light. A friend with laughter. A traveler out of the hills. One who seeks a doctor. One who needs a priest. One who would sit by the fire and talk. A shepherd who has lost a sheep. A stranger in distress. An enemy in anger. An alien with earrings and cloak and unintelligible speech.

The wash of the surf is for men who go by sea. The knock at the door is for men who go by land. The thumping acorn, resounding on the roof under the oaks is a knock at the door. Is that a face at the window? What comes after the harvest moon has waned? What walks by night over the fallen maple leaves? What comes through the crimson thickets in the dark? Travelers are abroad. There's a hand at the knob.

MORE LIGHT FOR CHICAGO.

Next month Chicago will vote on a $1,000,000 bond issue for the rehabilitation of the street lighting system. About 800,000 persons will be directly benefited by the improvements planned. Many more who do not live in the wards immediately affected will indirectly gain.

The bond issue is for five things. It will extend better lighting into outlying wards. It will replace other lights and rehabilitate old aerial equipment. It will build two new substations.

Since 1921 Chicago has annexed territory. Wards 7, 8, 9, 10, 12, 15, 18, 23, 30, 37, 40, and 41 have lighting systems not on a par with those in other parts of town. Parts of those wards are still using the systems that were used before annexation. Too many streets are dark. Crime flourishes. Accidents occur

From Lockport, Ill., comes the juice that lights Chicago. It is purchased from the sanitary district. It comes thirty miles to the main station at 31st street and Western avenue. Gas and gasoline and electricity rented from private corporations furnish auxiliary light. Chicago's lighting system is valued at $8,500,000 every year. Its upkeep is $1,500,000 every year.

But this is none too much. Light is cheap at any price. Nor is this price high. One million dollars to make Chicago lighter is $1,000,000 to make Chicago safer, better, happier, cleaner.

AIR COLLEGES.

An eastern university has organized an air college. It is not a branch of aviation related to air circuses. It is a radio college. Ninety thousand students will attend this college. There will be twenty minute lectures. There will be no examinations and no degrees.

This kind of a college has advantages both temporal and spiritual. Twenty minute lectures with no check on slumber and inattention will appeal to many college kut young men and women of these times. But with no degrees offered the commercial and other ulterior motives in modern education will be put somewhat under control. The air college will appeal in method to modern academic loafers found in some numbers on our college grounds. But the social and economic incentive to get degrees will be abolished and with it most of the loafers.

The air college will offer the man or woman who wants the education for what it is rather than for what it will give a long needed chance. Education should be an orderly interest in things and affairs. Of late years, as officially expounded, it has been hardly that.

Editorial of the Day

THE PRINCE'S VISIT.

[New York World.]

English newspapers have not been wholly pleased with the prince's reception in this country. He was treated, they seem to feel, neither as the symbol of the empire nor as a sportsman on a private holiday, but rather as a kind of cross between Rudolph Valentino and Jackie Coogan.

They must not be too hard on us for that. In this country we specialize. Our Presidents are not active dancers. Our active dancers are not the intimates of Presidents. And therefore our English friends must forgive us if we have become confused trying to remember that the Prince of Wales is a serious student of education and finance but that Baron Renfrew is something quite different.

A long unfamiliarity with the rules of the game of royalty accounts for American bewilderment about the prince. No American can quite imagine Mr. Coolidge taking his holiday in riotous living at Monte Carlo, relying on the theory that when he is solemn he is President and when he is gay he is not. Our public characters are public characters whenever they are in public. It would be death to their reputations to step out of character. A President at a cabaret would be as unthinkable as Mr. Valentine at a hearing of the interstate commerce commission. We are done with superman in this democratic land and are quite incapable of imagining a dancing statesman or a statemanlike dancer.

If our English friends will remember that they will understand the confusion caused by the prince's visit. Here he was, the heir to the British throne, the man who will hold in his person the allegiance of the greatest empire ever established in human history. Here he was, unmarried and handsome, the arbiter of fashion and the lord of the social hierarchy. This young man is entirely composed of prestige. He has never done anything, earned anything, said anything that distinguishes him. Yet he is the most distinguished person at large. And although he does not govern the empire he is socially the lord and master of those who do govern it. He comes on a visit to this republic. Is it surprising that people are curious to know every detail of the life of this man, who is what he is because he is the subject of the greatest fairy tale preserved intact on earth? If Santa Claus came to Long Island could he be an ordinary private citizen? The prince, as prince, was not a bit more real than Santa Claus or the king in the "Arabian Nights."

How to Keep Well, By Dr. W. A. Evans.

CARDIACS IN INDUSTRY.

Of the persons who apply to employment managers for work, every fiftieth person has a serious heart defect. The employment manager who rejects all such cases is liable to have labor shortage in his plants. What is just as important, he will work an injustice to a lot of men and will upset the economics of the communities from which he draws his labor if his employés and their families make up a considerable part of the community.

To add an additional 2 per cent of the total population to the already large load of passengers may stop the train. It is now recognized that it is wisdom to find suitable employment for cardiacs, feeble minded, and amost all the passengers which the community is now trying to carry without bringing happiness and content to those who are carried.

In a study of cardiacs in industry Mary C. Lincoln lays down the following fundamental truths:

First—The cardiac should work.

Second—The cardiac can work.

Third—Industry has a place for the cardiac.

Fourth—Cardiacs should be studied and then assigned to the kind of work for which each is fitted and then especially trained, each for his job.

Cardiacs are divided into those with organic heart disease and those with functional trouble but without organic defect. From the standpoint of employment, she divides cardiacs into five groups: (a) Able to carry on usual activities; (b) able to carry on slightly curtailed activity; and down to (e), those unable to carry on any activity without distress.

The jobs were studied with a view to finding out what features of the work taxed cardiacs most. Walking, particularly walking rapidly and against the wind, ranked first. Stair climbing, lifting, bending and stooping, excitement, standing, reaching, carrying weights, pulling, hurrying, sweeping, pushing, cold weather, washing floors, washing clothes, and sudden exertion ranked in the order named.

Among the jobs from which one or more patients had to be transferred were: Pulling out filing case drawers, carrying money bags to the bank, underneath work on automobiles, beating eggs, stirring cake dough, cleaning silver, lifting flatirons, holding up newspaper to read, shaking rugs, and hanging up clothes. Analysis shows the motion of the arms when they are raised is particularly taxing. So are overeating and excitement.

In studying a cardiac it is advisable to know what he does in his leisure hours as well as when at work. When the man and the job have been properly studied and adjusted, so far from being a passenger on the plant where he is employed the cardiac becomes more valuable than he was before. He ranks above the average in productivity and value to the plant. Furthermore, when he intelligently cooperates during his leisure hours he is able to remain at work for many years.

It may be necessary to change the job in order to get the kind of work the man fits. It frequently happens that the man changes his way of doing his work and in that way saves himself and adds to his value to the plant.

TEETH ARE DISCOLORED.

C. A. L. writes: I am a young lady 21 years old. Just recently a hard yellow substance has appeared on my teeth at the gum line, and some of my teeth are starting to decay where this substance appears. Is this pyorrhea? What causes it, and can it be removed?

I had some teeth filled and cleaned, but the cleaning did not seem to affect this substance.

REPLY.

I don't know what this is unless it is tartar. A dentist who cleans the teeth is supposed to scale off the tartar. The presence of tartar leads to pyorrhea.

BABY HAS NO TEETH.

Mrs. O. C. writes: What could be the matter with my 14 months old baby who at the present time has no teeth? She has never been sick.

REPLY.

Give her more milk, cereal, whole wheat bread and other foods rich in lime. Keep her in the sunlight more. Your physician may want her to take cod liver oil or phosphorus in addition.

FRIEND OF THE PEOPLE

Letters to this department must be signed with names and addresses of writers.

A CONTRACTOR ERRS.

Chicago, Oct. 14.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Through a mistake of location, I ordered a porch torn down and while building the new one, the owner came along and ordered my men off the premises. When I heard of the mistake, I offered to finish the job at my own expense but the owner refuses to let me, as the work my men were doing did not suit him and says he will rebuild his porch himself and make me pay the cost.

I claim that a refusal on his part to let me rebuild the porch exempts me from any more responsibility. Am I right? S. E. M.

No, you are not.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

SUBLEASE ON STORE.

Chicago, Oct. 11.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I bought out a store some months ago and took possession without being asked to sign a lease, having the old lease transferred over to me. I have a copy of the lease and so has the landlord with the signature of the party I bought from, but it does not have my signature. Am I bound to the lease even though my signature is not on it? M. C.

No, in the sense that you can move out without being liable to the landlord for further rent. You might be liable to your assignor, depending on your agreement with him. Of course you cannot enforce the lease against the landlord if the lessee's side is not performed.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

"OVER TWENTY-ONE."

Chicago, Oct. 13.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—When registering for voting is it necessary to give one's exact age? Within my personal knowledge one precinct in this city demands this, while another permits the answer, "over twenty-one." Is this last permissible? H. K.

We understand that the Board of Election Commissioners have ruled that "over 21" is sufficient.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

60 YEARS AGO TODAY

OCTOBER 19, 1864.

NASHVILLE.—A dispatch from Gen. Sherman says: "We took Ship Gap today, capturing part of the 24th North Carolina. Two corps are represented to be at Lafayette and one went south from Willanova Plain. They obstructed Snake Creek pass to delay our trains, but by tomorrow I can go in any direction."

CHATTANOOGA. — The rear of Hood's rebel army left Lafayette at daybreak going south. The country southwest of Lafayette is exceedingly difficult for an inferior army, consisting of a narrow valley parallel to ranges of Taylor's Ridge and Lookout mountain.

ST. LOUIS.—Gen. Curtis occupied Independence, after driving the rebels of Gen. Price's command out of the city. The latter's headquarters are undoubtedly at Lexington. Gen. Pleasanton has driven the rebels from Warrensburg. Indications are that Price's army is making slow headway toward the threatened invasion of Kansas.

MEMPHIS.—Rebels in large force said to be under the command of Gen. Chalmers, are again threatening Memphis. The advance guard is about four miles west of the city and an attack is expected momentarily.

PEORIA.—Distinguished speakers will be heard at the grand mass Union meeting today. Among them are Andy Johnson of Tennessee, Gov. Yates, Co: Robert G. Ingersoll, Hon. E. C. Ingersoll, Judge William Pitt Kellogg, and John Wentworth.

CHICAGO.—Capt. H. M. Fuller of Chicago and Miss Cynthia A. Stratfords of Waukegan were married by the Rev. J. H. Tuttle.

CAIRO.—A refugee from Selma, Ala., gives the following as some of the prices paid for necessities there: Flour, $1 per pound; salt, $1 per pound; muslin, $5.50 per yard; thread, $3 a spool; black felt hats, $100; common shirting, $3.50 per yard.

25 YEARS AGO TODAY

OCTOBER 19, 1899.

LONDON.—The Boers have attacked Sir George White's British troops in force in Natal, southwest of Ladysmith. They also began a bombardment of Mafeking. A big battle is expected today and Sir George White is pushing up his supporting troops rapidly. In yesterday's fighting the Orange Free State burghers advanced through Tintwa Pass and opened on the British with artillery.

PARIS. — The assassination of Lieuts. Voulet and Chanoine by their rebellious Senegalese troopers in the Soudan was announced. They are the two French officers who assassinated Col. Klobb, sent to relieve them because of their cruelty and disobedience of orders. Then their troops refused to follow them in their ambitions to set up an independent government and their slaying followed.

PARIS.—A fierce duel was fought between Lieut. Mercier, son of Gen. Mercier, the foe of Dreyfus, and Urbane Gohier, one of the editors of Aurore. Mercier was badly wounded in the breast.

LOUISVILLE.—Robert E. Burke's Cook County Democracy's Marching club that came to Kentucky 275 strong to aid in the election of William Goebel for governor, was in the state but a few hours when it received a pointed hint that Kentucky's Democratic row is a "family affair" and outsiders are not wanted.

CHICAGO.—Henry Walters, 9 years old, was awarded $30,000 damages against the city for injuries suffered when he fell into a hole in the 35th street viaduct.

10 YEARS AGO TODAY

OCTOBER 19, 1914.

LONDON. — A Rotterdam dispatch says: "A message just received from a German source reports that the Germans have crossed the Belgian border onto the coast of France and now are about eight miles from Dunkirk. Fort des Dunes, first of Dunkirk's outer forts, is in their path.

LONDON.—The British official statement says the British troops in the north have driven the Germans back more than thirty miles in the last few days. Severe fighting is taking place at Nieuport, to the south of Ostend. The French have recaptured Armentieres.

PARIS.—Terrific fighting occurred on the eastern wing of the battle line, the attacks centering around St. Die, on the Meurthe, thirty-two miles northeast of Epinal. The Germans were repulsed with heavy casualties.

HALIFAX.—The steamer Brindilla, flying the American flag, was brought into port as a prize of war by the British auxiliary cruiser Caronia. The Brindilla formerly was the German steamer Washington.

LONDON. — Serious anti-German riots occurred here. German bakeries, butcher shops and saloons were wrecked by the angry mobs, which in many instances pillaged the homes of the proprietors who lived above their shops.

CHICAGO.—Col. Roosevelt had a busy Sunday. Among other things he placed the "River of Doubt" on the map for the Chicago university folks; motored through five Chicago parks; entertained Drs. Bevan and John R. Murphy at dinner; placed Goethe as third in rank of the world's poets; praised Harvard university for refusing to dismiss Dr. Hugo Munsterberg because of his defense of the kaiser, and held several conferences.

AMONG THE FOLKS IN HISTORY

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Writers should confine themselves to 200 or 300 words. Give full names and addresses. No manuscripts can be returned. Address Voice of the People, The Tribune.

MEET W. G. BLUFFER.

Chicago, Oct. 8.—Of all the bluffing newspapers, THE TRIBUNE is the worst. It might well be called the "World's Greatest Bluffer." You are trying to tell the people that Davis hasn't got a chance. Right down in your heart you know that Coolidge hasn't got such rosy prospects as you paint, with La Follette tearing the Grand Oil Party to pieces in the west. You continually talk about tearing down the constitution, of the hard times a Democratic administration and low tariff would cause, and a lot of other pure political bunk. Why don't you say something about the oil scandal? Why didn't Coolidge get rid of Daugherty and Denby before he was forced to by public opinion? Of course, all the papers supporting the party of privilege are trying to minimize the Teapot Dome scandal by saying nothing about it. The President and his Republican congress have worked about as well together as the Klan and the Knights of Columbus, and if Coolidge is elected we will have four years more of graft in favor of the vested interests at the expense of the common people.

Suppose La Follette should be elected—notice I say suppose. Do you believe he would have a majority in congress through which he would be able to radically change our form of government? Well, then, what 's all this hot air about the constitution about then? No, that is not what you are afraid of, but it is the privilege of the few that you are worried about, though you are afraid to come out into the open and say so.

Another thing—before the primaries last spring you were lambasting Gov. Small right and left. Well, why don't you come out strongly for Jones now? After all you said about Small, you can't consistently support him now, but I am not surprised that you have kept silent, for Lan is a Republican, you know. The narrow-minded TRIBUNE will wake up to a few things it didn't know before—or professed it didn't know—on Nov. 5. F. L. WELTER.

HERE COMES SELBY WITH HIS CRO-MAGS.

Chicago, Oct. 10.—H. M. Sauer, who has a taste for anthropology, has disagreed with Doris Blake over the subject of Cro-Magnon types in Chicago.

This race is a British type, with its greatest purity in Ireland and Scotland and in Germany. It was there before either the Celts or the Anglo-Saxon Nordics came.

In the stone age Cro-Magnon civilization shone out like a star over an otherwise savage world. It is rather we, as Nordics, who have measured up to their culture than that they have vanished.

The British isles have a history of culture going straight back to paleolithic times. It is not surprising that among the vigorous emigrants from these lands there should be a large number of those of Cro-Magnon blood. This is probably where most of the Cro-Magnon types in Chicago come from.

SELBY MAXWELL.

"THE IRISH DISCOVERED AMERICA."

Chicago, Oct. 9.—The Latin, Scandinavian, Semitic, and Saxon races all have some claim to show they were the first to discover this wonderful land of ours, "America," but according to a story often recounted to me by my father, the real credit should go to the Irish, as I can readily prove.

When Henry Cabot landed on the shores of America he was greeted by several Indians and their chief, who were very friendly and had a good many characteristics of the Irish, such as red hair; blue eyes, and clay pipes.

Noting the resemblance an Irishman of the crew spoke to them in Gaelic and received a reply.

That evening Cabot's crew were entertained by the "Irish Indians" with such Irish tunes as "The Wearing of the Green," "The Low Back Car," and "It's Only a Step from Killarney to Heaven."

According to the Indian chief, he and his people were descendants of certain members of the Irish race who came to America about the time Moses was leading the Jews out of Egypt.

As my father is noted for telling the truth at all times, we cannot doubt his word. MARCUS KAVANAGH GRIFFIN.

HISTORY OF BILL WHITE.

Dubuque, Ia., Oct. 13.—THE TRIBUNE recently printed as an Editorial of the Day an article on William Allen White written by one of the students at the Medill School of Journalism. This article was extremely well written and otherwise admirable, except in so far as it gave the impression that Mr. White lives away back in the sticks and is the homespun philosopher of the small town and the rural community. Probably Emporia, Kan., is as much the center of the universe as any other place; but whether it is or not, Bill White has always had a large outlook on the world, its people and its history. His parents were a part of that notable muration which settled the great slope from the Mississippi to the Rocky mountains in the '60s and '70s, and Bill was born into the atmosphere of the spirit that kept Kansas from becoming a slave state and precipitated the civil war. At college, in the late '80s, Bill had such associates in the classroom as Gen. Fred Funston, Senator Borah, Prof. Vernon Kellogg, and E. E. Slosson. Before he went to Emporia, Bill was associated for a number of years with Col. Nelson, as an editorial writer on the Kansas City Star, at that time, and perhaps now, one of the world's greatest newspapers. Besides these things, Bill has been all over the world, has lectured in most parts of the United States, and has a summer retreat on top of one of the high mountains in Colorado, where he retires to contemplate the cosmos and to look out over the United States from the very top of the continent.

What I am driving at is that Bill White was "making culture hum" out in Kansas some years before the tally-ho and the English coachman, as your own Chatfield-Taylor asserted, brought modern civilization to Chicago; and that Bill has been at it ever since.

Bill White is no more provincial than Tolstoi was provincial.

MALCOLM MACKINNON.

DOXOLOGY—BY HENNING.

Chicago, Oct. 13.—I enjoyed reading "I Sing My Country," by Arthur Sears Henning. I wish to congratulate Mr. Henning on his wonderful rhapsody and THE TRIBUNE on its publication. I read the editorial in Sunday's TRIBUNE in which the writer said the rhapsody was being published as an evidence of what he thought of it. Let me take the liberty to give you my thought. It ought to be printed and framed and displayed in every factory, office, home and school in America. It is the doxology of American citizenship, the litany of the United States. GEORGE J. GERMAN.

LOWER THE FLAG AT SUNDOWN.

Chicago, Oct. 14.—Why is it that THE TRIBUNE, which is supposedly 100 per cent American as a newspaper, does not lower the national colors on The Tribune Tower at sundown, and be in keeping with all the customs of true Americanism pertaining to "Old Glory."

Surely Mr. Welderberg did not fail in his attempt to repair the flag pole!

ANATOLE FRANCE BURIED; 300,000 RENDER HOMAGE

Statesman and Worker at Funeral Services.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, Oct. 19.—The French nation gave Anatole France supreme homage today in a funeral which defies description. Probably no other country but France ever honored a great artist by a similar tribute.

More than 300,000 people are estimated to have stood all day along the line of march from the author's birthplace, a little bookshop, to the little cemetery at Neuilly, eight miles away, where he was buried tonight. In the cortège which wound silently through the main streets of Paris were—driving or marching—practically every celeority and contemporary of France and ambassadors and ministers of every country in the world.

They were not all dignitaries or celeorities, however, for thousands of workmen, school children, and delegations of all the professional and labor unions marched to do honor to the greatest figure in modern French culture.

Nation's Elite Present.

President Doumergue, Premier Herriot, the entire cabinet, the presidents of the houses of parliament, most of the deputies and senators, all the members of the French academy, the Legion of Honor, the diplomatic corps, former presidents, and former premiers and marshals of France took place with Mme. France and Mme. Renan in the great purple draped tribute built in front of the author's birthplace in Qual Malaquais beside the Seine.

The ceremony arranged by the government had a certain impressive simplicity that was strongly suggestive of Red funerals in Moscow. It consisted of speeches by Gabriel Hanotaux, in the name of the French academy, Ferdinand Buisson in the name of the League of Rights of Man, M. Painleve as a personal friend, Leon Blum in the name of the Socialist party, M. Jouhaux in the name of the general federation of labor, and Francois Albert, minister of public instruction, in the name of the government and the nation.

Way Guarded by Troops.

Between speeches a band of the Garde Republicaine played symphonic music. The quai along the Seine was guarded by troops. Every inch of the way from there to the cemetery—along the Place de la Concorde and Champs Elysees—was lined with gendarmerie and infantry.

The master lay on a huge purple catafalque directly in front of Voltaire's statue. The only touch even suggesting religion during the whole ceremony was four great censors standing around the catafalque.

STATE PRODUCTS EXHIBIT CLOSES; CALLED SUCCESS

The Illinois Products exposition closed last night in a blaze of fire works as Harvey D. Hill, general secretary, predicted that Illinois will develop industially more than has any other state in the union in the next ten years.

"Chicago is the greatest railroad center in the world," said Mr. Hill. "Illinois is the state of manifold resources of soil, mine, forest and transport. There is nothing that can prevent the progress of the state."

More than $85,000 was spent to make the exposition, held in the furniture mart at 666 Lake Shore drive, a success; and the exposition closed with a surplus of $5,000 in the treasury, according to the announcement of George Woodruff, chairman of the board of governors. Future expositions are planned.

FREE MORE OF RUHR

PARIS, Oct. 18.—[By the Associated Press.]—The new line of the military occupation of the Ruhr, after the French troops evacuate the Dortmund-Hoerde zone Oct. 22, will start from a point west of Lunen, on the Lippe canal. It will pass west of Mengede, which has been evacuated, between Castrop, which is occupied, and Marten, also evacuated, and thence south between Annen and Lettringhausen and join the Ruhr river at a point between Herdecke and Syburg.

The evacuated territory will be over an irregular line of about nineteen miles north and south, and varying between a depth of six and twelve miles east to west. This will represent an area of between 250 to 312 miles square.

The Hoesch mines and steel mills east of Dortmund, in which the German ambassador to Paris, Leopold von Hoesch, is heavily interested, are located in the territory which will be evacuated next Wednesday.

PRESIDENT AND NOTABLES BOW AT KOHLSAAT BIER

Chicago Editor Rites at Hoover Home.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 18.—[Special.]—The President and Mrs. Coolidge, high government officials, and scores of prominent men and women this afternoon attended funeral services for Herman H. Kohlsaat, Chicago newspaper editor and publisher, at the home of Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover, where Mr. Kohlsaat died yesterday morning.

The service of the Episcopal church was conducted by the Rt. Rev. James E. Freeman, bishop of Washington, who read in conclusion Tennyson's "Crossing the Bar." Two hymns, "Rock of Ages" and "The Fight Is O'er, the Battle Won," were sung by the choir boys of the cathedral of Saints Peter and Paul.

A wreath of white chrysanthemums sent by the President and Mrs. Coolidge was placed on the coffin, and many other floral tributes made beautiful the rooms.

Mrs. Kohlsaat and her sons-in-law and daughters, Mr. and Mrs. Potter Palmer of Chicago and Mr. and Mrs. Roger Shepard of St. Paul, were present.

The honorary pall bearers were Robert Woods Bliss, American minister to Sweden; Secretary Hoover, Edward M. House, Robert Underwood Johnson, former ambassador to Italy; Rollo Ogden and Arthur Hays Sulzberger of New York, and Frank B. Noyes, Vernon Kellogg, Mark Sullivan, and Richard V. Oulahan of Washington.

Several memebrs of the Century club came on from New York. Others present were Willis Abbot, Mrs. Frederick Dent Grant and her daughter, Princess Cantacuzene, Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, Mrs. Mark Sullivan, and Mrs. Oulahan.

Lodge's Relatives Deny He Will Leave the Senate

Boston, Oct. 18.—A report that Senator Lodge, who submitted to an operation recently would retire before the expiration of his term because of illness, was denied today by relatives. The senator will be in Washington in all probability late this autumn, according to relatives, although at present the date of a second operation, said by physicians to be necessary, has not been determined.

"Hursen" Funerals In Your Neighborhood

Whenever you attend a "Hursen" funeral, you realize at once why it is that thousands of families in Chicago and its suburbs have chosen Hursen to "conduct the funeral," in preference to engaging some one else who happens to be located in the neighborhood.

It is always one's desire to give the utmost, in service and elegance, as a final expression of devotion. Small establishments cannot provide the service, the quality, the elegance of materials, the environments of a "funeral-home," the superb array of automobile equipment, as Hursen provides them.

All this remarkable service, and new and unusual elegance, cost you less, far less, than the charges you would have to pay anywhere else, without this Hursen super-elegance and unmatched service. It is this higher quality and low price policy upon which Hursen's, the greatest of all establishments of its kind in America, has been built.

This same Hursen policy applies to every funeral, large or small. You may imagine that your distance away from any one of Hursen's 3 funeral-homes is too great to assure you this service. This is not the case. Whether you live 1 or 20 miles away, this same "Hursen" service and elegance is at your disposal. There is no extra charge for distance.

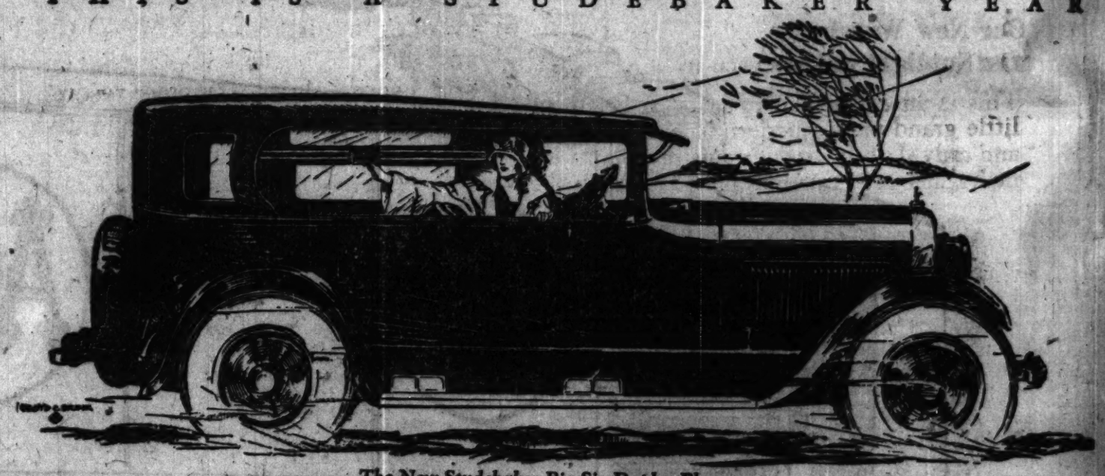
THIS IS A STUDEBAKER YEAR



The New Studebaker Big Six Duplex-Phaeton

Two Cars in One—
An open and closed car combined

STUDEBAKER DUPLEX—a closed and open car combined. An entirely new-type car—developed by Studebaker and available from no other maker.

It is the most sensational—most talked-of car in America.

One minute you are enjoying the comfort and protection of a closed car—next the unhindered freedom that made the open car so popular. And the change can be made in 30 seconds by simply lowering the roller side enclosures.

Yet with all this two-fold convenience, the Duplex-Phaeton sells for no more than an open car.

The new Studebaker Big Six is strikingly beautiful—with long, low sweeping lines. It is especially designed and powered for seven-passenger service.

The Big Six Duplex-Phaeton is delivered to you with complete equipment. This even includes two highest grade bumpers, extra balloon tire, tube and tire cover—there is nothing else to buy.

But to appreciate this car you must inspect it—drive it. Test its delightful ease of operation — steering mechanism especially designed for its full-sized balloon tires.

Notice the new location of the lighting switch on the steering wheel — and many other new and unusual features.

See this car that has definitely solved the open-closed car problem.

October Sale of Pianos
Returned from Summer Homes!

You may exchange your purchase 6 months later, at full price paid, towards another piano

This great annual event to which so many look forward eagerly will present pianos of undeniable charm and value at great savings. Steamers, motor vans, and trains bring us back pianos rented for use in summer homes at Lake Geneva, Oconomowoc, Petoskey, Fox Lake and at Charlevoix, South Haven, and a score of other summer resorts. Many very fine pianos were rented this year. They are now offered to you at prices considerably reduced.

This sale offers you an excellent chance to make a saving. Your piano decision should be made now. Pianos of late styles and various fancy woods are included. Most tastes and pocket-books can be suited. Inexpensive instruments suitable for students, shown in profusion. Buyers at a distance should write for a complete list.

Free from hidden defects

These pianos have been completely overhauled. It has taken four shops to rebuild, repair, or refinish in order to bring them to the Lyon & Healy standard. In a position to do this at a minimum cost, we are not content unless the pianos are in first-class playing condition. As a result they are entirely satisfactory. In perfect tune and enjoying a fine tone, they will bring delight to many music lovers.

REVOLT IS SURE, DAVIS WARNS, IF COOLIDGE WINS!

Fears Congress and Cal Cannot Agree.

BY DONALD EWING.

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 18.—[Special.]—Four years more of the Coolidge Republican administration may cause revolution and uprising that would sweep all that we hold dear into irretrievable and crashing ruin, John W. Davis declared tonight as he wound up his Illinois and Missouri campaigns.

The Democratic nominee warned big audiences in East St. Louis, Ill., today and here tonight that election of a Republican house and senate is impossible and that with Coolidge in the White House and opposition to him in congress stronger than ever, havoc is certain to be the result.

13,000 Hear Him Prophesy.

Mr. Davis spoke in the Coliseum tonight to a crowd estimated at from 13,000 to 15,000.

"In all seriousness and earnestness," Mr. Davis said, "I submit to you that there is in this country a great unrest. There is stirring in the public mind of the United States a great protest—uninformed, in part, unintelligent, in part, and yet like all such things, it may mount and grow until it becomes an onrushing storm, uncontrolled and uncontrollable, carrying us to ports we cannot know.

"What brought it about? Why this political uneasiness? Why this social revolt? Is it not the last three and a half years of inefficient government, of corruption in government, of privilege in government, against which the American people are rising to protest?

Fears Wind of Revolt.

"If that protest this year goes unheeded, and those who have misused the power we gave them are returned to place of authority, what insurance have we that when the wind rises again it may not reach the proportions of tempest and sweep us and all that we hold dear into one irretrievable and crashing ruin?

"I believe in safety valves in government, and I believe if you want to cure evils and prevent them you must meet them in quiet time and correct them while you may.

"The Democratic party offers itself to the American people as their agent and machine through which that correction may be applied."

Appeal for Labor Vote.

In East St. Louis, where there is a heavy labor vote and the labor leaders have pledged themselves to La Follette, Mr. Davis pictured the Democratic party as the chief friend of labor.

"It is not a labor party now," he said, "although it is proud of the great army of laboring men that march in it. It wrote into the laws of this country for the first time the bold declaration that the labor of a human being was not a commodity or an article of commerce, that you could no longer trade in men as you would trade in goods or coin.

"It recognized by law the power of laboring men to combine for their own advantage and collectively to bargain for their own welfare and improvement.

"It recognized for employes the eight hour day as a standard for their daily toil, and in industries like the railroads that it had the power to regulate, it recognized the same identical principles and made it run."

SEEK CHRISTMAS CHEER FUNDS.

Victoria council, Ladies of Isabella, will hold a penny sale in the Rose room of the Great Northern hotel this afternoon and evening, to raise funds for its share in the Christmas cheer work of the organization.

INDORSEMENT OF 'WHO'S WHO-ERS' CHEERS UP DAVIS

'Independents' Boost Dem. Nominee.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 18.—[Special.]—John W. Davis and his aids are taking new courage from the number of prominent Americans, independent in their politics, who have come out in support of the Democratic ticket, according to a statement issued by the Democratic national committee.

"During the last few weeks, a score or more of well known Americans, some of them Republicans, but all of them independents, have come out into the open in support of Mr. Davis," it is stated.

The Davis "Who's Who."

The committee mentions on the list: Dr. Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard; Dr. John Grier Hibben, president of Princeton; Henry Noble MacCracken, president of Vassar; Ellery Sedgwick of Boston, editor of the Atlantic Monthly; Ida M. Tarbell, writer; Samuel Untermyer, New York lawyer; William C. Thompson, president of Ohio university; Meredith Nicholson, novelist.

Dr. Henry Van Dyke, writer and former minister to Holland; Frederick R. Coudert, New York lawyer; Theodore Marburg, Baltimore, author and minister to Belgium under President Taft; Irving Fisher of Yale university; Harry A. Garfield, president of Williams college; Hamilton Holt, former editor of The Independent, and Matthew Hale, former chairman of the Roosevelt progressive party.

Two World Peace Movers.

"Included in the above list," the committee adds, "are two of the thirty-one signers of the famous petition of 1920 urging independents to vote for Harding and Coolidge as the best means of promoting world peace. They are Mr. Dabney and Dr. Hibben."

BEG YOUR PARDON

Charles Deutschmann, national president of the National Association of Piano Tuners, Inc., denies the statement which appeared in THE TRIBUNE on Oct. 11 in the story referring to a purported meeting of that association. He says, "Radio does not interfere with the piano tuning business, on the contrary radio rather increases the demand for piano tuning. The meeting last week was a local affair and had no bearing on the national association." He denies knowing any one by the name of John T. Walker, who was reported as chairman of the executive committee and who stated that "piano tuning prices must be increased to meet the falling off in business."

Woman Sues Another for Spouse's Lost Love

A damage suit valuing the affection of Julius Langer, 60, at $25,000, was filed in the Superior court yesterday by Mrs. Frieda Langer, 2356 West Van Buren street, against Mrs. Larschied, 56, 2443 Lexington street.

VOTERS WISE UP ON HOW TO VOTE IN BIG ELECTION

BY PARKE BROWN.

Election day is two weeks from next Tuesday. And many voters who have been skipping the columns and columns of political matter for weeks and months are beginning to wake up and ask what it's all about.

From present indications a real scramble for information will develop in a week or so—not for propaganda concerning issues and candidates, but for technical information concerning ballots, the niceties of "scratching" and other facts concerning election methods and machinery.

"What offices are to be filled?" "Can one vote for a Republican for President, and a Democrat for governor?" Such questions are beginning to pour in upon election officials, newspapers and other sources of information.

Hard Nuts to Crack.

Many of these questions can be answered by any precinct worker. Of course the voter can vote for a Republican for President and for a Democrat for governor. There are several legal ways of splitting a ticket.

But some of the queries cannot be dismissed so briefly. For example, one of the newly awakened has been heard to ask how big a block of population a presidential elector represents, whether he is elected or appointed, and whether he can vote as he pleases or according to the vote of his district.

This batch of question marks would bring a smile to the face of the precinct captain. The experienced political worker knows that electors are not chosen by districts. They are elected by the state at large. The federal constitution provides that each state shall have representatives in the electoral college—which elects the President and Vice President—a number of representatives equal to the combined total of its congressmen, congressmen at large, and United States senators.

Illinois Has 29.

In the case of Illinois there are twenty-five congressional districts, each of which elects a congressman. There are two congressmen at large. And, of course, the state has two senators. Thus the state is entitled to name twenty-nine electors. The Republicans and the Democrats named their nominees in their state conventions. The La Follette third party put its candidates on the ballot by petition.

Another question frequently asked concerns the method of electing in the event no candidate has a majority in the electoral college. The constitution provides that in such an event the house of representatives shall proceed to choose a President and the senate to choose a Vice President. Pages and pages have been published on this subject recently, and the fact that the present house is deadlocked so that a Vice President chosen by the senate would occupy the White House for the next four years.

But probably the largest group of questions from the newly awakened concern the scope of the election on Nov. 4. What offices are to be filled?

Chicago List Long.

The complete list for Chicago is longer than that for most communities because the ballot will carry the names of candidates for the sanitary district and the municipal courts. But the ballots everywhere will be long. Every state in the country votes for presidential electors, United States senators and congressmen. All Illinois counties vote on the constitutional state offices and on the principal county offices except those of county treasurer and county clerk, which are to be filled two years hence. The Chicago list is as follows:

Twenty-nine presidential electors.
United States senator.
Two congressmen at large.
One congressman in each congressional district.
Governor.
Secretary of state.
State auditor.
Attorney general.
State treasurer.
Three university trustees.
One state senator in each even numbered district.
Three state representatives in each legislative district.
State's attorney.
County recorder.
Circuit court clerk.
Superior court clerk.
Coroner.
Two assessors.
Member of the board of review.
County surveyor.
Three sanitary trustees.
Two Superior court judges—vacancies.
One Circuit court judge—vacancy.
Chief justice of Municipal court.
Twelve associate judges of Municipal court.
Clerk Municipal court.
Bailiff Municipal court.

Question of Judgeships.

There is still a question about two of the judicial vacancies, as County Clerk Sweitzer has not indicated whether he will place them on the ballot, and the fight to compel him to do so is now before the Illinois Supreme court.

Let us show you on the screen

The fact that the Cine-Kodak and Kodascope really do make personal motion pictures as easily as a Brownie makes snapshots is readily demonstrated. Come in and spend a pleasant fifteen minutes finding out. We'll be glad to show you the outfit and to explain its use, and then show you the pictures themselves in motion on the screen.

BOB IS SECOND IN STRAW VOTE OF NORTH SIDE

Coolidge Easily Keeps the Lead for Presidency.

PRESIDENTIAL POLL.

Candidate—	First poll.	Second poll.	Totals to date.	Pct.
Coolidge	1,505	2,299	3,804	46.63
Davis	408	380	788	9.66
La Follette	2,014	1,435	3,449	42.28
Fosser	75	41	116	1.42
Totals	4,002	4,065	8,157	99.99

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

Senator La Follette dropped back and Calvin Coolidge gained the lead in the second Presidential poll of THE TRIBUNE, taken last week. The territory canvassed was largely on the north side, although several spots west of the river are included in the totals.

The north side residents are not anxious to place the senator from Wisconsin in the White House. They have said so twice in the polls of THE TRIBUNE two weeks ago and yesterday—that they don't want La Follette.

The second canvass gives evidence of a lack of work on the part of the Republican leaders for the national ticket. Coolidge did not run so well on the north side as he did in the canvass of two weeks ago, while the Badger state candidate did better.

The difference in the two north side polls in percentages, which reduces the strength to a basis of 100, is shown as follows:

Candidate.	Yesterday.	Two wks. earlier.
Coolidge	54.34	50.45
Davis	9.34	10.25
La Follette	35.30	29.29
Fosser	1.01	6.99
Totals	99.99	99.99

Although it might seem that John W. Davis was at the bottom two weeks ago he also appears by the comparison of the two polls to be going down. Possibly his Chicago speeches made some friends for him on the west side, but north siders are not readily convinced by Democratic talks. They are decidedly Republican.

La Follette Stronger.

La Follette also showed more strength this week on the west side than he did a fortnight ago. His gain in polls of two sides of the city effect the Coolidge lead. That can be presented by a comparison of the percentages of votes received by each candidate two weeks ago and yesterday. Each one's per cent means between 8,000 and 9,000 votes on Nov. 4.

The following table shows the percentages of the straws collected which each candidate for President received in both the preliminary poll and the one now in progress for the west and north sides combined:

Candidate—	Yesterday.	Two weeks Earlier
Coolidge	46.63	49.05
Davis	9.66	12.63
La Follette	42.28	36.78
Fosser	1.42	1.50
Totals	99.99	99.96

There is a margin of safety for Coolidge in those percentages which indicates that he will carry the city.

Summary of Polls.

Not exactly the same spots were polled last week which were canvassed two weeks ago, but in general the two straws represent approximately the same territory. A comparison of the two polls, in straws, which some readers prefer, although the difference in number is considerable, may be summarized as follows:

Candidate—	Poll last week.	Poll fortnight ago.
Coolidge	3,804	2,968
Davis	788	739
La Follette	3,449	2,151
Fosser	116	89
Totals	8,157	5,947

The number of votes received by each presidential candidate at each location polled yesterday are as follows:

Location—	Coolidge.	Davis.	La Follette.	Fosser.
Kedzie and 28th	50	61	42	5
Crawford and 26th	32	14	60	1
Irv. Pk. and Crawford	71	11	60	0
Belmont and Clark	120	38	73	2
Chicago and Clark	130	28	214	3
North and Clark	64	6	57	3
Chicago and Clark	119	32	170	7
Diversey and Clark	133	11	30	0
Ashland and Belmont	114	17	82	7
Robey and Lincoln	162	16	99	9
Wilson and Broadway	213	21	123	1
Sheridan and Wilson	119	21	38	0
Loyola "L" station	100	24	26	0
Clark and Devon	72	33	49	2
Diversey and Clark	168	8	40	0
Ashland and Belmont	64	1	60	4
Broadway and Grace	25	2	25	0
Wilson and Broadway	127	29	66	2
Wilson and Broadway	244	31	54	4
Totals	2,209	380	1,485	41

It will be noticed that THE TRIBUNE polled Wilson and Broadway four times and at two different hours and the intersection of Chicago and Clark twice. A different vote taker was used in each poll.

Sven Hedin Denounces Ossendowsky as Faker

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 17.—The famous Swedish explorer, Sven Hedin, today publicly denounced the Polish author, M. Ossendowsky, who wrote "Men, Beasts, and Gods," as a swindler who is cheating the whole world with his fantastic stories from Mongolia and other parts of Asia. From Egypt, M. Ossendowsky writes the Swedish publisher, Mr. Geber, promising that after a visit to Poland he will meet Mr. Hedin in a public meeting in Stockholm to refute the criticism.

COOLIDGE WILL WIN, HENNING'S TRIP INDICATES

Democrats, Beaten, Prefer Chaos to Cal.

with an aggregate of 18 electoral votes. Then there are five states which he has a fair chance of carrying, namely:

Montana	4	Washington	7
New Mexico	3
Arizona	3	Total	20
Nevada	3

If he should carry all of these states La Follette would have a total of thirty-eight votes in the electoral college, and there would be no danger of the election being deadlocked, unless at the same time Davis should take some sixty votes away from the number I have assigned Coolidge.

This Means a Deadlock.

Thus, if on the foregoing basis Davis instead of Coolidge should carry both New York and either Indiana or New Jersey no candidate would have a majority and the election would go to congress. That Davis could do that now appears distinctly improbable.

Present conditions in the several states, so far as it is possible to gauge them, do not justify me in giving Davis more than 195 votes at the utmost. He would have that total if, in addition to the 170, he should gain New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Maryland, and West Virginia.

Then, suppose that La Follette, in addition to the thirty-eight I tentatively allot him, should carry Nebraska, Minnesota, and South Dakota. His aggregate would rise to sixty-three. Coolidge still would have 273, a majority of fifteen.

Skeptical of Extremes.

I do not believe that Davis will go as high as 195 or La Follette up to 63, and consequently I think the chances are against the projection of the election into congress.

As a matter of fact, Coolidge has as good a chance of carrying Montana and Washington as La Follette has of getting Minnesota, South Dakota, and Nebraska. Coolidge has as good a chance of carrying Missouri and Oklahoma as Davis has of carrying Maryland and West Virginia.

If, however, both Davis and La Follette were to attain the strength indicated in this last calculation it would not take much to deadlock the election. If Coolidge were then to lose New Jersey or Indiana to Davis or either Iowa or California to La Follette no candidate would have a majority.

It's Up to Conservatives.

Much now depends on the extent to which the Democratic managers can hold the conservative Democrats in the east in line for Davis. The radical Democrats have gone over to La Follette past recovery. If the conservative Democrats should become convinced that the only way to head off La Follette and Bryan is to plump for Coolidge, as they intend to do in a number of western states, the Davis total will slump even below 170 in all probability.

Much also depends on the extent to which conservative Democrats in some close western states vote for La Follette, not because they approve his principles but because they hope to enable La Follette to get enough electoral votes to throw the election into congress where Davis or Bryan would have a chance of winning the presidency.

DAVID THREATENS CITY OFFICIALS WHO DISOBEY HIM

City officials will go to jail for contempt of court if they ever again serve an order of the Municipal court overriding one of his orders, it was declared yesterday by Judge Joseph B. David of the Superior court.

With that warning, the judge dismissed contempt charges brought against George Woods, Municipal court bailiff, and Richey V. Graham, superintendent of the house of correction. They had rearrested and confined Justin Zoles, 184 East 116th street, whose commitment on a charge of possessing a still had been declared a nullity by Judge David.

After evidence was presented indicating that the soft drink parlor of Julius Benvenuti at 2900 South La Salle street, was a gambling place, Judge Joseph B. David yesterday refused to issue a writ of mandamus compelling Mayer Dever to issue Benvenuti a license to operate.

BETWEEN ROYAL VISITS

Chicago Has Grown From a City of 160,000 to 3,000,000 Population!

WHEN Prince Edward, grandfather of H. R. H., the Prince of Wales, visited Chicago in 1860, he found an "immense city with rows of stately streets, noble public buildings, and a population of 160,000." Members of his party expressed apprehension that Chicago might overbuild itself! Instead, it has doubled in size again and again, making fortunes in real estate that have set a world record.

Prince Edward's grandson has this week been welcomed by a metropolis nineteen times as large as the Chicago of 1860! And there is no danger even today that this remarkable city will "overbuild itself". The next royal visit may be to a Chicago of 10,000,000 population!

We who live and work here seem too close to operations to fully appreciate the investment opportunities of Chicago real estate. But shrewd business men the country over are buying property here—purely as an investment. The firm of Krenn & Dato alone has sold undeveloped property to the extent of millions of dollars during the past two years!

We are in a position to offer choice home, apartment and business sites in the most desirable sections of Chicago and vicinity—property that should pay handsome dividends in years to come.

Get in touch with us immediately—that you may grow rich with Chicago. Mail the coupon.

HARD FIGHT FOR 21 SENATE SEATS NOW UNDER WAY

Only 11 Nominees Seem Sure to Be Elected.

BY ARTHUR CRAWFORD.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 18.—[Special.]—Less than a dozen senators whose terms are drawing to a close are certain of reelection if claims of the rival campaign managers are to be believed.

Out of thirty-two seats to be filled in November, the election of only ten present senators and one new nominee is undisputed. There are at least eight other nominees about whose election there seems but little doubt, but in each the opposition is claiming some chance of victory. In the other thirteen contests it is admitted on all sides that the results are in doubt.

Complications growing out of the three cornered presidential race and the injection of various issues have served to increase rather than diminish the number of doubtful senatorial fights and make the complexion of the next senate more than ever uncertain.

Seventeen G. O. P. Terms Expire.

Official prognostications emanating from the Democratic senatorial committee concede the reelection of only two out of eleven present Republican senators who have been renominated. These two are Senator Borah [Ida.] and Senator McNary [Ore.].

Altogether the terms of seventeen Republican senators were to expire next March. Senator Fernald [Me.] was reelected in September. Senator Colt [R. I.] died during the summer. Senators Ball [Dem.], McCormick [Ill.], and Sterling [S. D.], were defeated for renomination. Senator Elkins [W. Va.] was not a candidate. The other six Republican senators who have been renominated and whose reelection is not conceded by the Democrats are Senators Edge [N. J.], Keyes [N. H.], Phipps [Col.], Bursum [N. M.], Warren [Wyo.], Capper [Kas.], Couzens [Mich.], Brookhart [Ia.], and Norris [Neb.].

The Republican Forecast.

The Republicans concede that there is doubt as to the reelection of Senators Edge, Phipps, and Bursum. The old guard Republicans wish there were doubt as to the reelections of Senators Brookhart and Norris, but even the Democrats are rather faint in their claims of the possible success of the Democratic opponents of these two radicals. There also seems little chance of defeating Senator Couzens. Senators Keyes, Warren, and Capper are generally believed to be quite certain of reelection.

In New Jersey is one of the hottest of the senatorial contests, with Frederick W. Donnelly carrying the Democratic colors against Senator Edge.

Democratic nominees against the other Republican senators are George E. Ferrand, against Senator Keyes; Judge Robert R. Rose against Senator Warren; James Malone, against Senator Capper; Mortimer E. Cooley, against Senator Couzens; Daniel F. Steck, against Senator Brookhart; and J. J. Thomas, against Senator Norris.

Deneen Favorite in Illinois.

In two out of five states where outgoing Republican senators were not renominated it is regarded as fairly certain that the Republican nominees will win. These are Illinois, where former Gov. Charles S. Deneen is expected to win over A. A. Sprague (Dem.), and South Dakota, where Gov. W. H. McMaster is counted upon to win against a miscellaneous field of eight opponents from the opposition.

The Democrats claim a chance of success in both cases. The other three states are Rhode Island, where the death of the late Senator Colt left a wide open field; Delaware, where Senator Ball was rejected by the state convention, and West Virginia, where Senator Elkins chose not to seek renomination. The Rhode Island fight appears to be decidedly in doubt, with Jesse H. Metcalf as the Republican candidate and Gov. William S. Flynn as the Democratic.

Sure Democratic Winners.

The Republicans concede without question the reelection of eight present Democratic senators and one new Democratic nominee. The eight are Senators Glass [Va.], Simmons [N. C.], Harris [Ga.], Heflin [Ala.], Harrison [Miss.], Ransdell [La.], Robinson [Ark.], and Sheppard [Tex.].

The new nominee is former Gov. Cole Blease [S. C.], who defeated Senator Dial in the primaries.

The reelection of Senator Magnus Johnson [Farmer-Labor, Minn.] is not conceded by either Republicans or Democrats.

FOSDICK HELD BEST PREACHER BY EDITOR BEST

Banned Editorial Hits at Divine's "Expulsion."

Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick was called "the premier gospel preacher of the present generation" in the editorial which The Continent, organ of the Presbyterian church, refused to print. The editorial was written by Nolan R. Best, fourteen years editor of The Continent. On this account Mr. Best announced his resignation. The Continent is published in Chicago.

The editorial was occasioned by the recent resignation of Dr. Fosdick as associate pastor of the First Presbyterian church, New York City, made at the behest of the general assembly of the Presbyterian church.

Mr. Best speaks of Dr. Fosdick's resignation as "expulsion" from the church. He says the presbyteries might have prevented the action by a vote changing the constitution had they realized the bearing of the situation.

"Too many Americans have heard Dr. Fosdick," said Mr. Best, "for them to feel sympathy for this Presbyterian exclusiveness."

Opportunity to Change Rule.

A portion of the editorial follows:

"Whoever knows 'the inside' of this matter knows that just within the year past the presbyteries of the church had the chance to change the constitution in a way that would have obviated this drastic application of it. The failure to amend is not surprising, perhaps, for the whole bearing of the proposed amendment was not then apparent."

This point having been submitted to Prof. A. C. Zenos of McCormick theological seminary to clarify Dr. Zenos said:

"The vote of the presbyteries probably referred to by Mr. Best was the one which sought to embody in law what has been the custom, namely, to allow a minister of another denomination to preach in a Presbyterian church at the discretion of the presbytery. This overture was defeated and it is thought that Mr. Best in his editorial refers to this fact."

Holds It Repellant to Public.

"Presbyterian people in general could not realize how repellent to the public mind would be an ecclesiastical vote exercised on the premier gospel preacher of the present generation," the editorial continued.

"Now sorrowfully enough that popular condemnation will come home to the mass of Presbyterians too keenly for even the remotest rural congregation to escape the sting of it.

"This expulsion of Fosdick will be known in city, town, village, hamlet, everywhere. Were there any possibility of making it appear that the church was protecting the purity of the gospel against some degenerating travesty, it might be possible to extract sympathy from a matter of fact for Presbyterian exclusiveness."

The next time you are hungry for a real steak come to the North American Restaurant and eat this specialty of ours. It consists of a thick, juicy tenderloin—the sort of steak for which you usually pay $1.25, or more. With it we include a generous helping of potatoes and vegetables, yet the price is only 85 cents.

You may not believe it possible to get a really fine steak for such a low price. But try it just once, and you'll be convinced.

Of course, if we served food to your table, we would be compelled to charge considerably more than that price. But this is a Common Sense Restaurant where you "serve yourself." Hence, we don't need to add anything to our prices to cover the cost of "service." And naturally our big volume—the greatest ever achieved by any Chicago dining place—is another lever we have in forcing prices down.

CITIZENS FIGHT FOR "GATEWAY" AMENDMENT

Proposition Will Appear on Little Ballot.

Since it promises no quid pro quo for them, the political organizations probably will put no pressure behind the "gateway" amendment to the state constitution, which will be submitted to the voters on Nov. 4, but because of the almost universal approval of the proposal a number of non-political organizations will make a real campaign in support of it.

The Chicago Association of Commerce started it yesterday and it is expected that the Chicago Citizens' association, the Civic Federation, and similar bodies both in Chicago and downstate will give active aid in arousing the voters.

Neglect May Be Fatal.

It has been pointed out that neglect would be as fatal as opposition, for the adoption of the amendment requires the favorable votes of a majority of those who vote in the election—not merely a majority of those who vote on this specific proposal.

It is conceded generally that the incorporation of the "gateway" amendment in the state will be a big step toward constitutional revision. The present constitution stipulates that not more than one of its articles may be amended at a time. The proposed change would permit the legislature to propose amendments to two articles during a single session for submission to the voters.

There is only one other angle to the proposal. That is the provision that no amendments shall be made while the nation is at war or within a year following the signing of peace. This is intended as a safeguard against wartime hysteria.

What Citizens Say.

The Association of Commerce has opened its fight for the amendment with a letter sent out by its president, W. R. Dawes, in response to which expressions of hearty approval have been received from a number of well known men. These have been made public.

Among these statements are the following:

David E. Shanahan—Every citizen in Chicago should vote for it. Since the constitutional convention failed, it is the only means by which Chicago can get what it needs.

Judge John P. McGoorty—This is a step forward which every one should urge and vote for.

Judson F. Stone—Two amendments will be about as easily understood as one. The proposed measure safeguards and protects the present constitution.

Melvin C. Traylor—The gateway amendment is the only way the people can change our constitution to fit in with our modern state.

Augustus Peabody—It is a step in the right direction.

N. W. MacChesney — The present method of amendment is too slow. People are in favor of the constitution as a whole, but each have one or two articles that they desire changed, consequently it remains unchanged.

Harry Eugene Kelly—Under its present provisions it is almost impossible to make desirable amendments to the constitution. I believe that a more liberal process of amendment ought to be adopted.

CHICAGO BATTLE GROUND OF LAST CAMPAIGN FIGHT

Cook county this week becomes the final battle ground of the Illinois state campaign. Candidates on the Republican and Democratic state tickets virtually have ended their speaking engagements in the downstate, and are coming into Cook county to battle at close range until election day, Nov. 4.

"Illinois or Len?" is the question asked in a new pamphlet issued by Democratic state headquarters. The Nov. 4 election, so far as the state issue is concerned, is a referendum which will decide whether Len Small or the state treasury will get $2,000,000 involved in the treasury interest suits, the pamphlet says.

"The election of governor and attorney general is a referendum on that question," it says. "Those who want Len Small to get the $2,000,000 will vote for him and the candidate for attorney general who is his running mate. Those who want the state of Illinois to get it will vote for Norman L. Jones for governor and Thomas F. Donovan for attorney general.

"Every citizen before he goes into the polling place should ask himself this question: 'Shall I vote for Illinois or Len?'"

Commenting on the statement of Oscar Carlstrom, Republican candidate for attorney general, that he will dismiss the suits against Small if elected, the pamphlet says Small is a candidate again "solely because he knows that unless he is elected Illinois will get the $2,000,000 and he will lose it."

PRETTY GIRL IS IDENTIFIED IN BIG CHECK FRAUD

Accused by Shopkeepers —Denies Guilt.

More than thirty check frauds upon as many west side shopkeepers, police believe, were cleared yesterday by the arrest of Mrs. Loretta Smith, alias Rena Evans, a pretty 20 year old girl, living at 2216 Campbell Park west.

For two hours Mrs. Smith sat stolidly at the detective bureau while the defrauded merchants marched by in single file under supervision of Lieut. Joseph Kakacek. Each of the merchants unhesitatingly pointed an accusing finger at the girl.

"That's the woman. No question about it," declared the shopkeepers.

Size of Check a Clew.

It is believed the check passer realized several thousand dollars during her several months' career. One peculiarity, detectives say, is that each of the checks was invariably for $17.50. It was the persistent recurrence of this sum that largely contributed to the alleged forger's downfall.

But the girl throughout the "show-up" merely stared back at her accusers. She stubbornly denies guilt. She was taken into custody after Lieut. Kakacek and Sergt. H. Cleveland discovered her secreted in a closet at the home of her sister, Mrs. Mary O'Connell, 3006 5th avenue. She has a 2 year old son, she said, and is estranged from her husband.

Get Canceled Checks.

Canceled checks to the value of $50,000 represented the loot gleaned by two armed bandits yesterday who held up James Healy, a messenger of the Stony Island State bank, 6754 Stony Island avenue. The bandits ran south from 67th street and Stony Island avenue, the scene of the crime, to a nearby alley and escaped.

A sum of $40 found its way into the coffers of the Policemen's Benevolent association yesterday though a bit of clever sleuthing on the part of Detective Sergeants Bowen and Wachholzer. The detectives interrupted Edward Ryan in an alleged attempt to "frame" an unwary traveler at the Northwestern railroad depot. Ryan and his pal, John Dugan, proffered the $40 in an attempt to bribe the detectives. Judge Eberhardt donated the money to the association and, in addition, fined Ryan $25 and costs.

Two Negroes, Sylvester O'Brien, 3828 Federal street, and William Hollinger, 4521 South State street, confessed to police they were responsible for the theft of $1,100 in clothing from the shop of P. W. Mitchell, 5204 South State street.

Messenger Robbed of Checks

Capt. Patrick McCauley of the Woodlawn police district questions James Healy, bank messenger who was held up and robbed by two armed men. All the bandits got was $50,000 in canceled checks. Healy is a messenger for the Stony Island State bank. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

GEN. HARTIGAN FORESAW DEATH, NOTE INDICATES

On Oct. 10 THE TRIBUNE printed an obituary, recording the death of Thomas L. Hartigan, a famous soldier, attorney, and Chicagoan, who died the day before in Manila after a short illness.

Yesterday THE TRIBUNE received a letter from Gen. Hartigan.

"I am inclosing an epitome of my rather busy life, which I think may interest my old Chicago friends when they see my name in the list of those departed. I am sending this to THE TRIBUNE to be filed and await my ultimate disappearance, which may take place at any time," the letter reads. "I was a classmate to Shelby Patterson, Stanley Black, Dr. Haberer . . . many old newspaper men will remember Hartigan's 'Tigers' . . . please file this . . . let us hope that it will be some time before it is used . . . I am afraid it will be very shortly . . . I have read THE TRIBUNE since 1874 . . ."

The letter was dated Sept. 12, one month before the general died. The full obituary of the soldier having been printed on Oct. 11, the data received yesterday goes to the file of yesterday's newspapers, the morgue.

RADIO AMATEURS BRIDGE DISTANCE OF 13,000 MILES

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, Oct. 18.—The 13,000 miles between London and New Zealand were bridged for the first time this morning and last night when two British amateurs exchanged messages successfully with low powered home made stations.

The Radio Society of Great Britain announced the feat this afternoon, naming E. J. Simonds, whose signal is G20D, as the man who talked across the world's top on this home made set. Mr. Simonds was astonished when on Thursday morning he heard Morse call Z4AG calling the American amateur, U6ARB, and realized that Z4AG was 13,000 miles away in New Zealand. The Englishman's reply was picked up in New Zealand Friday morning, according to a cablegram received here today.

Shortly after dawn this morning another British amateur, named Goyder, distinctly heard his sign, G2FZ, being sounded by New Zealand amateur Z4AG. The message from the far Pacific was:

"Please convey to the Radio Society of Great Britain greetings from New Zealand."

DR. BUNDESEN AIDS PASTEUR MEMORIAL MOVE

The next issue of the health bulletin, of which 100,000 copies will be issued, will be devoted to the subject of pasteurization, according to Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, commissioner of health. It is intended to acquaint the public with the widespread benefits of Pasteur's discoveries, and aims to cooperate thereby with the Pasteur Memorial committee, of which Dr. Frank Billings is chairman.

The committee is asking $100,000 with which to establish a monument and a research scholarship as a memorial to Pasteur. Small contributions from all parts of the city are sought, rather than a few large contributions.

Within the first twenty-four hours after letters of appeal had been mailed, contributions amounting to more than $1,000 were received at headquarters, 108 S. La Salle street. Moise Dreyfus is treasurer.

500 "Boulevard Stop" Signs for West Parks

ITALY'S QUOTA OF IMMIGRANTS CAUSES PROTEST

Condemning as "wicked, nefarious, vicious, and un-American" the Johnson immigration bill, twenty-five of the foremost Italian citizens of Chicago joined last evening at the Hotel Sherman in protest against what they termed an insult to their race in the quota of less than 4,000 allowed Italy under the bill, and adopted a resolution to join in a campaign against the Republican party "for having conceived, fostered and passed this unpatriotic and selfish law."

Speakers who voiced the sentiments of the Italians included Attorney Rocco De Stefano, Judge Francis Allegretti, Charles Coy, and Stephen A. Malatto. Judge Allegretti declared that pro-English propaganda had influenced the passage of the bill. The comparatively small quota allowed Italy, rather than the bill itself, was declared the point of contention according to the members of the Italian-American Immigration league, under whose auspices the meeting was held.

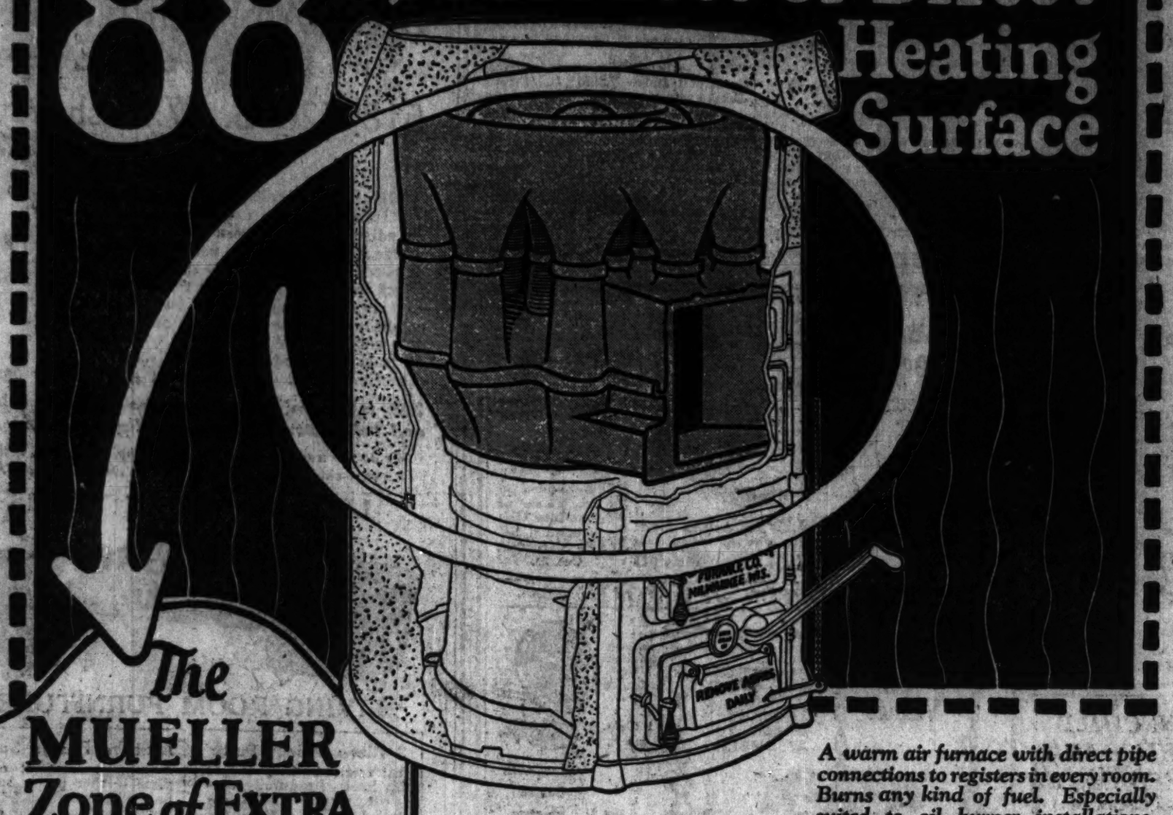
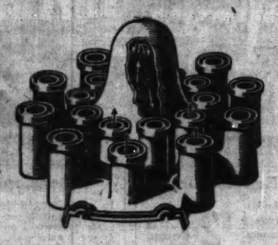
88 Square Feet of Direct Heating Surface



A warm air furnace with direct pipe connections to registers in every room. Burns any kind of fuel. Especially suited to oil burner installations.

The MUELLER Zone of EXTRA Heating Capacity

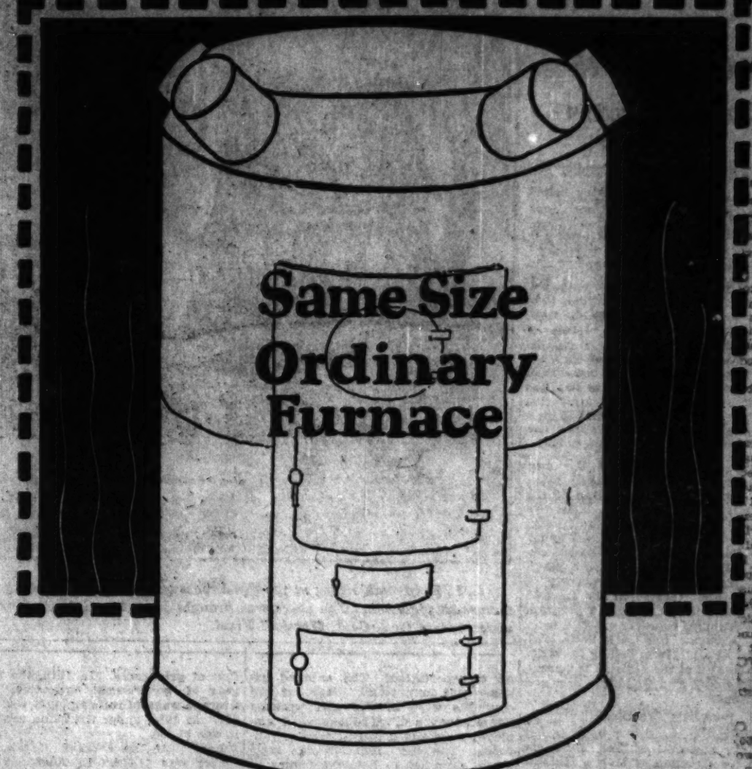


Water placed in a wide, shallow pan will heat much quicker than if placed in a narrow tin cup, because the pan has more square inches of heating surface. And for the same reason the pan will heat with a more moderate fire—saves fuel!

The Mueller Double Radiator Furnace is like the wide, shallow pan in that it has more square feet of direct heating surface than any other type of moist air furnace of equal size fire-pot. That is why it gives the greatest amount of heat for fuel burned.

Hot gases from firebed, passing from combustion chamber dome through twenty radiating pipes and two big, circular radiators, give up every ounce of heat value before escaping to the chimney. This means utmost fuel economy—more heat from a smaller fire.

42 Square Feet of Heating Surface



Get Double the Heating Surface with a MUELLER FURNACE

INVEST in heat when you buy a furnace. And be sure that that is what you get by specifying "Mueller Double Radiator Furnace"—the self-cleaning furnace with the zone of extra heating capacity.

The total heating area of the castings used in a 22-inch size Mueller Double Radiator Furnace is 88 square feet. The total heating surface of an ordinary furnace of equal fire-pot diameter is approximately 42 square feet. In other words, you get more than double the direct heating surface in the Mueller—and it is direct heating surface that transmits heat! The same ratio of extra heating capacity applies to all sizes of Mueller Double Radiator Furnaces. Figured on a basis of direct heating surface, the Mueller Double Radiator Furnace is the lowest-priced moist-air furnace you can buy.

No other furnace is like the Mueller Double Radiator Furnace. No other has as great an area of direct heating surface. No other furnace will supply so much heat with so little fuel!

How the Mueller Saves Coal

To get the same amount of heat from an ordinary furnace you would have to have a larger-size fire-pot. And the amount of coal a furnace burns depends, to a great extent, upon the size of the fire-pot. For example, a Mueller Double Radiator Furnace with a 22-inch fire-pot will burn approximately 3 tons of coal less, in a season, than an ordinary furnace with a 24-inch fire-pot. Yet the Mueller delivers the same volume of heat.

This is a very simple problem in arithmetic. Figure what three tons of coal saved per year amounts to in dollars and cents! Then credit the saving to a Mueller Double Radiator Furnace—and credit it further, with more dependable and more healthful heat that flows through your home in gentle, even-temperatured circulation. The Mueller Double Radiator Furnace has all the worth-while features of other good furnaces, plus exclusive features not found in any other.

Buy It On Easy Payments

If you are planning to build a new home—or if your present furnace is not giving satisfactory service—install a Mueller Double Radiator Furnace on our easy payment plan. Let it help earn its cost through its great saving of fuel. Get the full benefit of Mueller better, more economical heat—have a whole year in which to pay for the installation.

Every Mueller Installation Engineered

Every Mueller Furnace installation is engineered by a qualified heating man who knows his business. Complete installation plans and blue prints furnished free by our Engineering Department—every job made to "fit" the building for which it is wanted.

Sixty-seven years of successful furnace manufacturing experience stand back of every Mueller furnace.

FINDING LURE FOR LABOR BOB'S HARDEST TASK

Prosperity, High Wages Hard to Overcome.

—BY THOMAS WREN.

With the wheels of industry belted up to a high degree of speed, with good times and high wage rates dove-tailing with a protracted period of industrial tranquillity between employé and employer, Senator Robert M. La Follette has found it a greater task than he probably thought to dig up sufficient class appeal material to register heavily on wage earners.

Deprived to some extent of class appeal along industrial lines because of boom conditions, La Follette has had to fall back on the court injunction issue and the one on government ownership of railways.

The Spirit Behind.

While the leadership of the four train services brotherhoods make great ado over nationalization of the country's railroad systems, it is now generally thought that the rail union chiefs do so in a rather abstract spirit.

The large group of Socialist elements had to be satisfied, so a plank advocating government ownership of railroads was inserted in the La Follette platform. To provide a program flexible enough to cover all the more radical elements the La Follette leaders drafted a platform calling for strict public control of the nation's resources, including coal, iron, and other ores and timberlands.

Socialists Are Gleeful.

These nationalization proposals met with the approval of the Socialists under the direction of Morris Hillquit of New York. They received La Follette's pronouncements with glee. Overnight the garment workers in New York, Chicago, Cleveland, and other centers of the garment making industry started to whoop it up for "Bob." After years of waiting the Socialists believed their pet schemes were on the way to materialization.

During the first part of the celebration the officialdom of the American Federation of Labor remained on the side lines and viewed the proceedings with disdain. But after the Democratic convention split into factions over the K. K. K. issue the new conglomeration of political theorists had to be taken into consideration.

With reluctance then the American Federation of Labor officials condescended to support the candidacy of Senator La Follette as the third party aspirant for President.

For years Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, has fought the plan of government ownership of railroads. He not only fought the plan but also its champions. Of recent months Gompers' health has been very poor, and he hasn't been able to put up the fight that would be characteristic of his fifty years in organized labor.

At the Montreal convention of the American Federation of Labor in 1920, Gompers took the floor in opposition to the Plumb plan with a burning indictment of government ownership. "Enslavement" was the word used by the veteran labor leader in describing railroad nationalization on this historical occasion.

An Impassioned Speech.

"If I were in a minority of one in this convention," he said at that time, "I would want to cast my vote so that men of labor shall not willingly enslave themselves to government ownership nor enslave themselves under government authority in their industrial effort for freedom."

When discussing nationalization of railroads locomotive firemen, engineers, conductors, and brakemen talk of it in terms of how it was operated during the recent war times.

During the war orders were to speed up transportation. The entailed expense was immaterial. Wages of rail employés were boosted and working hours shortened. Thousands of employés were added to pay rolls of railroads. The wage inflation was absolutely essential to hold mechanics at work in the transportation industry and keep them from changing employment over to shipyard work where employés nearly dictated wage rates.

But those boom conditions were abnormal and there has arisen a general view that government ownership of railroads now would entail a different story. A glance at postoffice employés throughout the country has convinced some of the most skeptical of rail employés that they're much better off under private ownership than they would be as government employés.

The Postal Workers' Dilemma.

The postal employés for years have been willing and grateful to accept a pay boost on a one time basis while other groups of workers receive two, three and sometimes four pay increases. But when they seek a pay boost the postal employes have to petition their friends, who in turn write letters appealing to their representatives in congress to aid the program in behalf of the postal employes' wage boost.

Postal employes are "hog-tied" with red tape when it comes time for Uncle Sam to talk pay increases. This is said to be the reason postal employés have not kept pace with other classes of toilers. Theirs is a good example of government ownership.

It is argued that under government supervision strikes on railroads would be a thing of history. Orders issued would have to be obeyed and carried out to the letter. Wage increases or decreases would have to be accepted without ado.

Numerous positions such as train masters, superintendents, yard masters, foremen, and the like, it is contended, would be filled on a political basis and not on a merit plan, and transportation systems would become vast political organizations with factions interspersed with factions, one against the other.

Railway Men's Pay.

Railroad employés in this country are the best paid transportation workers in the world. They also work under better conditions and have many avenues opened to them for adjudication of grievances. In 1918, the first year of government operation, the average wage of rail employés was $1,419. In 1919, under the same control, it was $1,488.

Last year the average of rail employés was $1,619. In Australia the railroad systems are operated under government jurisdiction. Last year the average wage on railroads in the Antipodes was $1,149. Wages of rail employés on government owned railroads in Germany, Switzerland, and Italy were much lower than the wage rates paid in Australia.

War times swelled the membership of the organized labor movement to a notch above the 4,000,000 mark.

It is said that the present membership is a trifle under 3,000,000.

The Federation Problem.

Of late years the American Federation of Labor hasn't conducted any great drives for membership. With those conversant with trade unionism, organization work is tantamount in importance to the curbing of injunctions through legislative measures. It has been said that trade unionism will be just as strong as the efforts expended in that direction by its officials.

Government statistics show there are 40,000,000 men, women, and children employed in gainful occupations in the United States. Less than one-thirteenth of them belong to trade unions within the confines of the American Federation of Labor. It is estimated there are about 700,000 members in unions outside of the A. F. of L. These include organizations like the Brotherhoods of Firemen, Engineers, Conductors, Brakemen, and the large union of Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

"La Follette is a form of hysteria," asserted Peter Cunniff, a former organizer for the American Federation of Labor and now an editor of a local labor publication. "He will pass like a storm, but in so doing a lot of harm will be done to the trade union movement. I have been called a faker because I denounced La Folletteism. Wait until the parade ends in a blind alley on Nov. 4. There will be a lot of explaining to do on the part of some leaders."

WHERE IS ORVAL DEARDORFF?

WINS HER CHILD FROM HUSBAND WHO WED OFTEN

Mrs. Margaret Chapman won the custody of her 5 year old daughter by threatening to attack the validity of the marriage of her former husband, Frank Chapman, to his fourth wife. Mr. Chapman yielded to her demand after she threatened to attack their divorce.

Chapman, who is an executive of the International Harvester company, stipulated he should be allowed to see his daughter from time to time.

Mrs. Chapman had lost custody when she took the child to Paris, in spite of a court order. In her petition to get back the child she said she and her former husband had lived together until just a few months before the divorce on the charge of desertion. That charge demands two years' separation, to which Chapman had testified.

Superior Judge Harry A. Lewis intimated he will enter the formal decree as to the child Monday.

ILLINOIS CITIES LEAGUE NAMES CRABTREE HEAD

Kelly, Elgin, vice presidents; Elmer Nafziger, Springfield, general counsel; Prof. Lloyd Morey, Urbana, statistician; P. P. Flick, Riverdale, sergeant at arms; A. D. McLarty, Urbana, secretary; Prof. John A. Fairlie, Urbana, treasurer.

CALUMET HARBOR BROUGHT NEARER BY NEW DEAL

Development of an industrial harbor in Lake Calumet is a long step nearer the actual construction stage as the result of agreement between the city and the Pullman company on hitherto disputed boundary lines and riparian rights.

The settlement, approved Friday by Circuit Judge Hugo M. Friend, clears away the last of numerous similar obstacles to the improvement.

Intensive study of the two suggested plans for the harbor construction will be undertaken at once by the council harbors, wharves, and bridge committee, its chairman, Ald. Guy Guernsey [6th], declared last night. The Nickel Plate railroad has offered to build the harbor in return for belt line privileges and considerable terminal yard space.

BARGAIN FURNITURE EXCHANGE
518-520 S. Wabash Ave.
(South of Congress)

THE home furnishing bargains displayed in this Hartman store consist of the "shop-worn" merchandise which is drawn from our many retail stores, where it may have been used as window display pieces, or become slightly soiled—also "trade-in" merchandise which we have taken in on the purchase of new goods. In every case these goods have been thoroughly reconditioned where necessary, and are offered in desirable condition. At the prices we quote, you can save at least half your home furnishing expenditure, and sometimes much more, and get good quality besides.

This is the only Hartman store where "trade-in" and "shop-worn" goods are displayed and sold.

We do not trade in or resell any bedding, mattresses, springs, etc.—only new merchandise of this character is sold.

This way of oil heating ends all doubt

Proved for 5 Years

automatic, quiet, odorless new super-safety device

Science has found the right way to heat with oil. And proved it for five years.

This way is radically different from the old-fashioned methods. It will interest you to see this oil burner that has solved the problem. You need know nothing of mechanics to understand it.

So far as nearly 20,000 present owners are concerned there is no heating problem. Their homes are always exactly the temperature they enjoy. They smell no fumes. They see no dirt or dust. They hear no unpleasant noise. They know that it is safe beyond question.

You, too, will have this experience when you heat your home this scientific way.

Inclusive Thermal Safety Control
This simple device stops the whole plant unless everything is working 100%.

One right way to burn oil

Four new facts about oil burning were first used by our engineers six years ago. They are the now famous four natural laws. They explained the difficulties others were having in trying to burn oil.

So we built an oil burner in accordance with those laws. For five winters now, Oil-O-Matic has answered every demand in thousands of homes, large and small.

When you buy an oil burner see that it agrees with these laws. If you follow them you cannot go wrong.

The four famous laws

The first law says that oil must be broken up into a fine mist. So fine, it will float like a fog. All other ways violate this law.

After the oil is broken up, the second law demands that it be burned before it touches anything. Carbon and soot will surely result otherwise. So no plates, pots, chamber or any part of an oil burner should be inside your furnace or boiler.

According to the third law, the amount of air that is mixed with the oil must be exact. Naturally this cannot be left to someone's opening or closing a damper. The oil burner itself must measure the amount of air.

The fourth law is just as important. Oil cannot burn perfectly without reflected heat. So unless the firebox of your heating plant is lined with brick, it is impossible to get perfect combustion.

It is this way of burning oil that has made the use of fuel oil really successful for heating homes. It is the method found only in Oil-O-Matic.

Note these exclusive features

There are other features that make Oil-O-Matic different from any other device that burns oil.

Our Heating Plant is Steam ☐ Hot Water ☐ Vapor ☐ Hot Air ☐

You can prove this is the right way

1. It is hard to light solid paper. 2. Torn bits easily burn.

LAW No. 1. Oil must be broken up
Oil-O-Matic breaks up fuel oil so fine it floats like a fog.

3. Held this way the flame is clean and does not smoke. 4. When it touches something soot is always formed.

LAW No. 2. Oil must burn in mid-air
Oil-O-Matic burns oil in mid-air. There's no part inside the firebox.

5. A match held in the air on a pin will burn completely. 6. It goes out when laid in an ash tray for lack of air.

LAW No. 3. Oil must be mixed with air
Oil-O-Matic automatically mixes an exact amount of air with every drop of oil.

7. On a warm day it is considerably cooler in open spaces. 8. It is almost unbearable between big buildings.

LAW No. 4. Oil burns best in reflected heat
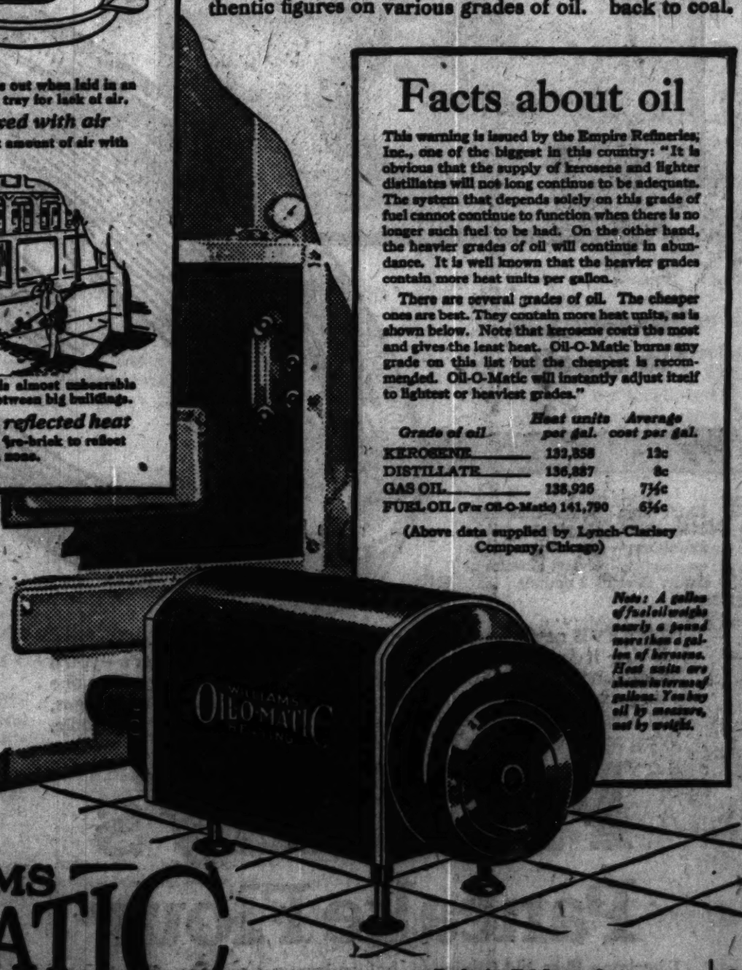
Oil-O-Matic dealers line the furnace with fire-brick to reflect heat back into the combustion zone.

No Part Inside the Firebox
No plates, pots, pilot light or anything inside to burn out or replace.



We originated and perfected five years ago the Williams Thermal Safety Control. It put an end to the open can designed to catch liquid fuel oil. It ended all worry about the oil not lighting or blowing out.

This positive device watches over your entire plant. Oil-O-Matic can't run at all, unless it runs right. Not a drop of oil can flow. The motor is stopped. Ignition is shut off. This control is the greatest advance in oil burner construction since our application of the four laws.

Listed as standard by the Underwriters' Laboratories

Of course there's no continuous pilot light. That is too wasteful of gas. It has no place on a modern oil burner.

Oil-O-Matic burns a cheap, low gravity oil instead of expensive kerosene and distillate. This gives you more heat units at a lower cost. See chart below for authentic figures on various grades of oil.

So this perfected way, approved by leading combustion engineers, ends all doubt. Now no one need be without the comforts of oil heating. Oil-O-Matic can be installed in any good heating plant. Steam, hot water, vapor, hot air.

Easy terms—Guaranteed

The men who install and service your Oil-O-Matic are all trained men. Most of them are graduates of the Williams Institute of Heat Research. They have experience, facilities, organization and financial responsibility. They are backed by the largest producers of automatic oil burners in the world.

They will be glad to offer you terms if you want them. Our new deferred payment plan carries no interest on the notes.

Already there is a threatened shortage of Oil-O-Matics this fall. Get the facts now. See it demonstrated. Send the coupon for a copy of "Automatic Heating." It will answer every question. After you read it you will never go back to coal.

Facts about oil

This warning is issued by the Empire Refineries, Inc., one of the biggest in this country: "It is obvious that the supply of kerosene and lighter distillates will not long continue to be adequate. The system that depends solely on this grade of fuel cannot continue to function when there is no longer such fuel to be had. On the other hand, the heavier grades of oil will continue in abundance. It is well known that the heavier grades contain more heat units per gallon.

There are several grades of oil. The cheaper ones are best. They contain more heat units, as is shown below. Note that kerosene costs the most and gives the least heat. Oil-O-Matic burns any grade on this list but the cheapest is recommended. Oil-O-Matic will instantly adjust itself to lightest or heaviest grades."

Grade of oil	Heat units per gal.	Average cost per gal.
KEROSENE	133,358	12c
DISTILLATE	136,887	8c
GAS OIL	138,926	7¼c
FUEL OIL (For Oil-O-Matic)	141,790	6¼c

Note: A gallon of fuel oil weighs nearly a pound more than a gallon of kerosene. Heat units are shown in terms of gallons. You buy oil by measure, not by weight.

POSSE CAPTURES ALLEGED SLAYER OF GIRL TEACHER

Victim's Pupil Tells of Michigan Ax Murder.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Oct. 18.—[Special.]—Egbert Dyke, 34, suspected slayer of his former sweetheart, Miss Mollie Fleming, school teacher, who was killed yesterday at the Big Spring school house, where she taught, tonight surrendered to a number of Marne residents, and was turned over at once to Ottawa county officers.

Posses had been searching for Dyke since Miss Fleming was found dying in a wood shed in the rear of the little country school in which she taught. She had been struck on the head with an ax.

Dyke was spotted on the trunk line west of Marne by an automobile driver who rushed into the village and obtained help. They surrounded him. He is said to have confessed the crime. He said he was on his way to the home of Deputy Sheriff Peter Danforth to surrender. He was taken at once to the county jail at Grand Haven.

Dyke's Ungovernable Temper.

Dyke, it is said, was not an ideal wooer. He was morose at times, and a peculiar chuckle he emitted when amused and which won for him his nickname "Happy" was contrasted with an ungovernable temper, but his affection for the girl, who two months ago spurned him and later announced her engagement to Edward Knauff, caused him to lose interest in his work to such an extent he is declared to have lost his employment in a garage at Marne, and had recently been working in a Grand Rapids garage.

Uncouth in Appearance.

Dyke is declared to have been somewhat uncouth in appearance. He failed to attend to such matters as a shave or creased trousers when he went calling, and his slight deafness tended to emphasize little peculiarities to such an extent he seldom attended social functions.

His uncontrollable temper is thought to have seized him when Miss Fleming informed him, as she told her friend Miss Defroll she would, that she could not permit him to drive to her home in Marne as had been his Friday afternoon custom during the years they had been on friendly terms.

Anthony Schumacker, a pupil in the young woman's school, who was playing in the school yard when Miss Fleming was attacked, said: "We heard teacher scream 'Don't,' then all was quiet. Dyke came out of the wood shed, walked to his automobile, and drove away rapidly."

BRANTING AGAIN IS AT HELM OF SWEDISH NATION

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Oct. 18.—[By the Associated Press.]—Dr. Hjalmar Branting, leader of the Social Democratic party, again is premier of Sweden, having completed the task of forming a cabinet, intrusted to him after the resignation of the ministry headed by Ernst Trygger.

The new cabinet, made up exclusively of members of the Social Democratic party, is as follows:

Minister of foreign affairs, Prof. Oesten Unden, professor of law at Upsala university.

Chance to Get Wales' Pen at Auction Sale

When the prince of Wales visited the Wrigley building he signed his name in the guest book. Miss Lucia Sloan, who is in charge of registration there, has presented to John F. Gilchrist, general chairman of the home service drive of the Salvation Army, the pen the prince used. Mr. Gilchrist will auction off the pen this week for the benefit of the $319,000 fund, of which more than $160,000 has already been collected.

ENGINEERS FIGHT ALCOHOL RULE BY DRY OFFICERS

Supporting the American Chemical society and the American Institute of Chemical Engineers, the administrative board of the American Engineering council voted yesterday to oppose the Cramton bill, which would give prohibition forces control of industrial alcohol.

The engineers representing 200,000 of their profession demanded "a square deal for industry," and characterized the bureau of internal revenue as "an agency invested with despotic powers and responsible only to the secretary of the treasury."

The administrative board concluded its session.

"STATE TRADING" IN AUSTRALIA RUNS UP TAXES

Socialist Experiments Do Not Work Out.

BY FLOYD GIBBONS.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune.]

SYDNEY, Australia, Oct. 18.—State operation of industries and enterprises usually under private control have in practically every case failed in New South Wales. THE TRIBUNE, in a preceding article, presented several notable examples where businesses run by a labor Socialist government failed and entailed heavy losses to the taxpayer.

New South Wales' investment of $3,000,000 in the Walsh island dockyard commenced in February, 1913, and has been run at a loss, although it was not an industrial undertaking. No allowance was made for depreciation, and the plant was unable to pay interest on the money invested. Reports show that only in 1918, when the federal ship building program was in progress, did the establishment pay working expenses and provide a small surplus.

The state drug depot, state clothing factory and state motor garage, although characterized as state enterprises by the labor Socialists, did not compete with private enterprise and have been continued as adjuncts of public service by the nationalist government under control of the government supplies committee.

Reveals Haphazard Finance.

"State trading" is the name under which the Socialistic ventures are referred to in the state of western Australia, where records scattered over many departments reveal condition of haphazard finance, weak control, and absence of clearly defined industrial policies. The best report obtainable on these experiments appeared in the Perth Daily News, revealing conditions in 1922 in connection with the government operation of meat works and a steamship line. The report reads:

"The balance sheet of the Wyndham meat works for the last year shows fixed and working capital liabilities and sundry debts amounting to $6,090,000, with assets amounting to $4,030,000—a difference of some $2,060,000 has been lost. Half of the loss occurred in the working account and the other half represents the aggregate interest charged.

"War trading by steamers reduced the shipping losses almost $500,000 and paid the interest on the public funds invested in them, and returned over $500 revenue. But war trading did not last, with the result that the operations for 1922 showed a loss of about $350,000. Of this loss almost $100,000 was through depreciation, but the balance will be charged on possible future earnings until the inevitable writing off takes place.

"Unfortunately, the losses, though written off the concern, cannot be written off the shoulders of the taxpayers, who have to meet their obligations to the money lenders who invested our loans or obligations to private citizens, and municipal business corporations, and municipal business corporations."

Professor Advises U. S. to Learn About Europe

America cannot make progress in international relations without a better understanding of European conditions, Prof. James T. Shotwell, professor of history of Columbia university, told the Chicago Council on Foreign Relations at the Hotel Sherman yesterday. Prof. Shotwell said that Greece carried off the diplomatic honors of the fifth assembly of the league of nations.

Woman Finds Bones of Human in S. Side Refuse

The South Chicago police were notified yesterday that human bones were lying in a refuse pile at Jeffery avenue and East 92d street. The bones were apparently those of an adult. They were found by a woman. They were taken to the county morgue and an investigation started.

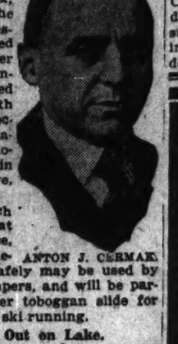
LEGION NOTES

All ex-service men who wish to join in the reorganization of South Shore post No. 888 of the American Legion and the procuring of a clubroom therefor at 8700 Stony Island avenue are asked to call upon, write or phone former Adjutant Fred B. Houghton, room 1934 Burnham building, 160 North La Salle street. Telephone State 3138. The annual dues it is announced will be $4.

CERMAK PLANS WINTER SPORTS FOR DEER GROVE

Skiing, Tobogganing and Skating Win O. K.

Furthering his plan of providing Cook county with every possible opportunity to enjoy winter sports, Anton J. Cermak, president of the county board, yesterday ordered Chief Forester Ransom E. Kennicott to proceed at once with plans for the erection of an amateur ski and toboggan slide in the deer grove, forest preserve.



ANTON J. CERMAK.

The slide, which is to be built at slight expense, has been so designed that it safely may be used by amateur ski jumpers, and will be parallel with another toboggan slide for coasting or plain ski running.

To Glide Out on Lake.

The superstructure will be built of timbers and planks and will be fifty feet high, sloping to meet a natural grade to the bank of the small lake on the preserve. Ski jumpers and tobogganenthusiasts will be able to go far over the frozen surface of the lake.

Transportation facilities to Deer Grove are excellent, Mr. Kennicott said. Hundreds of Chicagoans are expected to participate in projected amateur skiing events. Skating on the lake in Deer Grove now is most popular, and with the added facilities the preserve will be one of the best winter recreation spots in the county. The Prairie club has quarters on the lake, and the Boy Scouts have a camp there.

To Build Shelter, Too.

Plans as devised by Mr. Kennicott and approved by President Cermak, include the building on the ground of a log cabin shelter for skaters and skiers.

The superstructure of the ski slide will be hidden among the trees in the grove, so that no natural beauties of the preserve will be marred.

President Cermak pointed out that the new slide can be used by all. It is not to be a great steel structure like that built at considerable expense last fall at Palos park, which can be used only by professional and experienced jumpers.

Call Massmeeting to Aid Chicago Civic Opera Co.

A massmeeting to be given in the interests of gran dopera will be held Saturday afternoon, Oct. 25, at 2:30, at the Auditorium theater by the Chicago Civic Opera company. A special program has been arranged for the occasion, including a talk on the plans and features of the 1924-'25 season, and Charles D. Isaacson, "the Billy Sunday of grand opera," will tel the stories of at least three operas, covering the dramatic, vocal, and histrionic developments of the operas.

ENGINEERS END STUDY FOR LAKE LEVEL REPORT

Noted Men Inspect City's Drainage System.

A commission of twenty-eight nationally known hydraulic, civil, and sanitary engineers, invited here by the sanitary district to make an exhaustive survey and report on Chicago's sewage disposal problem, completed its field investigation yesterday afternoon.

The commission has been divided into eight committees, each to make a study and a separate report on some special phase of the problem. These reports will be incorporated in a general report, which, it is expected, will be submitted in three weeks' time. Whether or not this report favors the right of the sanitary district for a flow of 10,000 cubic feet a second from Lake Michigan, the data submitted will be used as a basis for further arguments before the rivers and harbors committee of congress in hearings on the pending lake level bill.

Those on Commission.

E. R. Haskell, dean emeritus of Cornell university and a former member of the international boundary commission, is serving as honorary chairman of the commission. George W. Fuller of New York, consulting engineer on water supply and sewage disposal for many cities in the country, is serving as active chairman.

The other members are: Carl E. Grunsky, San Francisco, president of the American Society of Civil Engineers; Richard R. Lyman, Salt Lake City, professor of civil engineering at the University of Utah; John B. Hawley, Fort Worth, consulting engineer on construction methods at the Panama canal; Jacob L. Ludlow, Winston-Salem, N. C., member of the North Carolina state board of health; Clarence W. Hubbell, consulting engineer for the city of Detroit; Arthur E. Morgan, Dayton, O., former supervising engineer of United States drainage investigations; Anson Marston, Ames, Ia., dean of engineering at Iowa State college, and Sherman M. Woodward, Iowa City, professor of hydraulics, Iowa State university.

Includes Noted Men.

One of the leading members on the commission is Joseph F. Hasskarl, Philadelphia, builder of the largest breakwater in America. Others are: A. E. Phillips, Washington, D. C., builder of the largest pumping station in the world at the national capital; John H. Gregory, Baltimore, professor of civil and sanitary engineering at Johns Hopkins university; E. B. Whitman, Baltimore, chairman of Maryland public utilities commission; Francis Lee Stuart, New York, former chairman war industries board; Robert E. Horton, Vorheesville, N. Y., hydraulic expert for the state of New York; Hafrison P. Eddy, Boston, consulting engineer; John Freeman, Providence, R. I., consulting engineer for New York water supply system; George G. Earl, New Orleans, chief engineer New Orleans sewerage and water board; Wynkoop Kiersted, Kansas City, Mo., builder of the water supply system in that city; Morris Knowles, Pittsburgh, chairman of Pittsburgh's city planning commission; F. H. Newell, Washington, D. C., for twenty years director of the government reclamation service; James H. Fuertes, New York, secretary of the metropolitan sewerage commission of New York; T. Chalkley Hatton, chief engineer Milwaukee sewerage commission; Col. C. S. Riche, United States engineer corps; W. W. DeBerard, Chicago, western editor Engineering News Record, and George H. Fenkell, general manager water supply at Detroit.

REPRESENTING ALFONSO

The Duke and Duchess of Alba as they appeared on their arrival in Chicago yesterday. He is descended from Phillip II. of Spain and James II. of England. His wife is of an ancient Spanish family.

SPANISH DUKE TAKES A LESSON AT STOCKYARDS

For the second time within a week the Union stockyards were visited by European nobility yesterday.

The duke of Alba, the most famous grandee of Spain, spent four hours wandering among the pens, the slaughter houses and the packing plants in the footsteps of the prince of Wales. He said he would tell the king of Spain how a steer is beef eaten and how a hog is best packed in little tin cans.

Some time ago King Alfonso turned one of his many country villas into an abattoir. From the means of South America, where Spaniards have huge cattle ranches, came steers.

After months of operation the king decided that something was wrong, because the business was not prospering. So the Duke of Alba has come to America to learn our methods.

The duke and duchess of Alba were entertained at dinner last night by George F. Porter.

N. W. Freshmen Jolted by Senior Log Painted Green

Freshmen at Northwestern university "viewed with alarm" the senior log on the campus yesterday. For twenty-five years no one has sat on that log but seniors. Yesterday it was found painted a bright green, the color of the freshman class. While seniors were announcing it as an "overt act" Prof. James Armstrong, dean of men, hastened to announce it wasn't an official matter.

Claridge HOTEL CHICAGO

SEVERAL outstanding features make The Claridge a dominant hotel in the near down-town district of the North Side:

A fully equipped gymnasium, for both men and women;
A swimming pool, with lockers and showers;
Indoor golf and handball courts;
Special instruction by a competent athletic director;
Billiard room, lounges, roof garden—all without extra charge to guests.

Of 800 rooms equipped with shower or with tub and shower, a small percentage are now available at incredibly low rates—$2.50 a day and up. The vicinity is one of Chicago's most selected—16 minutes' walk or 10 minutes' ride from the heart of the loop.

A trip of inspection through this attractive new hotel will convince you of its advantages.

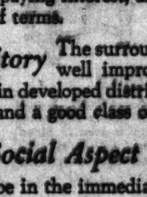
Why it is Safe to buy of Britigan

The Britigan Standard



We have spoken from time to time of the Britigan Standard, meaning of course that combination of moral principle, and integrity, and efficiency which have distinguished the methods and practices of the Britigan Organization. But now we come to another standard: The scientific standard by which all Britigan properties, within the city of Chicago, are measured.

This Is the Standard

Owner The first essential consideration when investigating subdivision property is the owner and his degree of responsibility. The Britigan properties are placed in trust with the Chicago Title & Trust Company as trustee, for the protection of purchasers.

Transportation Next in importance is transportation: Existing surface lines, elevated, railroad service, also expected extensions of these, are value-giving factors. The distance and facilities for reaching business and industrial centers are points of special consideration.

Improvements A complete sewer system with proper surface drainage, the water and gas mains, the service pipes for each of these inside the curb, cement sidewalks, paving and curbs are the complete and necessary improvements for a city home community.

Restrictions Protection from encroachment of business upon residential streets, the stipulation of a minimum cost at which buildings may be built, the provision for a uniform brick or concrete construction, the proper setback clauses to provide sufficient and equitable light and for preserving the neighborhood appearance, are necessary factors to establish property values.

Prices From investment and homesite considerations prices should be low considering value. There should be one fixed price for each lot, to include all the past, present and promised improvements.

Terms An easy arrangement of payments, discount for cash and an easy way of paying interest, are the important features to look at in the matter of terms.

Surrounding Territory The surrounding territory should be well improved; should be progressive; should be well within developed districts; should contain parks, playgrounds, boulevards and a good class of population.

Educational and Social Aspect Convenient schools and churches, clubs, theatres and gymnasiums should be in the immediate vicinity.

General Activity of Property Healthy renting conditions, steady increase of new buildings, a continual increase in population in that section and increased loan values are elements to consider in regard to any property.

Market to Draw Upon for Resales The number of people living within a radius of three or four miles, the natural expansion of the city in that direction, and the development of business sections in the immediate vicinity are the factors for estimating the possibilities for sales or resales.

Future Development of Property Future development depends greatly upon how well the foregoing elements measure up to the highest standards and possibilities. The increase in the population of Chicago requires a certain amount of additional property every year to meet its demands. Naturally those areas laid out and given the advantage of the best plans will develop most and increase in value greatest over a fair period of years.

Conscientious and painstaking application of this standard is responsible for the fact that all Britigan subdivisions become thriving, built-up, prosperous communities, and in future editorials we will tell, specifically, how this standard has brought safety and unusually substantial profits to thousands who have purchased lots in Britigan subdivisions.

ILLINOIS BURIES WOLVERINES 39 TO 14

MAROONS VICTORS; GOPHERS TIE BADGERS; PURPLE LOSES

AMONG THOSE PRESENT BESIDES "RED" GRANGE WERE 67,000 FOOTBALL ROOTERS

A panoramic view of the mammoth new University of Illinois stadium at Champaign, where the athletes of Illinois smothered Michigan's Wolverines, 39 to 14. The new stadium had been dedicated at special services on Friday, and the horde of football fans from both Illinois and Michigan and the thousands of annual homecoming visitors packed it to capacity for yesterday's game. There were 67,000 present, the largest crowd ever to see a football game in the west. [Photo copyrighted by Kaufmann & Fabry company and rushed to Chicago by airplane.]

MAROONS BURY HOOSIERS IN 23 TO 0 BATTLE; SUBS STAR

Herein is the story of the ruined hopes of the Hoosiers. Claiming to have this year the greatest team in all the history of Indiana university, Crimson old grads and undergrads went to Stagg field yesterday believing that, finally, the old school was to down Chicago. But the hopes were in vain, and Chicago conquered the Indiana brains, brawn, and spirit, 23 to 0, scoring just one point less than a year ago, when the count against the Hoosiers was 24 to 0.

It was evident from the start that A. A. Stagg's huskies were to win the battle, for the Maroons, mixing a lot of the line smashing with which they defeated Brown with a few open plays, and, taking advantage of errors made by Indiana, at the very start of the game, after receiving Capt. Joe Sloate's kickoff, passed, smashed, and dashed their way to the Crimson 11 yard line, from where Felice Caruso, Chicago half back, tried unsuccessfully to kick goal.

Whatever of Chicago's alleged fear of Indiana has really existed was lost in that initial march of the Maroon. The sterling work of the Chicago line made all the Chicago backs look good to the 22,000 spectators at the game, while the brilliant performance of Harry Thomas, whose cleverness on offense was a constant threat to the Crimson, told heavily against the visitors.

Preponderantly outplayed by the Maroon regulars, the defensive and offensive work of the Hoosiers was but little less effective against the horde of sophomores and second string men who were injected into the fray as Chicago's margin reached the safety mark. That Austin McCarty plunged stoutly for good gains, that Bill Abbott directed the work of the team ably and wisely, and that Thomas appeared luminous all can be guessed from the past performances of the men.

Other Subs Show Well.

But that Bert McKinney, Stanley Rouse, Chi Gordon, who near the end of the game intercepted a Hoosier pass to run sixty yards and place the ball on Indiana's 3 yard line, and Bill Clarke should appear as well as they did yesterday was gratifying assurance to Maroon fans. McKinney repeatedly twisted and dodged his way through the Crimson defense and, to bring himself greater glory, tucked the ball under his arm in the third period, seeing that a forward pass would be impossible, and ran without interference thirty yards to score Chicago's second touchdown.

The Hoosiers were only spasmodically threatening, though, on the whole, their offense was superior to that with which they assaulted the Maroons last year. Their most threatening gesture resulted from their aerial assault. By it, in the fourth period, with Salmi tossing the oval to Sibley, Stevens, and Marks, Indiana worked the ball to within Chicago's 10 yard line, from where they tried two more passes across the line, one being incomplete and the other striking the goal posts for a touchback. Of the twelve passes tried by Indiana, seven were complete. Chicago started nine and completed four.

Lorber Punts Well.

Chicago gained eighteen first downs and Indiana scored eleven. Though most of the Hoosier's first downs were secured by passes, good yardage was sometimes gained on Max Lorber's crashes through the Maroon forward wall. Lawrence Marks, though failing to live up to his reputation as a punter, was a menace to the Chicago defense, though his efforts around the ends were pretty ably abbreviated.

At the start of the game Caruso tried to boot a drop kick, but failed, though the atempt showed Chicago's scoring superiority. Again in the first period Chicago failed to make a yard on fourth down when but ten yards from the goal line. Near the start of the second period Caruso made his previous failure good, drop kicking a field goal from the 13 yard line when a pass, Thomas to Barnes, had placed the ball. Chicago's first major counter was scored by Thomas shortly afterward, when, on the first play after Caruso received a Hoosier punt on Indiana's 34 yard line, he raced through a broken field for the score. Caruso failed to kick goal.

McCarty Counts Touchdown.

McKinney's score was made similarly when he dropped back to pass, and, finding himself rushed by Indiana's defense, he dashed thirty yards to plant the ball behind the goal posts. Burgess replaced Abbott at quarter, and kicked goal.

Chicago's third and final touchdown was scored by McCarty as a result of Gordon's intercepted pass and dogged run through the lunging, grabbing backs to the 3 yard line, where he was overtaken. Two bucks put McCarty, who was inserted in the game for the purpose, across the line a minute before the final whistle as the shadows of dusk made the players hard to distinguish on the field.

BY WALLACE ABBEY.

Northwestern's Purple banner is drooping today, for out on the Evanston field yesterday Coach Glenn Thistlethwaite's eleven, which had made many fans all excited because of its two decisive pre-season wins, met its first real test of the season—and failed.

Purdue's Boilermakers, themselves out of the Big Ten race, pulled the Purple down into their class by winning, 7 to 3, before a crowd of 16,000, which included 1,500 "Dads" of university students. Lack of good generalship was largely responsible for the defeat and that old time "scoring punch" was noticeably absent.

Boner Spills Beans.

Defeat was more humiliating for the Purple because, as in other years of rivalry between the two schools, the Boilermakers came from behind to win when victory seemed assured for the Northwestern team. When Ralph Baker made a place kick for the Evanston squad at the beginning of the fourth period, after three quarters of battling on almost even terms, a conference victory seemed at hand. But it was not to be, for in less than two minutes, everything was different. A "boner" had been committed.

After Baker had scored his field goal he kicked off and here is where Purdue delivered the punch that ultimately resulted in the winning touchdown. The ball sailed high in the air, clear over the Boilermaker goal, where it is customary for it to be downed. Instead, Bahr, who played a sterling game at half, caught it and raced over his own goal line into the field of play.

Bahr Keeps Coming.

He kept on coming, running while the Purple warriors seemed to stand by and look. He passed every man on the Purple team except Baker, who finally pulled him down 40 yards from the defending team's goal. Bahr had raced 60 yards practically untouched.

Inspired by this feat, Purdue opened with a dazzling aerial attack that swamped the Purple. On the third down, after two line plays had netted 3 yards, Bahr shot a pass to Harmeson 20 yards from the coveted line. On the next play Harmeson shot on

ILLINOIS' STADIUM.

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Oct. 18.—[Special.]—University of Illinois stadium, memorial by subscriptions of alumni and undergraduates to the Fighting Illini who participated in the world war, has a seating capacity of 55,524. With temporary seats erected for today's game, more than 65,000 persons witnessed its dedication.

Ultimate plans contemplate enclosure of the south end, raising the capacity to 92,000, and afterward the north end, which will give a total of 120,000.

The stadium covers eight acres of a fifty-six acre tract southwest of the armory and just outside the Champaign city limits, which probably will soon be extended. Contracts let to date total $1,700,000, and the plans of Director George Huff are still far from complete. Eventually 100 columns of stone, 24 feet high, will surmount the stands in memory of the Illinois men who gave their lives in the war.

The main stands start one and one-half feet above the playing field and rise to 63 feet 2½ inches. Beginning at 57 feet, the balcony rises to 110 feet 8 inches.

At present the management is proud of the fact that, of the 55,524 permanent seats, 46,000 are between the goal posts, said to be the highest percentage of any stadium in the country. Ohio seats 27,000 of 62,000 similarly, and Yale's bowl about one-third of its 74,728.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

Madison, Wis., Oct. 18.—[Special.]—The Cardinal of old Wisconsin came flaming out of nowhere today on Camp Randall and sent the giant Gophers back to the northland without the victory they had figured as good as won.

Fighting desperately to erase the memory of two previous showings, the Badgers came through with every ounce that was in them. During the first half they actually outplayed their more experienced opponents and piled up a 7 to 0 advantage. But that flash of brilliancy, carried on under a broiling sun, wore them out, and late in the game there was nothing to stop the Gophers when they pounded and slashed their way down the field to a touchdown that deadlocked the time honored rivals in their thirty-fourth annual struggle.

Fourth Tie Since 1890.

The final score was 7 to 7 and it was the fourth time the Cardinal and the Old Gold and Maroon have tied since gridiron relations were established back in 1890.

Wisconsin's noble effort in the first two periods was the only thrilling feature of the day, and it was thrilling only because it was the under dog that had come to life. In other ways it was just a gruelling duel of massed strength, one side hammering the other and the other hammering back.

Here and there in the course of the battling and ramming against the lines a forward pass was injected by way of variety, but a pass figured largely on only one occasion. That occasion was Wisconsin's and it led to the touchdown that as the minutes rolled along seemed sufficient to carry the Cardinals home on the victor's end.

Drop Kick Fails.

Wisconsin's end of the score was started on its way after the first period was about ten minutes old. During these ten minutes the fighting was mostly between the kicking feet of Leo Harmon of the Badgers and Ascher of the Gophers. Included in this booting of the oval was an attempted drop kick by Doyle Harmon from the thirty-five yard mark, but the ball fell many yards short of its mark.

After D. Harmon's failure to notch three points the Gophers, with a big loss caused by Blackman breaking through and throwing Graham, had

GRANGE THRILLS HUGE CROWD BY RACING TO 5 TOUCHDOWNS

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Champaign, Ill., Oct. 18.—[Special.]—Michigan never knew Red Grange the Illinois wildcat, until today. Now Michigan knows him well.

This great runner of Bob Zuppke's football team ran all over Michigan in the first quarter of their grid battle today at the new Illinois stadium and crushed the Ann Arbor boys before they realized they were in a contest. The final score was 39 to 14 in favor of the boys of Illinois, but was 27 to 0 at the end of the first period when Grange raced down the field four times for touchdowns.

Grange had torn Michigan to pieces before the game had gone more than fifteen seconds because he received the first kickoff from Capt Steger of the Wolverines, and from his own 5 yard line ran and dodged and tore his way 95 yards for a touchdown. Right then and there Michigan knew it was up against something it hadn't seen in football before.

Three More Long Runs.

Three more times in that first period Grange got loose for long runs for touchdowns. His second one came after about five minutes of play and was 67 yards in length. The joyful Illini rooters were hardly through cheering that thrilling play before the red headed Wheaton lad got loose again for another, 56 yards in length, and before the quarter was ended he took the ball on the Michigan 44 yard line and dashed through the whole team for a fourth touchdown.

In that first period he made four as sensational open field runs as have been seen in years.

It is doubtful if anything near its equal has been seen in the West since the days of Walter Eckersall. Going into the game, Michigan was figured to have an equal chance to win. The four startling runs in the first quarter by young Grange made Illinois a 1 to 1 shot. He carried the ball for a total of 262 yards on those four plays and Michigan was a crushed and beaten foe.

The second quarter had hardly begun when Coach Zuppke called his star from the game to save him for other foes to come later in the season, though he was back in the fray for the entire second half, but content to make one touchdown, the final run for it being only 11 yards. He did a lot of plunging and passing in the second half, but never again got loose for a long and thrilling dash.

Michigan Is Game.

Michigan must be given credit for gameness. After the horrible experience of the first quarter, the Tostmen recovered their senses and their famous Michigan spirit and fought as no Michigan team ever has fought in the past. They were fighting a hopeless battle, but they fought with admirable spirit and gameness, and for the last three-quarters of the game more than played Illinois to a standstill. Illinois made only 12 points after the first quarter, while Michigan gathered fourteen.

Just take Red Grange away from the Illinois team and it might be that Michigan would class with them in every way. It then would be an even fight for the championship, unless some other Big Ten foe comes to the front and does surprising things. But with Red Grange on the lllini, it is doubtful if a team in the country could beat the Zuppke machine. He made the all-American team a year ago, but the young red head never did anything last year that equaled his performance on the field here today. He stamped himself as one of the greatest football stars of all time, east or west.

It was his remarkable speed and his ability to pick the openings that made him such a wonder today. Michigan has some fleet-footed runners in its team in such men as Capt. Steger and Rockwell, but they looked sluggish and slow in their efforts to head off the Illinois wildcat. It made old time football people think of Heston of Michigan in the early days of the Yost coaching.

The BASKET of SNAKES . . . by Charles Saxby

TODAY

A BLUE RIBBON mystery story in the magazine section

Grange is a big fellow like Heston and runs like him and plunges like him. Only it is doubtful if Heston ever was as fast. Grange seems to have the size and strength of a Heston and the speed and dodging ability of an Eckersall.

One can imagine the joy the game today brought to the thousands of old grads who gathered here for the annual homecoming. The strongest foe Illinois has had in more than twenty years of competition in the west has been this Yost aggregation from Ann Arbor. Yost's team was the only one in the conference able to hold Illinois even since Bob Zuppke came here as coach. He has at least a one game margin on all other rivals since his reign began. But he had beaten Michigan only twice and had been beaten twice.

Last year they didn't play, and each team went through the season unbeaten. It was a game for more than ordinary glory when they met today, and Illinois won all the honor there was in a most decisive manner.

Most of the State Attends.

It was the biggest crowd that ever attended a game of any kind in the state of Illinois. The capacity was 67,000 and there wasn't a seat left. Seemed as if most of the state of Illinois was here. There were almost as many motor cars in Champaign today as there are in all of Europe. There were as many special trains run into the small city as could be parked on all the sidings. Folks came from every part of the state. Thousands were present from Chicago.

A host came on special trains from Michigan, but it is safe to say that 50,000 people today were rooting for Illinois, and 50,000 yelled themselves hoarse in that first quarter over the thrilling runs of Red Grange. It seemed a shame to take him out when the second quarter began. He was the big star of the show. It was like taking Babe Ruth out in the third inning after he had hit a couple of home runs.

But things are different in the world of amateur sport. Bob Zuppke thought of the games to come. He has to meet Chicago and Minnesota and Ohio State and others, and he wants this young wildcat with both legs in working order for those combats.

Red Gets a Rest.

So Grange, after making four sensational runs in the first quarter, was called to the bench to sit and look on, and he was given a cheer such as no football player got in a decade. In the second half he was back, but Illinois had the contest sewed up and played more of a safe game. Grange didn't take any chances. He did a lot of passing and let some of the others carry the ball. He played back on defense, but never attempted to catch a punt, just turned his back on them and walked around in a circle until the ball was dead.

Michigan seemed to regain its spirit and form as soon as Grange was removed from the game. In the second quarter it outplayed the Illini, scoring a touchdown and holding the Zuppke machine to a zero. But no Illinois man will believe such a thing could have happened if the wildcat had remained in the fight.

Between halves it is likely that Old Man Yost delivered a lecture in the dressing room of the Michigan team. Yost is famous for the things he can say to his boys and get them all fired up and in a fighting mood.

Anyway, it was a real team that played for Michigan through the second half.

THE PLAY IN DETAIL

FIRST QUARTER.

Stager kicked off to Grange, who got the ball on his own 5 yard line and started around to his left. He then cut into the right to dodge a tackler and then again to left, and got loose with a clear field for a 95 yard run from the kickoff for a touchdown. Britton kicked the goal for the extra point and the score was 7 to 0 in favor of the Illini in about one minute of play.

Stager kicked off to Grange again, but this time he was brought down on his own 20 yard line. McIlwain made a couple of yards and then Britton punted high to Michigan on the Illinois 36 yard line. Stager then executed a neat pass to Miller for 9 yards and Miller added 2 on a plunge for a first down on the Illinois 24 yard line. Stager made two through the middle of the line and then tried another pass, but it was promoted. Another plunge gained only a yard and then a fake place kick was tried, but the ball was fumbled and it was Illinois' ball on its own 33 yard line.

McIlwain made a yard through the right side of the line and then the ball was given to Grange again, and once more he circled and dodged through the whole Michigan team for a 67 yard run for a touchdown. Britton again added a point by place kick and the count was 14 to 0.

Stager kicked off over the goal line and Illinois put the ball in play on its 20 yard line. Hall failed to gain and Michigan was penalized 5 yards. McIlwain made a yard and Grange made 5, then Britton punted to Michigan's 20 yard line. Stager made 2 yards and Rockwell punted to the Illinois 44 yard line; McIlwain failed to gain, so the ball was given to Grange again. He got loose and ran 56 yards for a touchdown. Britton failed to add a point with a kick, and the score was 20 to 0.

Stager kicked off over the goal line and Illinois put the ball in play on the 20 yard line. Britton punted to Rockwell, who fumbled. Illinois recovered the ball on Michigan's 44 yard line. Grange was handed the ball and once more circled the end, got loose and ran 44 yards for a touchdown. Britton added a point with a place kick and the score was 27 to 0.

Stager kicked off to McIlwain, who returned to the Illinois 25 yard line. Grange was then taken out of the game and Galliva was took his place. The rest of the quarter consisted of a few exchanges of punts and when time was called Michigan had the ball on its own 49 yard line. Score: Illinois, 27; Michigan, 0.

SECOND QUARTER.

The second quarter was just football because Mr. Grange wasn't there. Michigan, however, perked up after the wild Illinois man was out. It was Michigan's ball on its own 49 yard line. Rockwell made two yards and so did Stager and then Rockwell punted and it was Illinois' ball on its own 15 yard line. Britton punted and Michigan took the ball on the Illinois 46 yard line. Rockwell then punted and a Michigan man downed the ball on the Illinois 2 yard line. From behind his goal Britton punted out of bounds on the Illinois 20 yard line.

Stager hit the middle for two yards and Illinois was penalized five yards for being offside so Michigan had a first down on the Illini 15 yard line. On the first play Stager hit off the Illinois right tackle and got loose and ran the fifteen yards for a touchdown. Rockwell added a point by place kick and the score was 27 to 7 in favor of Illinois.

It was clear that with Grange gone the Michigan team felt itself equal to its rival. But the rest of the quarter was a one-way and punting affair though Michigan with the help of the wind had the better of it most of the time. Galliva made several good runs, playing in the place of Grange, but he wasn't Grange. After one of his runs for ten yards the Illini got the ball on the middle of the field but they weren't able to advance farther into Michigan territory and after several exchanges of kicks the quarter ended with the ball in Michigan's possession on the Illinois 45 yard line. Score: Illinois, 27; Michigan, 7.

THIRD QUARTER.

Grange was back at left half for the Illini team. Galliva staring on the side lines. Stager kicked off for Michigan to Hall, who returned to his own 26 yard line. Hall, Grange, and Hall made 11 yards on three plays, then Grange got loose for another spectacular run of 55 yards to the Michigan 28 yard line. Leonard made four and Grange seven and the Illini had a first down on Michigan's 17 yard line. Grange then tried a wide end run and lost 10 yards. Morton replacing him. Grange came back with two passes, one after the other to Kassel but may were short and then Grange tried a forward pass over the goal but it was grounded and Michigan took the ball on its own 20 yard line.

Rockwell punted to his own 47 yard line. Grange was stopped with a 2 yard gain but followed with a pass to Britton for a first down on Michigan's 23 yard line. Leonard made 8 and Grange 3 and it was on the 12 yard line. Leonard made 1 and then Grange got loose for 11 yards and a touchdown. Britton failed to kick a goal. Score: Illinois, 33, Michigan, 7.

Illinois didn't score again in the quarter but by some good forward passing by Grange and some consistent gains, they had the ball on Michigan's 23 yard line when time was called. Score: Illinois, 33; Michigan, 7.

FOURTH QUARTER.

Grange tried to carry the ball but got only 5 yards and Hall failed to add anything, so Grange then shot a short pass to Leonard, who wriggled over the goal line for a touchdown. Britton failed to add a point by place kick and the score was 39 to 7 in favor of the Illini.

Stager then kicked off for Michigan over the Illinois goal line, but there must have been a foul by Illinois on the 13 yard line, because the ball was given to Michigan on that mark, and from there they rushed it over for a touchdown. Stager advanced it exactly 10 yards on three line plunges for first down on the 3 yard line. He made 2½ yards on two more plunges, and then Rockwell added a point on place kick, and the score was 39 to 14 in favor of Illinois.

Michigan then opened up with a forward passing game. Domhoff was sent in for Stamman and did a lot of passing, but when he failed several times he was replaced by Parker. Then Hernstein went in for Parker. The Wolverines worked the ball down into Illinois' territory but finally lost the ball on a fumble on the fourth down.

They got it again after an Illinois punt and again advanced into Illinois territory, but had to kick on a fourth down, and Illinois had the ball on its own 30 yard line when the game ended. Final score: Illinois, 39; Michigan, 14.

CORNHUSKERS TRIM COLGATE BY 33-7 TALLY

Lincoln, Neb., Oct. 18.—[Special.]—Nebraska came back today, and in a whirlwind attack defeated the agile Colgate team by a score of 33 to 7. The score pretty accurately represented the scoring ability of the two elevens, but it was a rejuvenated Nebraska squad that faced the easterners, compared to the one that went down to defeat in successive games with Illinois and Oklahoma. Lineup:

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

New York, Oct. 18.—[Special.]—Using one of the most powerful running attacks seen in recent years, varied occasionally by delayed bucks into the line and an occasional forward pass, Notre Dame defeated the Army on the Polo ground here this afternoon, 13 to 7. It was the eleventh meeting of the two teams and today's victory gives Notre Dame eight victories. The Army has won twice while the struggle of 1922 resulted in a scoreless tie.

The middle west eleven scored in the second and third periods, while the Aarmy, which never once let up in its efforts, counted in the final quarter and was dangerous up to the time the final whistle was blown. Capt. Garbisch and his players are deserving of a world of credit for the uphill fight after the tide of victory had swung in Notre Dame's favor.

Starts as Punting Duel.

The first quarter was more or less of a punting duel between Layden and Wood. The latter worked the quick boot to advantage and placed his attempts perfectly. On numerous occasions he punted out of bounds inside the Notre Dame fifteen yard line.

In the second quarter, however, Notre Dame turned loose its powerful attack. The Hoosiers got possession of the oval on their fifteen yard line as a result of one of Wood's well placed punts. On the first play, Crowley circled the Army left end for twenty ards and Miller skirted the other Army flank for eleven, placing the oval in midfield. A forward pass, Stuhldreher to Crowley, was good for twelve yards.

Layden Carries Ball Over.

Don Miller then broke loose off the Army right end and carried the oval to the cadets' 10 yard line. Crowley slid inside of the Army's left tackle for seven yards and the ball was on the Army's 3 yard line. The Army line stiffened and Layden was stopped on a split drive through center. He was called upon again, and this time crashed through the middle of the Army line for the first score of the game. The try for point by place kick was missed by Stuhldreher.

Notre Dame threatened again near the close of the period by taking the ball to the Army's fifteen yard line by the same running attack. With four yards to gain on a fourth down, a forward pass, Stuhldreher to Mueller, was intercepted by Yeomans, the Army quarter back, who returned to the center of the field.

The Army kicked off to start the second half, and three end plays enabled Notre Dame to carry the oval to midfield. A Notre Dame forward pass was intercepted by Wilson for the army, and a moment later Collins of Notre Dame grabbed one of the cadets' forward tosses on his 45 yard line. The Notre Dame running attack was again called into commission until the oval rested on the future generals' 29 yard line. On a shift play Crowley was given the ball, and he circled the Army left end for a touchdown. Crowley kicked the goal for the extra point.

At the start of the fourth period Harry Wilson, the Penn State half back last year, cut loose with two runs, which netted 45 yards, and finally Wood punted out of bounds on the Notre Dame 10 yard line. The westerners elected to kick on the first down and Layden punted from behind his own goal line to Wilson, who signaled for a fair catch. He was thrown after the catch and Notre Dame penalised 15 yards.

Fake Play Wins.

With the ball on Notre Dame's 18 yard line the cadets made only five yards in two attempts. Then Coach John McEwan sent Harding in at quarter back with instructions to use a fake quarter back run. Harding called for Hewitt to hit the line, but instead of giving the full back the oval Harding skirted the Notre Dame right end for a touchdown. Capt. Garbisch kicked the goal for the extra point.

After this score the Army again threatened by taking the ball to Notre Dame's 30 yard line, where it was lost on an intercepted forward pass. Notre Dame had started another running attack with success when time was called for the end of the struggle.

New Illinois Stadium Riot of Color and Noise as Grange Runs Over Wolverines

BY MAUREEN M'KERNAN.

Champaign, Ill., Oct. 18.—[Special.]—At 1 o'clock, with the Illinois-Michigan game yet an hour distant, more than half the great new stadium was filled, Illinois generously gave the west bleachers to the visiting Michigan rooters, who 10,000 strong as they were, could not make a dent with their cheering on the solid block of noise of the Illinois rooters. East and west bleachers were draped equally an Illinois orange and blue, and Michigan's maize and blue.

At 1:30 the University of Illinois band, once said by Sousa to be the best college band in America, marched onto the field resplendent in new orange and blue military overcoats, presented by alumni. The 175 members formed an I on the field, in front of the Illinois ranks, where 200 Illinois rooters in orange smocks, formed a blazing I on the face of the massed thousands of Illinois students.

Bands Unite Forces.

The Michigan band with seventy-five members swagger in short capes lined with maize yellow, in a block adjoining the Illinois band, joined with the rival musicians under the leadership of the Michigan band director, in playing the "Star Spangled Banner" as Miss Gladys Pennington, assistant dean of women of the University of Illinois, raised the flag that waves from the south end of the field.

The grass on the gridiron looked like emerald velvet. Clear sunshine, with a haze of Indian summer to soften it, had been sent by the gods of football to make a perfect afternoon—too warm for football, however.

At 1:45 the grandstands seemed filled; across the open field, which this year is dust while last home-coming it was deep mire, there poured a continual stream of people. Twenty thousand were refused tickets. The 67,000 seats available included only a few temporary ones at the ends of the field. The great mass of spectators was seated within the lines of the two goal posts.

Thunders of Noise.

Ten cheer leaders for Illinois, dressed in white, jumped up and down and yelled through yellow megaphones. Six Michigan cheer leaders, in white, jumped up and down and yelled through blue megaphones. And as these jumping, yelling young chaps leaped and waved their arms, billows of noise came from the Illinois bleachers and from the Michigan bleachers.

The Illinois team came on the field at 1:45, running low, to be greeted with wows and howls from their thousands of rooters. The Illinois men wore no socks.

Just before 2 o'clock, as a bugler from the Illinois band stepped to the base of the flag pole, the two opposing bleachers rose without a sound, hats off and heads bowed, as taps was played for the heroic collegiate dead to whom this stadium is dedicated.

Illini Go "Crazy."

When the first touchdown came in the first five minute play, with the ball carried 95 yards for Illinois, the bleachers went crazy. East and west, Illinois and Michigan, 67,000 spectators stood up and tried to split their throats cheering. When Illinois went racing down the field, 67 yards for the second touchdown, with only ten minutes played, the Illinois rooters swayed from side to side and rocked in sound.

And the third touchdown, 56 yards this time, with the first quarter still long to run, brought pandemonium.

There may be a few clear voices in Urbana tomorrow. They will belong to those who could not get into the game. When the hysteria of noise from the bleachers poured out over the pleasant valley even the men and women who, not being able to get in, were standing on the embankment north of the staudium caught the madness and jumped up and down and waved their arms.

The fourth touchdown came so soon after that that the cheering thousands, not yet recovered from the insanity of cheering from the third touchdown, just kept right on rocking and sending to the smiling afternoon sky billow after billow of sound.

Cheering is Impartial

It was a friendly crowd that gathered for this biggest homecoming of the Illini and it was noteworthy that the cheering for a good play was impartial. Michigan rooters rose and screamed, urging their men to block those long flying runs down the field, but cheering the good football of their enemies at the same time. When the Michigan men then began to force their way, step by step, up the field in a grim and dogged effort to beat back the men of Illinois, even as they lost ground, the Illinois rooters cheered each good play as Michigan had cheered those classic runs that had piled the score at the outset so discouragingly high against them.

Then Michigan, after 50 minutes of play, broke the spell that had bound them. Hats sailed out over the heads of the Michigan rooters. Fine velours and dinky little caps, dozens of them, were flung into the air, some of them so far away that bald heads and youthful shocks were left exposed.

Senior Class Entertaining.

The men of the senior class entertained the visiting thousands Saturday morning with their annual hobo parade. About 100 men were in the parade. It was a funny parade. Now, collegiate humor doesn't always appeal to the visitor who does not know the campus jokes. This parade did, though. It told the thousands who watched that Illinois men this year do not think the prohibition question the most important one to burlesque.

There were plenty of suggestions in the parade that the liquor question is not a dead one at Illinois, but the humor was directed mainly at the foibles of the students themselves. There was the vain co-ed and the pompous professor who makes long arithmetical calculations to dump a dirt scoop. The beauty contest and the publicity seeking theatrical star were burlesqued, the doughty athlete was laughed little, and the grind was held up for a smile.

RED'S RECORD AGAINST WOLVERINES READS LIKE A FAIRY STORY

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Oct. 18.—This is the record of Harold [Red] Grange, sensational 22 year old Illinois half back, perhaps the outstanding gridiron star in America last season, in today's Michigan-Illinois game:

Scored five touchdowns—four in less than 12 minutes of play.

Broke away for successive runs of 95, 67, 56, and 44 yards for touchdowns.

Scooped up the ball on the very first kick off and raced 95 yards, dodging through Michigan's tacklers for a touchdown.

Carried the ball in twenty-one plays and gained the astonishing distance of 402 yards.

Threw most of Illinois' forward passes and also held the ball for Britton on the points for goal after touchdowns.

FANS APPROVE TRIB FOOTBALL PLAYER AWARD

BY HARVEY WOODRUFF.

Champaign, Ill., Oct. 18.—[Special.]—Approval of THE TRIBUNE'S plan for awarding a valuable trophy to the Big Ten football player "of the greatest value to his team," was expressed during the week by both alumni and undergraduates. Old players, in particular, were enthusiastic. Perhaps they wished the award had been in existence in their time and they had had a shot at it.

There also were suggestions and a few objections. Several voiced the point that coaches were not qualified to participate in the choice—that they would favor men on their own teams.

The writer has such a high regard for the men coaching football in the conference that he does not believe this objection would hold. In outlining the plan, however, any such possibility was removed for another reason.

Coaches Will Name Two.

It was thought it would be unfair to a coach to ask him to name the greatest player and perhaps have to choose a player from a rival squad. So coaches have been asked to name two choices—one from his own team and one from some other team. If several names happen to name the same man on another team, it'll be a pretty good indication of that player's worth.

Coaches, in planning their defense, must know the strength of their opponents and for what rival players to make especial preparation.

Officials, too, are particularly well qualified to participate in the choice, from being right in the thick of the fray where they have to keep tab on all the men to see whether or not they are obeying the rules. Composite opinion of officials and coaches, with suggestions by football fans, therefore should give a choice as fair as it is possible to make.

Speculation Keen.

With big games already under way with last Saturday's contests, speculation as to the winner will become more keen.

It will be impossible to determine the winner with any degree of certainty until the final games. There are so many factors to be considered—and devotion to team play under the conditions is just as important as natural individual brilliancy.

Lake Geneva Cadets Win from Milwaukee Tract

Lake Geneva, Wis., Oct. 18.—The Geneva Lake cadets won their football game against the Riverside High school, Milwaukee, today, 22 to 15. At the end of the first half the score was 19 to 0 in favor of the Northwestern, but the Milwaukee boys, however, put up a splendid fight in the second half. Crowley of Riverside and Schenck, Heff, and Bickle for the cadets were stars of the game.

GLENBARD WINS, 42-0.

Glenbard whipped West Chicago, 42 to 0, on the loser's field yesterday. Tillson starred, making three touchdowns.

OPEN SUNDAYS AND EVENINGS

YOU can enjoy all the comforts of an enclosed car with greater safety at a small expense and without the cumbersome looking, vision-interfering, makeshift curtains and similar enclosures. To equip your car with FULL-VISION ENCLOSURES it takes only two days.

So Neat It Harmonizes with the Lines of Fine Cars

The FULL-VISION ENCLOSURE is the only one made entirely of steel, glass and rubber. Each pane of glass is weather-tight and rattle-proof being set in a rubber cushion. The outside edges of each steel frame are finished with extending feather-edge rubber. This rubber fills the space between frame and body, frame and top and frame and frame. The frames never come in contact with the car or with each other, yet, they are perfectly weather-tight and rattle-proof.

All doors open. FOUR Large Ventilators easily controlled. No change required in touring top. Enclosure weighs about half as much as an average passenger. It can be readily removed for summer storage and put on in a few hours. It stores flat against the wall, requires little space.

Don't take chances with human life driving with storm curtains or types of enclosures which obscure vision. Remember—a few days' illness from exposure will cost you more than this enclosure. Prepare in advance for disagreeable weather.

We have manufactured more enclosures than all other enclosure manufacturers in Chicago. Telephone or call for circular giving full details.

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 18.—[Special.]—Thrills punctuating every period of the Dartmouth-Yale renewal of football relations today after a quarter century kept a crowd of 45,000 in the bowl tense until Yale's last desperate try to break a 14 to 14 tie ended with a placement goal attempt by Dan Allen. With Phil Bunnell holding the ball, it sailed just under the Green cross bar, and the game ended with the score still deadlocked.

Three minutes before the New Hampshire invaders had staged as desperate a rally, but had failed after getting within six inches of the goal. These final period rallies displayed the evenly matched elevens in a death grip more stirring than the scoring of the four touchdowns which alternately tied the score and placed each rival ahead.

HARVARD NIPS HOLY CROSS

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 18.—[Special.]—A sixty yard run by Al Miller in the third quarter for a touchdown gave Harvard a 13 to 6 victory this afternoon over Holy Cross at the stadium. A crowd of 50,000 turned out for the game. Lineup:

PENN, 10; COLUMBIA, 7

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 18.—The University of Pennsylvania eleven defeated Columbia University 10 to 7 on Franklin Field today before a crowd of 45,000.

All the thrills were crowded into the first and second periods. Columbia scored a touchdown on the first kickoff on Pease's 90 yard run. Penn came back strong in the same period by hammering the ball to within striking distance and then scoring a touchdown on a forward pass. The home eleven added three points in the second period on a placement goal by Kruss.

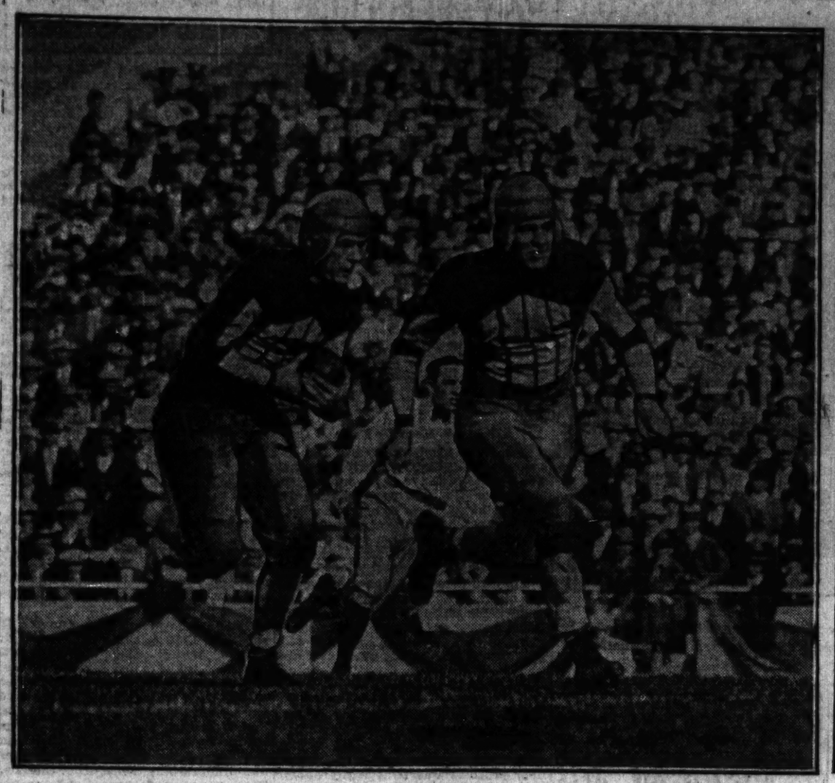
Columbia Loses Plucky Battle at Detroit, 19 to 3

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 18.—[Special.]—Columbia college of Dubuque, Ia., pitted speed and an ample fund of deceptive plays, ground and air, against University of Detroit's power at Dinan field this afternoon and after waging a heroic fight for three periods wilted under the relentless attack of the Titans in the fourth and succumbed, 19 to 3.

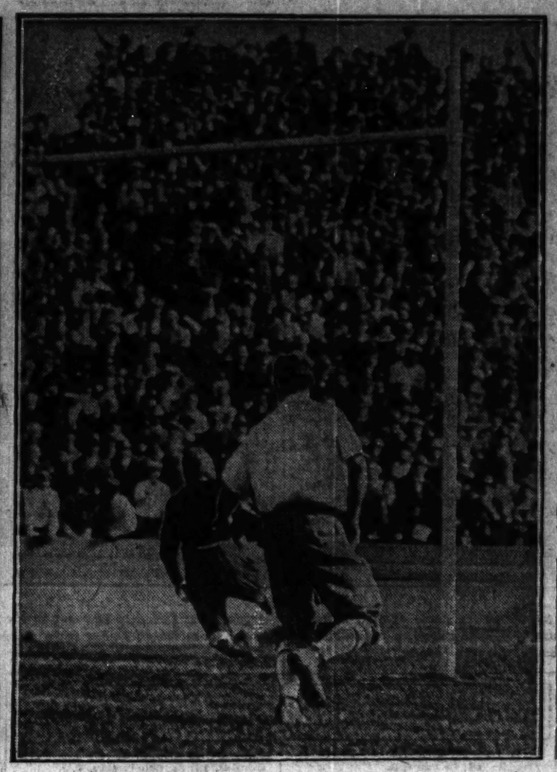
Texas Prep Gridder Dies from Poisoning

Fort [illegible], Oct. 18.—Ernest Truesdell, [illegible] Comanche, Okla., died here today as a result of injuries received in a high school football game a week ago. The boy, who played center, was hurt in the knee, and blood poison developed.

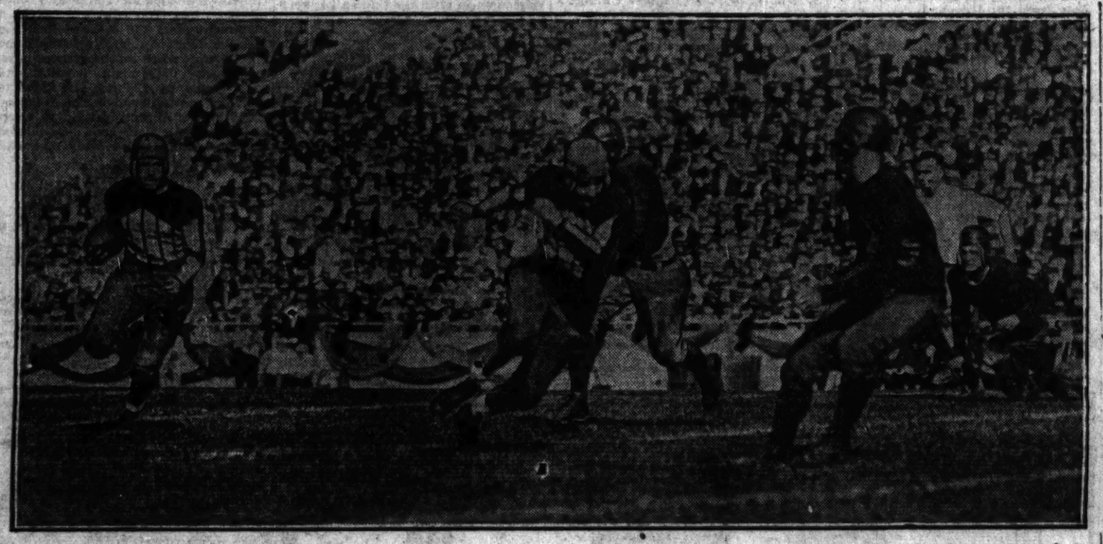
FLYING "RED" GRANGE STANDING WOLVERINES ON THEIR HEADS



Grange grabs the ball after the first kickoff of the game and begins a sprint that takes him over 95 yards of ground for the touchdown that started the rout of the Yostmen. The game was hardly a minute old before he had finished his trip. Notice the bare legs of the Illini.



Red at it again, this time at the end of the 67 yard gallop when he tumbled over the goal line for the second Illinois touchdown. There wasn't a Wolverine near him.



It's the same old story. The Illini were 56 yards from a third touchdown. The ball went to Grange and he flew over the chalk marks, finally to wind up again at the Michigan goal line. He's on his way in this picture, and he got there safely after smashing through the entire Michigan team. [Tribune Photos, brought from Champaign to The Tribune by airplane.]

"It's Red again!" shrieked the Illini as he started on his fourth sparkling run. It was a journey of 44 yards he had to make, and the picture shows him under way in full stride, with the Yostmen lunging desperately in his direction, but always too far away to drag him down.

GEORGIA TECH WINS 15-13 FROM NITTANY LIONS

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 18.—[By the Associated Press.]—Victory for Georgia Institute of Technology over Penn State college, 15 to 13, here this afternoon came as a reward for eternal vigilance. Alertness in following the ball enabled the Yellow Jackets to turn back the Nittany Lions, for the winners were unable to gain from scrimmage, making only one first down, and this on the last play of the game. PROUT DECLINES TO RUN AGAIN FOR A. A. A. PRESIDENT

New York, Oct. 17.—[By the Associated Press.]—William C. Prout of Boston, president of the National Amateur Athletic union for the last three years, will not be a candidate for reelection at the 1924 convention to be held beginning Nov. 10 at Atlantic City, N. J.

Mr. Prout made known today through the Associated Press his definite decision not to be a candidate in spite of the efforts of many friends to persuade him to accept a fourth term in office. Personal reasons and pressure of business have prompted him to withdraw.

Will Continue to Aid Sport.

Mr. Prout will continue his active association with amateur athletic affairs. At Paris during the Olympic games this year, he was elected American member of the council of the international amateur athletic federation, while he hopes to devote, unofficially much of his time and energy to aiding the national organization.

With the withdrawal of Mr. Prout, several men have been advanced as possible successors to the A. A. U. leadership. The Metropolitan district is understood to have endorsed Murray Hulbert, president of the New York board of aldermen and first vice president of the A. A. U.

St. Louisan a Candidate.

The middle west has a strong candidate in Verne Lacey of St. Louis, chairman of the legislation committee, while Samuel Goodman of San Francisco, a trustee and member of the executive committee, has the backing of Pacific coast men.

Mr. Prout was first elected to the presidency in 1921 at Chicago

THIS GAME SO GOOD SPECTATORS COULDN'T KEEP OUT OF BATTLE

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Oct. 18.—A fight that promised to become general between students of the University of Alabama and Sewanee backers during the second quarter of the Alabama-Sewanee football game here this afternoon was promptly squelched by a squad of policemen, who escorted the leaders of the battle from the field.

The spectators at the outset looked upon the side line battle as an ordinary college scramble. It assumed proportions, however, that threatened to embrace all the partisans of the two teams before police were able to separate the combatants.

Alabama defeated Sewanee, 14 to 0, in the game. It was their twentieth meeting. Rosenfeld's 53-yard dash through the entire Sewanee team was a feature of the battle. This netted Alabama the first touchdown. In the second quarter Hubert bucked over for a touchdown. Buckler kicked both goals.

BO M'MILLIN'S ELEVEN BEATS BUTLER, 9 TO 7

Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 18.—In the intersectional football game played here today Bo McMillin's Centenary college eleven of Shreveport, La., defeated Butler college of this city by a score of 9 to 7. Capt. Weaver blocked a punt behind the goal line of the locals which was recovered for a safety in the second period and gave the victory to the visitors by a two point margin, as the score was tied 7 to 7 at the time. Griggs for Butler missed a field goal from the 14 yard line in the third period. Lineup.

"BONERS" COST PURPLE FIRST BIG TEN GAME

to Hogan 3 yards from an almost certain win. Hogan was in the clear when he caught it, but stumbled and was beneath a pile of Purple players before he could regain his feet.

Even then the winning marker was not easily gained, for three times the Purple line threw the charging backs for losses, and when it came to the fourth down the Boilermakers were 15 yards from the goal. But in a last desperate effort Taube, the quarter, hurled a pass to Bahr behind the line. He caught it and fell to the ground with a touchdown. Harmeson made a place kick for the extra point.

Purple in Vain Rally.

The remainder of the game saw a vain effort on the part of the Purple to atone. Pass after pass was hurled and Baker, who had been woefully stopped in his attempts at the visitor's line, seemed to find himself, for he ripped off a 35 yard gain on returning a punt and dropped some aerial tosses into welcome hands. But twice Bahr intercepted his heaves and when the end came Northwestern was 35 yards from a tally.

Northwestern's score came directly as the result of the most sensational play of the day. When the final quarter opened the Boilermakers were in possession of the ball, but were soon forced to punt. The Purple took the oval on its 25 yard mark.

On the first play Baker ran half way across the field and when it seemed as if the opposing tacklers were on his neck he made a mighty throw and the ball went 45 yards down the field into the arms of a Boilermaker who could not handle it and let it fall—right into the arms of "Ziggy" Solheim, the Purple quarter.

Baker Kicks Field Goal.

Capt. Bob Wienecke and Baker then made a first down on two line bucks and Purdue was penalized for being off sides, giving Northwestern a first down o nthe Boilermaker 15 yard line. Three line plays advanced the ball 5 yards, and on the fourth down Baker made a perfect drop kick from the 15 yard mark.

Unwillingness to try either an end run or a pass over the goal line probably cost the Purple a touchdown late in the second period. Purdue was forced to punt from near its goal and the Purple got the ball in midfield. Christman, then playing quarter, punctured the line for nine yards and Baker tossed a pass to White, his running mate at half, who made a thirty-five yard gain, putting the ball twelve yards from a score. Wienecke then carried it to the six yard line and Baker, on two plays squirmed to the one yard mark.

It was fourth down and goal to make. Baker was again given the ball and asked to carry it through the line, but he was stopped at the line of scrimmage. As Harmeson was preparing to punt from behind his goal, the half ended.

The first and third quarters saw some spirited line plunging, but no scoring. In the opening period there was not much to choose between the teams, but in the third session Purdue opened with some trick plays and started a march on the Purple goal. A fifteen yard penalty cut this rally short, however.

Anyway Indiana Trims Chicago in X-Country

Indiana university yesterday defeated the University of Chicago in a three mile cross country run at Washington park. "Red" Bourke of Chicago won the run, but the Hoosiers won on points, 25 to 30.

PURPLE'S PASSES ARE IN VAIN

Northwestern completed many passes in its game against Purdue yesterday, but failed to connect at the times when a score was near. The above photo shows Half Back "Whitey" White about to snare an aerial heave from Ralph Baker for a good gain. The passing combination of Baker to White was the most successful for the losers. BADGERS EARN 7-7 DEADLOCK WITH GOPHERS to kick and Wisconsin recovered the ball on the invader's forty yard line.

On the first play the Badgers lined up as if to kick. Capt. Jack Harris, after bluffing a double pass, turned and sailed the ball diagonally across the field. On the twenty yard line stood Leo Harmon. He was out there by himself. He pulled in the ball and went away from the spot. Three Gophers, evidently not expecting the play, tried to head him off but nobody reached him and he went galloping over the line. Brother Doyle then drop kicked for the extra point and Wisconsin had all it was destined to get.

Badgers Keep Up Pace.

Seemingly inspired by that touchdown the Badgers kept right on going. The second period was hardly started before the Gophers were fighting in the shadow of their own posts.

Wisconsin drove them there principally because of a 20 yard end run by D. Harmon. Only 15 yards remained, but bad luck intervened in the form of a 5 yard penalty. A pass recovered the distance and then came another penalty for offside. As a last resort D. Harmon attempted to boot another goal, but he failed again and that was Wisconsin's last bid on offense. Only for those two penalties something might have happened.

The Gophers came on to the field like a different team in the second half. They started to do the things that Wisconsin's stubborn defense had stopped in the previous periods. Twice their progress was temporarily halted because the Harmon brothers leaped up and intercepted forward passes, intended for Gopher hands. Then the Gophers profited by a "break" but there still remained enough fight in Wisconsin to stem the tide on the very threshold of a touchdown.

When D. Harmon grabbed the Gopher forward he was on Wisconsin's 35 yard line. On the first down Teckemeyer's pass eluded D. Harmon and the ball bounced on its way toward the goal. D. Harmon went after it and dove but Wheeler, the Gopher end, beat the Cardinal clad warrior to the bouncing missile and it was Minnesota's ball on the Badger's nine yard line. The Gophers pounded once, twice, three times and then a fourth time, at Wisconsin's wall, but the oval was still a foot from the coveted chalk mark and the Badgers immediate kicked out of danger.

Having emerged undamaged from that predicament, the Badgers, content to protect their lead, resorted to kicking at every opportunity, and Minnesota kicked out of sheer necessity. The powerful Lidberg finally got started, however. He ripped through the Badger line and in two plays gained twelve yards for first down on Wisconsin's 33 yard line. Then he added five more and Schutte reeled off six. The march was halted temporarily by the completion of the period.

Opening the fourth period on the 22 yard line, Lidberg again came through with a plunge that gained a bit. Schutte then rammed his way to the 12 yard line and followed with another assault that left the ball only five yards from the Badger goal. Long broke through and blasted a charge by Quzzy, but Schutte came back on the next play, dove through center and dropped only a foot from the line. Then he crossed through left tackle for a touchdown and Abramson placed kicked for the point that tied it.

In the few remaining minutes each side had an opportunity to break the tie via the kicking route and both failed. Leo Harmon attempted a placement from the 45 yard line, but Wheeler blocked it and recovered the ball. Later, when an intercepted pass, a 15 yard Wisconsin penalty and short gains by Lidberg and Schutte had put the Gophers on the Badgers' 28 yard line. Abramson tried to cross the bar with a place kick. He missed and the game ended while the ball was still in the air.

A duel of great field goal kickers is looked for this afternoon when the Chicago Cardinals and Chicago Bears stage their football "city series" at the Cub park. All the trimmings of a college battle, with music furnished by Bramhall's band, will be on hand for the rooters. The clash starts at 2:15.

In former years field goals have decided most of the games between these hot rivals in the National Football league. Paddy Driscoll, former Purple and Great Lakes flash, is looked upon as the best drop kicker in the country since the days of Charley Brickley of Harvard.

Bears Have Two Kickers.

The Bears have two accurate goal shooters in Dutch Sternaman and his brother, Joe, both of Illinois. Dutch specializes at place kicks and Joe at drop kicks.

Last season the Bears won the game by a narrow margin, and the Cards are out to even up scores. The Bears probably will start an all Illini backfield, using Joe Sternaman at quarter, Larry Walquist and Dutch Sternaman at halves and Knop at full.

Driscoll at Quarter.

For the Cardinals Driscoll will lead off at quarter. At halves will be Fohl of Englewood, and Hurlburt of Chicago, with Koehler of Northwestern at full. Others who will get in the fray are A. McMahon of Harvard, McElwain of Northwestern, and King of West Virginia. Eddie Anderson of Notre Dame, an All American, and Hanke of Minnesota are the Card ends.

4 Men in 7 Bald at 40

Yet 91% Needlessly, by Tests

Our experience shows falling hair most always due to infected Sebum. Now overcome.

Remove the infected Sebum and you remove the cause of most baldness

Written Guarantee to Grow Hair, or Money Back

This is a direct offer to grow hair on your head. An offer backed by our written guarantee, given by your own Drug or Department Store. If we fail, it costs you nothing.

We have recently made amazing discoveries. We have proven that while 4 men in 7 are either bald, or partly bald, at 40, only about 9 men in a hundred need ever be bald.

Hair roots seldom die from natural causes. They can be revived. We have proved this by regrowing hair on 91 heads in 100.

Highest authorities approve this new way. Great dermatologists now employ similar methods—many charge as much as $300 for similar basic treatment.

Baldness is a symptom of a disease. Note this fact and mark it. It is most frequently a symptom of infection of the Sebum—the scalp oil.

Infected Sebum

Sebum is an oil. It forms at the follicles of the hair. Its purpose is to lubricate the hair.

But it often becomes infected. It cakes on the scalp; clogs the follicles and plugs them. Germs by the millions then start to feed upon the hair. Semi-baldness comes first; then with neglect comes total baldness.

Remove that infection and your hair will generally grow. We back this statement with a money-back guarantee. Hence it is folly for any man with falling hair not to make the test.

Now We Remove It

Our treatment is based on a new principle. It penetrates to the follicles of the hair. It relieves infection—removes the infected Sebum. It stops falling hair. It revives the dormant hair roots, generally makes new hair grow. Remember, it is guaranteed.

Warrant Given by Your Dealer

No red tape. The guarantee is positive. You are the judge. Your own Drug or Department Store gives it with each 3-bottle purchase. Go today, ask them for the Van Ess Treatment. The guarantee will accompany it. If the treatment fails—your money back.

Over 400,000 men have tested Van Ess under this same guarantee.

We Guarantee
IN WRITING
New Hair in 90 Days
Falling Hair Stopped
or Costs Nothing—unless we grow hair.

The Van Ess 3-bottle treatment is absolutely guaranteed. You are the sole judge. The warrant is given by your own dealer. All we require is his signature showing you have purchased a ninety-day treatment. If it fails, we refund your money. Hence you assume no risk making this test.

At Exactly Open Car Cost

You pay exactly open car cost for the all-year comforts of the Coach. Hudson alone can build it. As the largest builder of 6-cylinder closed cars in the world, Hudson exclusively holds the advantages to produce this car and this price.

It creates the one important buying issue today. For no one who knows closed car comforts will be satisfied with an open car, with one-season utility, and diminishing resale value.

That is why the Coach outsells all rivals. Its leadership is not even challenged. Everyone knows it provides highest closed car value. Hudson invented the Coach and its development and experience make its value exclusive.

And even more important in your permanent enjoyment of the Coach, is the famous Super-Six chassis with performance distinction and long lasting reliability not excelled by any car regardless of cost.

ST. JAMES HIGH TRIMS DE PAUL IN BELATED RALLY

Failure to kick goal and the inability to stave off a last minute series of long end runs shattered the long cherished hopes of De Paul academy yesterday in its intersectional game with the St. James High eleven of Haverhill, Mass., at De Paul field. The eastern boys, fighting a losing battle from the second quarter on, stepped out in the last period and grabbed a 7 to 6 decision before 4,000 fans.

In the second quarter the locals gained possession of the ball in midfield and began a march that ended up with the north siders crossing St. James' goal line. Blanchard, captain, and one of the best men in the Catholic league, tried for the extra point, but missed.

Then began St. James' determined attack in the waning moments. End run after end run, with Donahue and O'Neil carrying the ball, put the ball on De Paul's 10 yard line. From there Donahue went over, and Broderick added the extra point. Lineup:

ST. JAMES [7].		DE PAUL [6].
R. E.	Hollows	Wolf
R. T.	Deli	McDonnell
R. G.	Smi	Rodeliffe
C.	Dinneen	Siebel

F. B.	Blanchard [C.]	Broderick

Touchdowns — Corcoran, Donahue. Goal from touchdown—Broderick. Referee—Moore, Boston U. Umpire—Simpson, Iowa.

LOYOLA ON TOP, 7-0.

Outweighed but making up for this with speed and gameness, Loyola academy handed Mount Carmel its second Catholic league defeat yesterday by a 7 to 0 count on the Loyola campus. Completing a number of passes, Loyola brought the ball within scoring distance in the second period, P. Mooney going over. Lineup:

LOYOLA [7].		MT. CARMEL [0].
R. E.	W. Mooney	Higgins
R. T.	Sullivan	O'Boyle
R. G.	Meyer	Merrick
C.	Dooley	Nash

You Can Drive It All Day Without Fatigue

What the group of Maxwell-Chrysler engineers responsible for the good Maxwell of today have accomplished is just this—

They have raised four-cylinder motoring to a plane of fineness and comfort heretofore assumed to be impossible in a car of this type.

They have accomplished it not alone through the insistence on fine manufacturing and the use of first grade materials. They have also employed engineering innovations that practically eliminate vibration and otherwise perfect performance and riding quality.

You will especially appreciate these higher qualities when you make a country run of considerable distance.

Where you used to return from such a trip thoroughly weary, now with the good Maxwell you can drive all day without fatigue.

And as for dependable, care-free, economical service, the good Maxwell still leads all cars at anywhere near its price.

We are pleased to extend the convenience of time-payments. Ask about Maxwell's attractive plan.

The Good MAXWELL

BLUEGE, UNSUNG SENATOR HERO, CHICAGO YOUTH

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

If Oswald, "Ossie" Bluege, third baseman of the titleholding Senators, hadn't been talked out of a decision to jump his team and go home because he was lonesome there might not have been a world's series recently in Washington.

But "Ossie" was caught, bag and baggage, in the act of making his getaway under cover of darkness, his team manager convinced him of his folly, and a few years later that same kid who wanted to give up the game not only was a big factor in the winning of Washington's first pennant but today ranks as one of the most promising infielders under the big tent.

Bluege, who is a Chicago boy, went through the season and the series as a sort of unsung hero. In the heroics surrounding Walter Johnson, Peck, and a few others, the young third sacker was lost sight of, but if you ask Manager Stanley Harris who did more than his bit in the season and in the series and who stands out as a sure fire star of the near future he will reply, "Bluege." And the boy manager means it.

Signs with Peoria.

The attempt of the lad to chuck the game overboard and forget it came after he had played only two games in organized baseball. In the summer of 1920 Bill Jackson, manager of Peoria, happened to see Bluege in action with the Logan Squares. The movements of the youngster both in the field and bat caught the critical eye of the minor league pilot and he promptly induced the player to sign up for a trial.

Shortly after signing a contract Bluege was instructed to report to the Peoria team at Rock Island, Ill. It was his first trip away from home and at 19 years the average youth is not a hard boiled traveler. He played two games at Rock Island and played them well, but soon found out that a "raw busher" is not given much consideration by the older men. Time hung heavy on the hands of the lad and he stood it for two days, but then made up his mind that he'd hike back to home and fireside, and stick there.

The evening that Bluege made up his mind that his baseball career would start and finish right in Rock Island he packed his bag and, without giving an inkling of his intentions, started for the depot. Luckily for the Peoria club and for Washington as well, Jackson happened to encounter the youngster on the street.

Jackson Fixes It.

Taking note of the handbag and the dejected appearance of his promising rookie, Jackson made inquiry as to what was coming off.

"I'm going home," said the lad. "I like baseball, but being away from home and without friends isn't what I thought it would be."

The manager, knowing the ways of young players, merely turned the kid around, steered him back to the hotel, talked at length on the future, and then spent the rest of the season seeing that Bluege wasn't lonesome in his off hours.

Had Bluege in his sandlot and semi-pro days had visions of going to the top in the diamond profession, he probably wouldn't have been so easily discouraged. Fact is, he never gave baseball a thought as a means of livelihood. He played it merely because it met his ideas of a good way to spend time, and he advanced step by step simply because he had enough ability to attract the men whose business it is to go through the sticks and pick up items of promise.

He's a Modest Youth.

Today Bluege is nearing his twenty-fourth birthday; he is a member of a world's titular ball team; he has a check for $6,000, representing his reward; he has a chance to land a juicy contract next spring; and, withal, he is just the same Bluege who four years ago tried to jump his first real job and go home. He is the modest, retiring type, and yet the lack of aggressiveness is not apparent in his play. Some players manage to hang on in the big leagues because they have loud voices and can make themselves heard. This fellow hooked on and will continue to hang on for some time because he has ability that needs no ballyhooing to cover up mechanical weaknesses.

Bluege was born on the south side of Chicago Oct. 24, 1900, and now lives with his parents and two brothers at 4727 West Schubert avenue. His start in the game grew out of nothing more than a desire to possess a baseball and play catch with it. This led him into the usual neighborhood teams, and in 1915 he broke into what might be termed an organization. That was with the St. Mark's Lutheran team, for which he played shortstop.

Still Advancing.

From the Church league he moved into the Chicago Boys' league and showed improvement as he progressed, but he continued to think of the game only as a pastime. Then in 1920 he was offered an opportunity to play with the Logan Squares on a regular salary. He accepted the chance, but appeared only in a few games in the semi-pro ranks before the Peoria manager, out on a still hunt for timber, signed him and started him on his way to the top.

Late in 1921 Bluege was sold by Peoria to the Washington club for $3,500. He reported the next spring, and after several months on the bench was turned over to the Minneapolis club for seasoning. With the Millers he played shortstop and third base and at both positions continued to show that the $3,500 given for him to Peoria was wisely spent. He was recalled for the spring of 1923, and since then has been a real major leaguer in every sense of the word.

And the day is not far distant when old age will cut short the career of the peerless Roger Peckinpaugh, and from that time on Bluege will be Washington's shortstop.

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question H. L. Wells, 6023 Drexel avenue, was awarded $5.

The Question.

Do you think organized baseball would be free from graft if it were controlled by a federal commission?

Where Asked.

Sheridan road and Irving Park boulevard.

The Answers.

Henry A. Pohle, 1349 Belmont avenue, photo engraver.—There is no kind of a commission that will control organized baseball well enough to keep it from graft. If Ban Johnson has any charge to make, let him come out with it. Commissioner K. M. Landis has handled the last scandal well.

A. G. Groja, 2973 North Seeley avenue, real estate salesman.—Organized baseball does not need a federal commission. I think Commissioner K. M. Landis can handle the affairs of baseball. He is fearless and a lover of the game, and took care of the recent affair in good shape.

A. J. Conrad, 5211 West Division street, real estate.—Absolutely not! The government cannot make people honest. My suggestion for a board of control, if in order, would be a committee of three persons—one from each league—and a third reputable party, and take chances that way of preventing the sale of games.

Carl Gerwisch, 78th avenue and Irving Park boulevard, superintendent.—I do not think that they need a federal commission to iron out this last baseball scandal. Commissioner K. M. Landis is a man who will go to the bottom and clean it up. He was right in barring both O'Connell and Dolan from organized baseball.

Arthur Kruse, 3114 Lincoln avenue, baker.—I think Commissioner K. M. Landis can control organized baseball from graft. He is absolutely fearless. They need no federal commission to control them, and we have no assurance that such a commission would be effective in ridding the sport of graft.

GRIFF GRIEVES AT TALK OF LOSING WALTER JOHNSON

Washington, D. C., Oct. 18.—It seems to be up to Walter Johnson to decide finally whether he will continue to shine in the firmament of the world champion Nationals.

Clark Griffith, president of the club, says that if the veteran hurler should be offered an opportunity to better himself "it would be mighty hard for me to stand in his way, although I would certainly feel that I was being a hero" in surrendering any claim on his services.

Although the flash of his pitching arm has not been dimmed by eighteen years of major league baseball, Johnson hankers after an interest in some western minor league club, so he can settle down for the sake of his family. Griffith, of course, has been trying to dissuade him from leaving the team he helped to bring to glory, but he admits he has not been able "to talk Walter out of his idea of leaving us."

Explaining that before Johnson could leave the major leagues every club in both circuits would have to waive rights on him, Griffith expressed the opinion that if Washington gave the pitcher his release the others would do likewise "as a reward for his long and faithful service."

"Naturally, I hope that Johnson decides to stay with us a little longer," he said. "We've gotten somewhere, and asking me to let loose of a pitcher who won twenty-three games for us last year is asking something."

MINOR LEAGUE RESULTS.

PACIFIC COAST LEAGUE.

Sacramento, 1—7; Salt Lake, 3—6.
Los Angeles, 3—6; Vernon, 1—5.
San Francisco, 10—13; Oakland, 4—4.
Seattle, 6; Portland, 3.

GOLF, SADDLE AND GUN CLUB MAKES A BID FOR FAME

BY JOE DAVIS.

Organized to provide the utmost in club facilities for the sportsman of modest means, the Chicago Golf, Saddle and Gun club has entered the field.

The officers are Albert W. Wilber of Ames, Emrich and company, president; Robert H. Bartholomes, commercial manager of the Illinois Bell Telephone company, secretary, and Edmund H. Glos, Bartlett, Ill., treasurer.

The club has secured 191 acres of well wooded, rolling ground fronting on Lake street, twenty-nine miles from the loop and one hour's motor drive from the heart of the city. The property is within four blocks of the town of Bartlett, and the tracks of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad skirt it.

Near Medinah Club.

Near this location are the new Medinah Country club and the private estate and golf course of Attorney Charles E. Erbstein. Two golf courses are planned, one of eighteen holes of championship class, and another of nine, which will be reserved for women and the older children of members' families on Saturdays and Sundays.

As a number of the promoters are interested in trap shooting, this will be a feature. An adequate supply of traps will be installed with the object of staging big tournaments, and the shooters will be provided with lockers and showers in the main club house, which will cost approximately $100,000.

The equestrian side of the club will include a stable of horses which will be rented to members, and accommodations for privately owned horses. Many shaded gravel roads radiate from the club, and are free from automobile traffic. Another feature will be an outdoor swimming tank in which it is planned to hold weekly contests. For the use of members' families there will be a seventeen acre picnic ground.

Memberships at $100.

A separate club house will be provided for the golfers. This will contain lockers and showers and a men's dormitory on the second floor. A two acre, spring-fed, fish stocked lake is on the property and will be available for casting tournaments.

The initial memberships are being sold at $100, but this will be increased as construction proceeds. Dues will be $35 a year. The offices of the club are at 1016 South State street.

ILLINOIS JUNIORS.

Samuel Gilbert, member of the Illinois Seniors' Golf association and founder of the Illinois Junior Golfers' association, left yesterday for Atlantic City, N. J., where he will attend the National Recreation Congress, which will hold its annual convention this week. Mr. Gilbert is scheduled to speak Tuesday on "Golf for Juniors."

EVANSTON.

Finishing all square in the final round of competition for the Fellowship cup, Dr. H. J. Combs and H. S. Camp will decide ownership of the trophy later.

Winners in the sweepstakes were A. I. Appleton, 83—18—65; Howard Raymond, 77—7—70, and W. J. Holm, 91—19—72. Willie Hunter, Onwentsia professional, paid a visit to Laurie Ayton yesterday, and had a round of 39—33—72, while Ayton had 35—36—71.

GLEN VIEW.

A large field competed at match play against par, the winners being S. H. Hardy, 4 up; L. A. Ferguson, J. J. Charles Jr., and C. Wherman, 1 down.

WESTMORELAND.

In the putting contest, Dr. C. M. Case won with 25 strokes at 18 holes over the clock face course. The Fellowship cup went to J. Medlock, who had 88—11—77.

RIVERSIDE.

The annual Harvest Home tournament was held yesterday, H. A Sellen donating all the prizes. Winners were as follows:

N. W. Willard, 40—40—80, low gross; W. M. Williams, 95—20—75, low net.

Sweepstakes: Class A—C. H. Clary, 73. Class B—E. M. Love, 73. Class C—H. A. Sellen, 80.

E. E. Goodwillie won the club title, 3 and 2, against J. F. Roche Jr., in the 36 hole final.

OAK PARK.

E. L. Hartig, with 79, was the sharpshooter, leading with the lowest gross score in class A and winning the optional sweepstakes. Other winners were: Class A—W. G. Oliver, 90—14—76, low net. Class B—C. E. Gambrill, 91, low gross; H. W. Allen, 94—19—75, low net. Class C—E. H. Radenoch, 99, low gross; H. J. Armstrong, 100—24—76, low net.

Blues Nip Cermaks, 4-3, in Semi-Pro Title Series

The semi-pro championship series got under way yesterday when the Chicago Blues defeated the Cermaks in the initial game of the schedule, 4 to 3.

Score:

Chicago Blues	030	010	000	4
Cermaks	000	020	100	3

Niesens Take On Fosters in Double-Header Today

The Niesens tackle the American Giants this afternoon in a double header at Niesen's park, the first game starting at 1:30. The Niesens have added some new stars to their lineup for these battles, and will try to take two straight. Dolly Gray and Buster Winkler will face the best that Manager Rube Foster can produce on the slab.

Lad Killed at Wheel of Racing Automobile

Clearfield, Pa., Oct. 18.—Kenneth Quinn, 20, of Dubois, was fatally injured today in a fifty mile automobile race on the Clearfield racetrack. On the eighth mile his car went through the fence, crushing his skull. He died a short time later in a hospital. Four cars were entered in the race.

On Local Golf Links

"KADY" TOURNAMENT.

HARRY WOLF and Walter Thiebault, the club champion, carried off the low gross honors in the first annual "Kady" tournament of the North Shore Golf club yesterday, the former winning low gross for the first nine holes with a card of 38, and the latter taking low gross on the second nine with 41.

The "Kady" tournament was essentially a dress affair in which the contestants received added handicaps, according to their costumes, a "Kady" giving the player one stroke more, while exposed suspenders gave the owner another stroke. Thiebault, who was dressed as a stage Englishman, was given two strokes because of the difficulty he experienced in controlling his monocle when driving. Wolf was attired as a clown and was handicapped by the density of his makeup, having applied three coats of Chinese white. President George Wolf and Bill Cornell were disguised as ordinary citizens:

The prize winners were:

Low gross [first nine holes], H. Wolf, 38; H. H. Harrison, 45. Low gross [second nine holes], W. Thiebault, 41; F. Wanner, 45. Low net [first nine], F. Ketcham, 32; L. P. Dwyer, 33; C. E. Driver, 33; H. B. Klusmeyer, 34. Low net [second nine], F. A. Kaulbark, 33; V. A. Smith, 33; R. T. Meiser, 34; W. Betteridge, 35. Blind bogey, R. C. Johnson, Dr. Segsworth.

At the dinner following the tournament prizes won during the year were distributed as follows:

Club championship, W. Thiebault; R. C. Boozer, runner up. Class B, F. D. Breit; J. F. Caine, runner up. Class C, A. Wirgles-worth; E. E. Bain, runner up. Class D, John Baker; R. A. Seymour, runner up. Directors' cup, H. H. Kuhl; R. C. Boozer, runner up. President's trophy, J. F. Caine; L. Macomber, runner up.

INDIAN HILL.

B. F. Cummins won the W. J. Woolfolk trophy at Indian Hill, finishing even with par. G. M. McConnell, E. S. Ballard, and E. M. Cummins were 2 down and A. A. Beebe, 4 down.

SOUTH SHORE.

The last golf event was a sweepstakes, match play against par. The winners were J. S. Houston, all even; H. E. Sever, and E. S. Leonard, 1 down. No opposition developed yesterday to the regular ticket, which was elected as follows: President, William M. Wilson; vice president, F. F. Winans; secretary, Edwin J. Stevens; treasurer, W. W. Lampert; governors [three year terms], John G. Campbell, Jesse G. Chapline, Joseph E. Hitt, A. E. Shutz, W. F. McWhinney, E. F. Wearly.

PROS TO PLAY.

FORTY local professionals are tarded to compete in the final team match of the season at the Park Ridge Country club tomorrow. George Knox will captain the south side and Phil Gaudin the north. Four games have been played, and the sections are tied. The annual election of the Illinois Professional Golfers' association will be held during the day.

EXMOOR.

Trigg Waller won the championship at Exmoor, defeating C. C. Hopkins, 3 and 2, in the 36 hole final. Russell Mott won the handicap with a card of 83—9—74. C. E. Thome, 91—16—75, and S. O. Dunn, 84—9—75, being second.

OLYMPIA.

Olympia Fields will finish its season schedule Thursday with a one day tournament, which will be followed by a dinner dance. A feature of the day will be the playing off by various past winners for fifteen trophies, which have remained in escrow for a number of years. Practically all of these prizes carried the stipulation that they must be won three times to become the permanent property of a member. The method may be all right for youngsters, but since some of the trophies have stood on the shelf for nine years, it was deemed advisable to get them placed and to start anew on a yearly basis.

The event next Thursday will also celebrate the completion of the world's largest and most costly clubhouse, a building on which approximately $750,000 has been expended.

ACACIA.

Winners in the ball sweepstakes were J. Samuels, 71; M. D. Reeder, 73; H. Ferguson, 74, and J. Mogenson, 74.

MIDLOTHIAN.

C. W. Booth, with 79, and J. G. Stevenson, with 84—16—68, were the respective winners of the low gross and low net Golfers' magazine prizes.

FLOSSMOOR.

Finishing with a margin of 4 and 3, W. A. Cockrell won the Autumn cup in the thirty-six hole final against Morgan T. Jones. Winners in the Last Chance handicap tournament were as follows: Class A, T. J. Monahan, 84—7—74; class B, A. R. Fay, 96—17—79; class C, A. F. James, 92—20—72; class D, D. B. Cheever, 105—27—78.

MAYWOOD.

The feature of yesterday's play was a new low record of 36—36—72 over the new course by Ellsworth Hopkins. The former figure was 76, made by F. Schultz. W. Maas won the prize in the handicap event with 78.

HOPPE BEATS DE ORO.

New York, Oct. 18.—[Special.]—Willie Hoppe, world's 18.2 balkline champion, won the last two blocks of his 600 point match at three cushions with Alfred De Oro, former three cushion champion, at the Hoppe academy tonight and captured the match at 600 to 391. He won the afternoon block in decisive fashion at 50 to 13, going out in 30 innings and making a run of 9.

FOREIGN STARS ENTER SIX DAY BICYCLE RACE

Oscar Egg of Switzerland and Alfred Grenda of Tasmania, winners of the last six day race in Chicago, will go to the post as a team when the international racing starts at the Coliseum next Saturday night. Manager Paddy Harmon announced last night that he is now so certain of his field that he had decided again to team this pair and does not believe that they will be able to win the race.

Egg, veteran of nearly fifty six-day races in all parts of the United States, Europe and Australia, arrived in New York yesterday on the steamship Paris. He brought word that the famous Maurice Brocco, favorite of the fans, probably would never ride another six-day race. Brocco is getting along in years and wants to rest in the winter and confine himself to sprint races in the summer. A little rest, however, may change his mind, according to Egg.

DIRT TRACK AUTO RACERS COMPETE FOR TITLE TODAY

Chicago fans will be offered some great auto racing this afternoon at Roby speedway, 108th street and Indianapolis avenue, when the nation's best pilots contest for the United States dirt track championship at 100 miles.

Fifty-two entries will participate in qualifying trials this morning to determine the twenty who are to engage in the final tussle at 2:30. The race will be featured by a battle between Chicago's fastest and most daring drivers and a well known field of out-of-town entries.

Every local race favorite is entered. Of these Cliff Woodbury, in his new Frontenac, Leslie Allen, George Beck, Al Cotey, Curley Young, Esthan Wenneston, and Paul Clancy are figured as the most likely candidates for the championship. At least a dozen outsiders must be conceded as title possibilities.

Woods and Waters

SEASON ON RINGNECKS SOON WILL OPEN.

IN less than a month Illinois hunters will get into action on pheasants, those gay coated strangers that now inhabit thick cover in many parts of the state. The Illinois law says that one may shoot two cock pheasants from Nov. 10 to 15, the hens being protected throughout the year.

The ringneck, with its dazzling array of brilliant colors, is one of the most talked of game birds in the country today. Sportsmen alternately praise it or condemn it, while many states continue to spend their money to increase the ringneck population. Mr. Pheasant may be a stranger in our game fields, he may be a corking fine game bird or a nuisance, but no introduced bird can boast of such a long and illustrious history. One has to go back a good many centuries to strike the trail of this bird, as the early Greeks and Romans are reported to have brought it to Europe for its beauty and delicate flesh. According to the story, it came originally from the Phasis river, on the Black sea, which accounts for the name pheasant.

About the time that Columbus discovered America the nobles of France naturalized the bird, and it was given the rank of royal game of the first class. That boosted the stock of the showy birds and their numbers increased on the continent. No one knows when the pheasant was introduced into England, but it is thought that the conquering Romans boxed up a few birds and carried them to the islands. Anyway, as early as 1059 A. D. the pheasant was mentioned on English bills of fare and it's been there ever since. The pheasant's invasion of America has come by way of Oregon, as in this state the first batch of ringnecks were liberated. Today you find the ringneck flourishing in many states of the Union, while the sportsmen argufy over their qualities as game birds.

SCOTT IS GIVEN NO. 1 RANK IN COLLEGE TENNIS

New York, Oct. 18.—[United Press.]—Wallace Scott of the University of Washington was accorded first place in the ranking of intercollegiate tennis stars by the United States Lawn Tennis association today. Arnold Jones, Yale, is No. 2.

First place in the doubles went to the team of Lewis N. White and Louis Thalheimer, University of Texas. Jerome Lang and Frank Anderson, Columbia, were awarded second place in the doubles. The 1924 ranking follows:

SINGLES.

1, W. Scott, Washington university; 2, A. Jones, Yale; 3, F. Anderson, Columbia; 4, W. W. Ingraham, Harvard; 5, F. Mercur, Lehigh; 6, L. N. White, Texas; 7, J. Lang, Columbia; 8, J. E. Howard, Princeton; 9, R. Chandler, California; 10, P. Betens, California.

DOUBLES.

1, White and Thalheimer, Texas; 2, Lang and Anderson, Columbia; 3, Ingraham and Pfaffman, Harvard; 4, Bottens and Chandler, California; 5, Jones and Hopkins, Yale; 6, Hesketh and Scott, Washington; 7, Gilkin and Rogers, Kansas; 8, Colburn and Lingelbach, Penn; 9, Parks and Harrington, Oklahoma U.; 10, Hubbell and Sheridan, Yale.

SERIES ASSURED FOR SAINTS WITH COAST CHAMPS

St. Paul, Minn., Oct. 18.—St. Paul, champions of the American association and winners of the junior world's series with Baltimore, will play a post-season series with the winner of the Pacific Coast league to determine the minor league baseball championship, according to information received here today by John W. Norton, president of the St. Paul club.

President Norton today received a telegram from Charles J. Lockard, president of the Seattle team, advising him that Seattle was willing to meet St. Paul for the minor league championship.

PERJURY CHARGE AGAINST FIRPO IS WITHDRAWN

New York, Oct. 18.—Perjury charges against Luis Angel Firpo, Argentine heavyweight, before Federal Commissioner Hitchcock, were withdrawn today, with the announcement that the case against the pugilist would be presented to a federal grand jury next week.

Canon William S. Chase, Firpo's prosecutor, asked permission to withdraw his case after he had received a letter from the grand jury foreman asking him to appear before that body with his evidence.

The withdrawal came immediately after Commissioner Hitchcock had ruled that testimony showing the relationship existing between Firpo and Bianca Lourdes Picart prior to the pugilist's application for admittance to this country was immaterial.

No Rose-Strewn Path.

Members of the State Athletic commission have indicated in no uncertain way that Firpo is not to have a path of roses even though he does straighten out his differences with the government.

Firpo, following his setback at the hands of Harry Wills, had a longing to redeem himself in the eyes of the public. He figured that the best way to bring about this would be to take on a few well known but decrepit heavyweights and thereby swing back to the top by the setup route.

Frowns on Fulton as Victim.

But the commission knocked all of these plans into a cocked hat by announcing that hereafter Firpo will have to take on boxers of established ability.

Fred Fulton has been penciled in as victim No. 1 for the South American, but while the commission cannot prohibit a match until it is an actuality the board hinted in no uncertain terms that it would not sanction a match between Firpo and the much plastered plasterer. Neither did the boxing moguls look with favor upon Bartley Madden, who has been mentioned as an opponent for the heavy browed South American.

Eight Amateur Boxers to Do Their Stuff Today

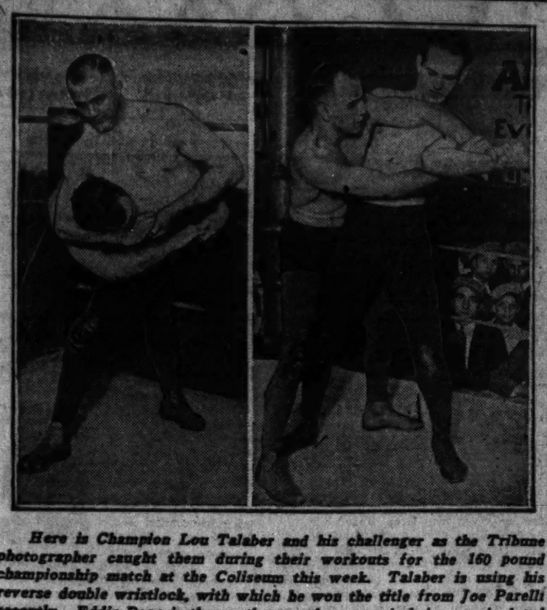
Eight amateur boxers will strut their stuff at the Olympic A. C., 459 East 31st street, in the club's regular Sunday matinee this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. Among these is Willie Buff, A. A. U. lightweight champion. Cecil Harriz and Williams will finish their draw battle of Oct. 12. Battling Nelson, former world's lightweight champion, will be the third man in the ring.

NOTES OF THE CUE ROOMS.

Grossman played 91 innings last night in Massey's, 10 West Jackson, three cushion handicap billiard house tourney to beat Bell [50], 50 to 24. Grossman had a high run of 3, while the best Bell could do was 2. The second game of the play was won by Gordon when he beat Rogers [31] by a score of 25 to 31. This game took 96 innings. Rogers had a high run of 4 and Gordon's was 3.

One game was carded for last night in Sutton's balk line house billiard tourney. Hays won from Whittigar [115], 175 to 95. Each player made a high run of 7 during the 92 innings which were played.

GRAPPLE FOR TITLE TUESDAY



Here is Champion Lou Talaber and his challenger as the Tribune photographer caught them during their workouts for the 160 pound championship match at the Coliseum this week. Talaber is using his reverse double wristlock, with which he won the title from Joe Parelli recently. Eddie Pope is the gentleman whose arm is being manipulated by the champ. In the other picture Heinie Engel has secured the front headlock on Dr. Carl Furness. Things look pretty dark for the doctor. Both of the grapplers are masters of all the known holds.

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

When Lou Talaber, the world's middleweight champion, and Challenger Heine Engel of Dubuque, Ia., meet in the windup of the wrestling show at the Coliseum on Tuesday night for the world's 160 pound title, practically every hold known to the mat game will be called into execution.

Both men have been grappling for so many years that there is scarcely a lock which they cannot apply for damaging results. Each has his favorite grips and in all probability they will rely upon the locks which have brought the desired results in the past.

Favors Double Wrist Lock.

There is no wrestler in the game who knows more about double wrist locking than Talaber. He can secure the hold from any position and knows how and when to apply the leverage. When he won the title from Joe Parelli at the Coliseum recently, Talaber used a reverse double wrist lock to win the third and deciding fall.

Talaber's resourcefulness may be gathered from his championship bout with Parelli. In the second fall of that contest, the Italian missed an attempt for a flying mare. Quick as a flash, Talaber clamped on a full nelson, one of the oldest holds known to catch as catch can wrestling. Lou held the torturous lock for fully five minutes and finally forced Parelli into submission. The hold is so dangerous that it is barred in amateur wrestling.

Engel Won Rough Go.

Talaber and Engel met in Dubuque about a year ago and Heine was returned the victor after a rough match. In fact, Talaber was taken to the hospital after the match and had six stitches put in his lips. Engel claimed Talaber gouged him and retaliated by punching Lou in the mouth.

The main bout will start promptly at 10 o'clock, and three other contests will support the windup.

Stilts Wins Hunt Cup in Massachusetts Race

Hamilton, Mass., Oct. 18.—The National Hunt Cup, carrying the steeplechase championship of the year, was won today by Stilts, a hunter owned by S. L. Depew of Detroit, and ridden by A. C. Burrage Jr. of Boston. The course was a natural hunting course on the estate of Bradley E. Palmer, on which the Prince of Wales will hunt next week.

Northam Nine Wins from Chicago Postoffice, 6-4

The Public Service company team of Northam defeated the Chicago postoffice outfit, 6 to 4, in the radio fund battle at Joliet yesterday. Paderni, Ehrhart and Koenig were the sluggers of the occasion, each knocking out a circuit clout. Borghi did some good pitching for the service company outfit.

SHEA-SARMIENTO BOUT MOVED UP TO NEXT FRIDAY

Matchmaker Martin (Babe) Mullaney of the East Chicago club at the request of Frank Churchill, manager of Pete Sarmiento, has moved up the ten round bout between Pete and Eddie Shea booked for his arena from Oct. 27 to next Friday night.

Sarmiento meets Benny Bass in a ten round go at Milwaukee tomorrow night and Churchill thinks that the little brown skinned mauler will be as fit as a fiddle with three days' work after his Milwaukee scrap. Pete never trains more than six or seven days for a match and with the Bass battle under his belt will be in good shape for the local Italian.

Another Good Bout.

Mullaney has closed another attractive match for this show. Joe Asserella, the Milwaukee Italian, meets Frankie Schaefer, the south boy, in an eight rounder at 133 pounds. Asserella gained a lot of prestige here by giving Sammy Mandell a close fight during the open air season last summer.

Sarmiento will be here on Tuesday and will bring Asserella with him. The Badger battler has been helping Pete with his training in the Cream City and will make their headquarters at the Mullen gym. Shea also is working out at the Mullen resort and is doing plenty of boxing for the affair. Eddie needs speed to compete with Sarmiento, who is fast and clever and can punch with his left hand.

Are Backing Eddie.

Shea's Italian followers on the west side think that Eddie is unbeatable and are ready to back him to take the measurement of Pete.

Two other bouts will be arranged to complete the bill. The tickets are on sale at the usual places at $3 and $5.

Sammy Mandell, the Rockford lightweight who is matched to box Jack Bernstein fifteen rounds to a decision at Madison Square Garden in New York on Nov. 7, will be in town Tuesday to start drilling for the bout.

Two special trains will convey the fans to Milwaukee tomorrow night to witness the three ten round bouts arranged by Frank Mulkern for the Cream City auditorium. Besides the Bass-Sarmiento bout there will be scraps between Willie Herman and Tommy O'Brien and Joe Sieloff and Clonie Tait, who are in the lightweight division.

CHILHOWEE SETS NEW RECORD IN LATONIA RACE

Latonia, Ky., Oct. 18.—Chilhowee, Latonia Derby winner, scored in the Latonia Champion stakes here today, negotiating the mile and three-quarters distance in 2:54 3-5. Mad Play finished second and Aga Khan third.

The performance of Chilhowee established a new American record, formerly held by Rockminister and made in the same race on Oct. 21, 1922. The old record was 2:55 3-5.

Zev, greatest money winner of all times, lowered the Latonia track record for a mile in the Hotel Havlin handicap today when he ran the distance in 1:36 2-5, clipping one-fifth of a second from the previous record.

KIECKHEFER AND HOPPE OPEN CUE MEET TUESDAY

If any doubts existed as to Willie Hoppe's ability at three cushions they were dissipated by his decisive victory over Alfred De Oro at New York last week. His defeat of the former king of the angle players has greatly increased interest in his match this week against Augie Kieckhefer which will start on Tuesday afternoon at the Kieckhefer Recreation room, 20 East Randolph street.

The match is at 400 points in eight blocks of fifty each, the afternoon sessions starting at 3 o'clock and the night at 8 o'clock. They will play for a purse of $3,000, sixty per cent going to the winner and forty to the loser. In addition there is a side wager of $500.

Few matches in recent years have caused a greater diversity of opinion. New York followers of Hoppe are reported as willing to give slight odds on him, but if any of that coin appears here it will be snapped up.

DAILY RACING FORM'S MONDAY'S SELECTIONS

EPINARD RUNS FIFTH IN A FIELD OF 7 AT LAUREL

Laurel, Md., Oct. 18.—[Special.]—Epinard had his fourth opportunity to show his mettle on an American race course this afternoon and the French 4 year old was soundly beaten, finishing fifth in a field of seven. In front of him at the end of the mile were Fred A. Burten's Wise Counsellor, winner of the first international race at Belmont park; Glen Gliddle farm's Big Blaze, Gifford A. Cochran's Sun Flag, and Harry Payne Whitney's filly Initiate, in that order. Epinard developed a quarter crack during the running of the race, pulled up lame, and will not race again in this country.

The race was the Laurel stakes for all ages, with $10,000 in added money. It was worth $10,225 to the owner of the winner. A $2 ticket in the mutuels on Wise Counsellor paid $11.50, with $5.70 for a place and $4.90 to show.

My Play Is Last.

Wise Counsellor, carrying 120 pounds, ran in front all the way and won with great ease by two and a half lengths from Big Blaze, which was two and a half lengths in front of Sun Flag. The Cochran colt led Initiate by a length and a half, Epinard finishing half a length in back of the filly and a head in front of A. H. Morris' Rustic. Two lengths back trailed My Play, the last of the field, under top weight of 123 pounds and never a contender.

Epinard appeared far from the horse that he was in his three contract engagements. In the parade to the post he appeared lackadaisical and without interest.

Epinard Is Hurt.

Epinard went to the post with an incipient quarter crack, developed during the training at Latonia.

Trainer Leigh believed that nothing serious would develop from it. This morning the crack bled slightly, but the foot was treated, three-quarter plates were put on him, and the foot securely bound with adhesive tape. The crack was in the right forefoot, and the off forefoot was similarly tapped to balance the weight.

Another factor that probably was not to the liking of the French colt was Kummer's tapping him with the whip.

It is possible, Leigh said, that Epinard will remain in the United States for a season in the stud, but will not race again this season.

Old "Iron Man Joe" Will Re-enter Baseball at 53

Dubuque, Ia., Oct. 18.—[Special.]—"Iron Man" Joe McGinnity, famous pitching veteran, who retired after piloting the Dubuque Mississippi Valley league club to the pennant in 1923, will reënter baseball next spring, he announced here today. He has not decided which of three offers he will accept. Although he was 53 years old, McGinnity was one of the leading pitchers in the Valley league in 1923. He was formerly with the New York Giants.

42 RUNNERS TO COMPETE IN TEN MILE RACE TODAY

Forty-two runners will compete this afternoon at 1:30 o'clock in a ten mile road race which will be staged at the Herzl school, Douglas boulevard and Lawndale avenue, under the auspices of the Twenty-fourth ward Democratic organization. A crowd of 25,000 is expected to witness the performance of the harriers who include "Chuck" Mellor, present holder of the record of 54:55 for the event. The I. A. C. has entered six runners in the meet, according to Harry Barr, director of the meet.

WORTH VS. WORDS

This is one of a series of advertisements in which Auburn dares to tell the truth.

In others we will expose the fallacy of the manufacturing-economy-claims made by big production manufacturers.

Later we will prove why a smaller manufacturer like Auburn can build better cars; why all the cars will never be built by a few big combines.

We will also answer the claims made by quantity producers of cheaply built cars against the assembled car.

Every builder of motor cars has two problems; building them and then selling them.

To help him sell he advertises.

There is where you find much of the "bunk" about automobiles.

What has a girl somewhere west of Kankakee got to do with the quality and price of a motor car?

Too much is being charged for fresh air and sunshine in the list price of some motor cars.

Is not fresh air just as fresh and sunshine just as shiny for people in a Ford as for those in a Rolls Royce.

Why should any automobile manufacturer expect you to buy his product because his advertisements paint a pretty picture about the "call of the open road"?

All this is romantic glamour thrown around cars to make the words take the place of worth—a poetic smoke screen for a price that is out of line with the intrinsic quality actually built into the car.

That is only one phase of the "bunk" that is calculated to influence you in determining in which car you should invest your money.

Here is another—Go through any large Sunday newspaper and read all the automobile ads. Do not they all claim the most beauteous beauty? and all claim the most luxurious luxury? and all claim the most powerful power? and the most economical economy? Most of them sing the same song and expect you to believe it in spite of the fact that the prices of these cars range all the way from around $500 to $5,000.

That is one of the reasons why dealers for some makes find them hard to sell.

You cannot fool all the people all the time.

The experienced owner knows it is not what the manufacturer puts in his advertisements, but what he puts in the cars that determines how much you get for your money.

There is only one thing you, the buyer, is interested in and that is the car itself; how well it is built; how well it performs and how long it will last.

And is its price commensurate with the intrinsic quality or does it include a tax on fresh air and sunshine?

For 23 years we have been building Auburn cars. The proof of how well we have built them is found in the host of contented owners.

Auburn has as large a percentage of repeat owners as any other make of car.

And the proof of how well we are building the new Auburn 8-In-Line is found in the new way we are selling it.

We simply ask you to come in and drive it and assure you that you will not be asked to buy; that if the car doesn't sell itself we won't try to.

This new 8-In-Line is not a car that is going to be built—it is here, now! It does not carry a "come on" price, to be raised when we get into production.

Neither does it carry a fictitious price concealing a trade allowance. It is priced for the man who wants 100 cents in value for every dollar he spends and who is smart enough to know when he is being kidded about the value of his used automobile.

There is not a claim any other automobile maker can make that we cannot make for this new Auburn 8-In-Line.

We are not winning satisfied owners by the way we talk, but by the way it performs and by the way it wears. We do, however, promise you a surprise and will challenge any car buyer or competitive dealer to comparisons.

MOTORDOM

Here's a Clarion Call from Maine's Pine Clad Lakes

Motor Visitors Turn to the Deep Woods for Fall Sport.

PORTLAND, Me.—[Special Correspondence.]—The call of woods and lakes is soon to replace that of the ocean resorts for motor fans in Maine. Many of the thousands of summer visitors who looked into the Pine Tree state this season have left for their homes in various states to the south and west, while hot a few others are staying on to enjoy the month of October. Proprietors of a number of hotels and boarding camps have extended their vacation season, due to the continued warmth of the weather and the general lateness of the season.

But the late fisherman and the hunters have the call from now on. Reports of the past few weeks are that the late August fishing was well beyond the average in Maine's game fish waters, and that prospects for fall are unusually fine. In Kennebago stream trout and salmon running from one to four pounds have been taken repeatedly, while big bass have been rising to the fly in goodly quantities at Belgrade lakes. From the Rangeleys and Moosehead, also, reports are gratifying.

The open season for duck hunting dates from Sept. 16 and at Merrymeeting bay, near Bath, and other spots equally convenient to rail and motor routes, the season is on. Partridge are open to shooting beginning Oct. 1, and deer Oct. 15. Wardens in the various counties of the game country have reported fine conditions to the state department of inland fisheries and game. In southern Washington county more than twice as many ducks have been noted as were in the fall of 1516, which is largely due to the protection policy practiced in recent years.

Deer are reported plentiful in Aroostock county and in Penobscot county, from Lee and vicinity toward Debsis lake, the same condition holds. Sections of Hancock county reached from the head of Nicatous lake, have an aoundance of deer, while in the region reached from Amherst, deer signs are healthy.

In Oxford county, in western Maine, easily reached by motor from Portland, even the organized sections are well stocked with deer this season, travelers report. The organized sections are those where it is lawful to set up camps and build fires. Fine hunting is to be found in Albany, Mason, Gilead, and through to Riley in this county, and it is not necessary to go north to the big woods upstate for game this season, though those who like the wilder country will find their game in the northern counties as always.

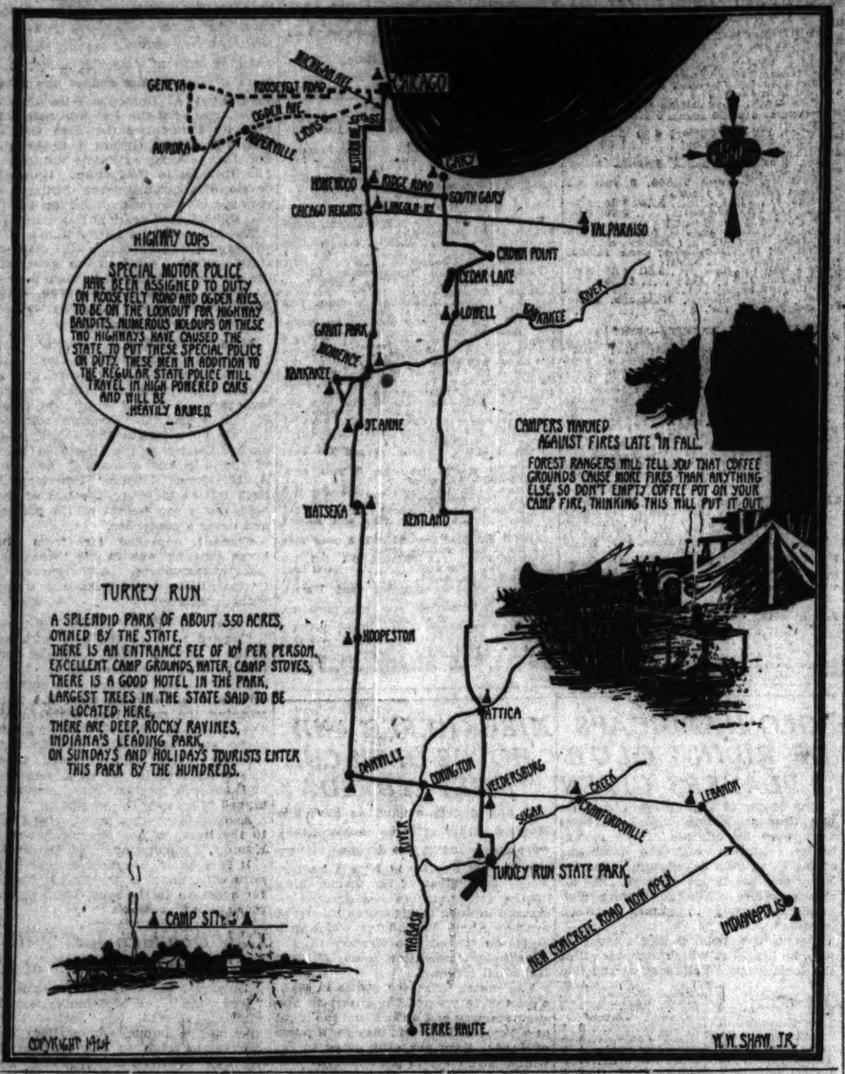
XXVII. ROUTES INTO HOOSIERDOM



Old Gen. Average Relents in War on Your Tires

MANY motorists, as they sail along the highway with the family in the back seat enjoying the scenery, probably become skeptical of tire statistics when they get a sudden jolt as the left rear tire blows out. But these same motorists likewise probably fail to take into account the fact that the service they are receiving from their tires is far in excess of that received by car owners a few years ago.

The average tire consumption per car per year, according to figures compiled by Miller tire statisticians, is 2.74. This figure stands out against 4.50 tires year in 1918 and is indicative of the improvements which have been incorporated into tires of today. The rate of consumption decreased gradually from 1915 to 1921. Since 1921, however, the rate has remained about the same and tire manufacturers are of the opinion that approximately 2.7 tires is about as low as the rate can be expected to go.

Ship by Truck.

Transportation of live stock by motor vehicle over the highways has become quite general, declares E. L. Browne, agricultural economist of the United States bureau of public roads. Ninety per cent of the hogs received from within a radius of fifty miles of large cities are now delivered by motor truck, he says.

Highway Flowers.

Pennsylvania highways are to become parkways of scenic splendor and beauty. Blossom bearing vines and shrubbery, grass and vines to hide the yellow scars of road cuts will be planted by the state highway department. Approximately 300,000 vines will be required by the state in the beautifying program. These will include wild roses, rambler and creeper roses, honeysuckle, arub dogwood, and many others.

EXCESSIVE HEAT.

Excessive heat will cause a piston to seize or expand to such an extent as to become wedged in the cylinders.

THE INQUIRING REPORTER

He's Out to Learn the Truth About Motordom

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question $5 is awarded to Ralph Bailey, Methodist hospital, Bloomington, Ill.

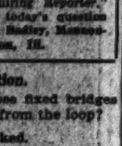
The Question.

Would you like to see fixed bridges carrying traffic to and from the loop?

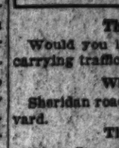
Where Asked.

Sheridan road and Irving Park boulevard.

The Answers.

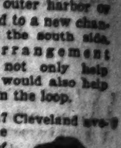


Edna Stange, 1017 Montana street, housewife—I think that, without making fixed bridges, the city could regulate the time of river traffic so that it would not interrupt rush hour traffic. This would save both the expense of new bridges and also the big expense which raising the bridges causes to motorists. Without knowing the exact figures, I do not think that there is enough river traffic to warrant the present bothers.



Mrs. Betty Hayes, 2507 Sunnyside avenue, stenographer—Our new link bridge seems to be always opening up for some long freighter which means little or nothing to commerce but delays vehicular traffic for long minutes and causes all sorts of expense. If we had bridges that stayed down all along the loop streets the situation would be greatly improved for every one.

George Conrad, 1410 Cleveland avenue, salesman—I'd like to see fixed bridges all along the river and the water traffic either held to the outer harbor or diverted to a new channel on the south side. This arrangement would not only help traffic in Chicago but would also help business to escape from the loop.



John J. Redman, 2117 Cleveland avenue, cigar dealer—The opening and closing of bridges for the little water traffic that remains in Chicago delays traffic many hours each day and seems to be a needless expense and a class proposition. The greatest good for the greatest number would certainly be to establish fixed bridges.

August Sikowska, 2240 Ward street, tire dealer—I think that passenger steamers should dock at our Municipal pier. That's what it was made for at a big public expense. The freight boats should fix a time to go through the river and avoid hours when traffic is heavy. I do not think that river traffic is important enough to warrant the loss swing bridges bring to the city.

134 STAR OWNERS AVERAGE 24 9/10 MILES PER GALLON

ONE hundred thirty four Star owners, driving an aggregate of one and a half million miles, averaged 24 9/10 miles per gallon of gas.

This record was made in Georgia and Alabama mud, in Texas and Idaho sand, in Maine and Vermont snow and in the high altitudes of the Rocky Mountains. It was made by ordinary Star cars, driven by ordinary drivers. It represents Star performance under average conditions as they exist today throughout the United States and Canada.

True, many Star owners get more than 24 9/10 miles from a gallon of gas. In sections where good roads predominate, many Star owners report 28 to 38 miles.

If you are seeking a car sparing in the use of gas you will find that the unusual power of the Star motor is not developed by the extravagant use of fuel.

The small gas consumption of the Star car is another reason why those who seek reliable transportation at a minimum of expense should consider the Star first.

New Scenic Route Will Run Parallel with Hudson Drive

New Jersey Lets $100,000 Contract for First Work on Highways.

WORK is to be started soon on a new state highway in northern New Jersey which will be known as Route No. 18. When completed this will be one of the most beautiful drives in the eastern section of the country, extending from Hoboken up through Ridgefield, then following the ridge of the Palisades from Palisade to the New York state line where it will conect with route No. 3 of the New York state highway system.

The new route will run parallel with the Hendrick Hudson drive through Interstate park, but will be on the top of the Palisades and will afford vistas of the Hudson river that are unsurpassed for scenic grandeur.

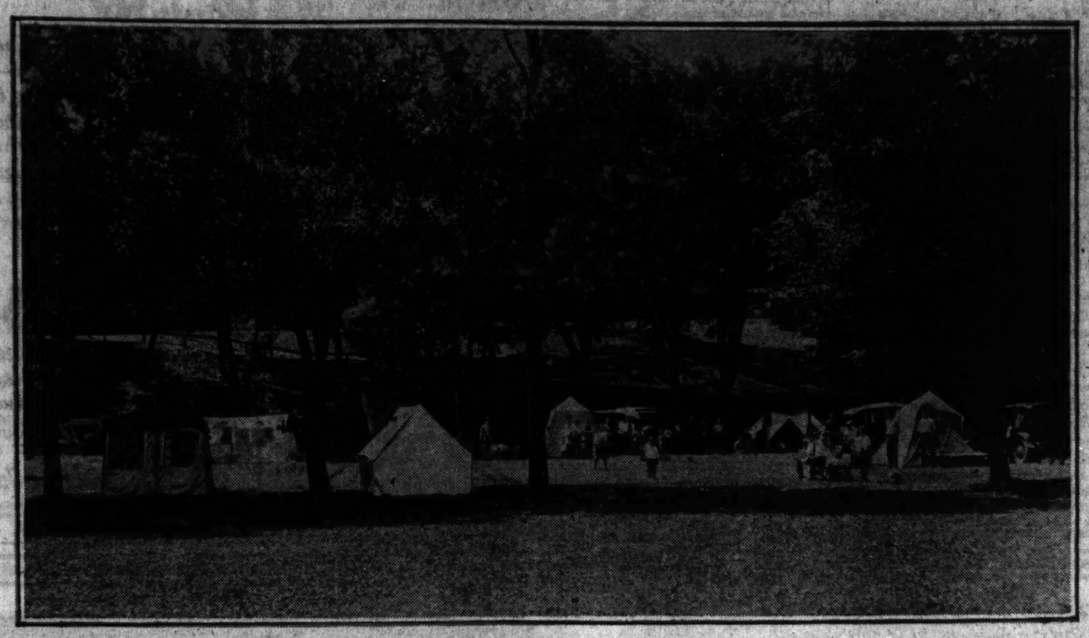
Englewood Cliffs, Alpine, Piermont, Nyack, Haverstraw, Bear Mountain, West Point are all along the proposed route, which leads directly to the famous Storm King highway.

The contract for the construction of the first portion of the highway has been awarded by the New Jersey state highway commission at an approximate cost of $100,000 and will be completed within a year.

It is expected the entire job will cover a period of several years.

It is the purpose of the new route to relieve the ever increasing traffic that goes from New Jersey into New York state and to afford a highway that is rich in natural beauty for those who find pleasure in motoring.

PLEASANT HAVEN FOR TRAIL FOLK.



Ottawa, Ill., gateway to the Starved Rock country, has provided one of the loveliest tourist havens of the middle west in Allen park, the city's free camp. Holidays this year have packed the camp to its limit and throughout the season motorists from every part of the country have enjoyed its hospitality.

WEAK CONDENSER.
Condenser or coil should be replaced if weak. Don't wait till you're caught on a rainy night ten miles from the nearest garage.

PARKING ADVICE.
It eases the steering process when worming in and out of a parking space to keep the car moving, if only creeping, when tugging at the wheel.

Roadside Trees to Improve Crack Highway in East

AS a result of a survey, the systematic planting of trees along the Boston Post road from the New York state line to New Haven, is recommended in a report which P. L. Buttrick, consulting forester of New Haven, has made to the state highway department of Connecticut. Widening of this highway to a width of thirty-six feet, an improvement that is being rapidly carried out, has caused the state to inquire into the possibility of enhancing the scenic beauty of the road.

Buttrick's conclusions offer a number of alternate proposals, the character of the trees to be planted varying in accordance with growths already existing on the borders of the road in some localities.

An important feature of highway tree planting, the report says, is that it will ordinarily increase real estate values along the road, "since people will pay more for beautiful surroundings than for unattractive ones." It also will, to a considerable extent, decrease the encroachment of unsightly structures, since there will be less room for them, and since, with the establishment of a row of trees, it will be easier to establish building lines. The mere presence of trees and the fact that they cannot be cut without permission, will discourage encroachment, the survey declares.

"It will mask unsightly features of the scenery, such as tumble-down buildings and glaring billboards," Buttrick declares. The belief is also expressed that planting will tend to discourage speeding on the ground that a beautiful road is an incentive to slower travel. Another feature pointed out is that by reducing summer temperature the trees will make easier both pedestrian and horse-drawn traffic.

In connection with the presence of telephone, electric light and power lines along the highway, it is recommended that, as far as possible, these lines be carried through overhead cables, which do not interfere with tree growth as open wires would.

"Billboard advertising," the report declares, "has aroused much public opposition in recent years. Whatever advantages the billboard may possess as an advertising medium, it detracts from the beauty of the road beside which it is placed and probably in the long run decreases adjacent real estate values. So far, no legal advice seems to have been hit upon to curb the nuisance when billboards are located on private land."

Why They Stall.

An analysis of the 3,332 emergency road service calls made by the Cincinnati Automobile club, in one year, points to the following causes of motoring troubles:

Starter trouble, 28 per cent; tires, 10; battery, 7.2; ignition, 3.8; carburetor, 0.6; gas and oil, 6.4; clutch, 1.4; wrecks, 2.6; miscellaneous, 17.3. The rest, making up the total, were either calls canceled or "reasons not given."

MONEY FOR ROADS.
Congress has passed legislation appropriating $7,500,000 for road building in the national parks during the next three years. Last year visitors to these centers totaled nearly 1,500,000, the Firestone news service says.

Native Sons Rally to Rescue of Pets Periled by Motors

DELIBERATELY maiming and killing dogs and cats is charged to motorists in complaints reaching the Automobile Club of Southern California from humane societies. It is stated that some motorists maliciously takes the lives of animal pets, regardless of the fact that the offense is punishable under the state anti-cruelty laws. Humane societies are planning to prosecute such violators in the future.

It is urged by these societies that drivers refrain from carrying dogs on unguarded running boards of cars, as this frequently results in serious injury to the animal. It is believed this is done more through thoughtlessness than any other cause, as usually the unprotected pets on the running board are loved much and valued highly.

This plea for protection of animal pets is being made general in the hope that there will be a lessening of injuries and fatalities.

England's Road Bill.

During the fiscal year ending March 31, 1924, the British government expended, at par of exchange, $68,562,000 on road maintenance. This compares with an expenditure of $6,788,000 in the fiscal year ended March 31, 1914. According to a report furnished the Bankers Trust company of New York by its English information service, the expenditures of the national government supplement further large expenditures made by local authorities.

SOLID VALUE

WHAT constitutes VALUE in a motor car?

In a country boasting more than 15,000,000 car registrations, we know that the public has learned to value motor cars for the quality and cost of transportation service they render.

The Durant Four line is characterized by substantial quality in design, finish, upholstery, appointments, equipment and engineering.

The low gasoline and oil consumption and small maintenance expense result in very low costs for the quality and comfort of the transportation service regularly rendered.

The elastic long-stroke motor, yielding exceptional hill-climbing power and minimizing gear shifting makes it "a delight to drive a Durant."

FOR the seventh consecutive year Buick will occupy first place at the National Automobile Shows in New York and Chicago.

On October 2, when the choice of space was made, the honor of having the first selection again became Buick's because Buick had the largest volume of business of any manufacturer-member of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce during the preceding twelve months.

To gain this distinction for a single year is an indication of a nation-wide approval of the car that wins it. To obtain it seven times consecutively—as Buick has done—is evidence of the firm and enduring faith of the public in Buick design, manufacture and performance.

Motor Population May Be 18,000,000 at the End of 1924

Uncle Sam Finds Revenue from Motors Totals $290,000,000.

BY J. L. JENKINS.

AUTOMOBILES registered in the various states during the first six months of 1924 amounted to 15,553,077, an increase of 30 per cent over the same period for last year, according to figures just received from the national headquarters of the American Automobile association at Washington. These figures are the result of the semi-annual count made by the United States bureau of public roads.

There were registered during the first six months of the year 13,645,726 passenger cars; 1,851,405 motor trucks and 74,946 taxis, busses and cars for hire. It is estimated that before the end of the year the total number of all classes of cars in use on the streets and highways of this country will exceed 18,000,000.

In each of four states there were over a million motor vehicles registered from January 1 to July 1, 1924. New York leads with 1,233,362; California comes second with 1,134,015; Ohio third with 1,160,000; and Pennsylvania fourth with 1,085,385. Illinois will no doubt pass into the million class for the first time before the end of the year. During the first 6 months of this year there were registered in that state a total of 986,480 cars.

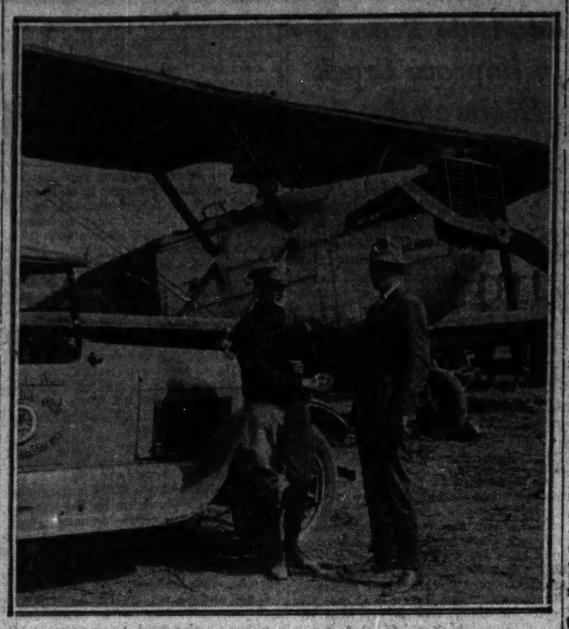
The total receipts from registration fees, licenses and permits amounted to $199,472,682, and from the gasoline tax in thirty-six states $32,430,410. It is expected that the receipts from registrations, license fees, etc., will exceed $225,000,000 before the end of the year and that the receipts from the gasoline tax will more than double, thus making a grand total of about $290,000,000, or an increase over last year of approximately $65,000,000.

These funds do not include personal property taxes on automobiles, which are levied in 36 states, the receipts from which are generally used for local purposes. The large bulk of the receipts from motor vehicle registration fees and taxes is expended under the direction of the state highway departments, and in most of the states the money is utilized for maintenance.

Out of the total amount received from registration fees, licenses and permits, $163,611,584 is available for state highway work, while $20,065,531 derived from the gasoline tax is available for the same purpose, thus indicating that about $49,000,000 collected by the states from motor vehicle taxes and fees is turned back to the cities, counties and townships for local use.

In the amount of motor vehicle registration fees and taxes collected from motorists, Pennsylvania heads the list with $23,086,413; New York comes second with $20,197,362; California third with $11,794,078; Michigan fourth with $10,950,393; Illinois fifth with $10,696,503; and Ohio sixth with $10,509,916.

TRAIL BLAZERS SAY "HOWDY."



When Lieut. Lowell H. Smith, commander of the world flyers, landed in Los Angeles after his epic flight, he found Douglas C. (Dusty) Rhodes, field engineer for the Automobile Club of Southern California, among the welcoming crowd. Rhodes charted the first coast to coast highway in the United States and is a veteran trail blazer of the west.

Grade Crossings from Engine Cab Look Like Death

AN old engineer, writing in Motor News, calls attention in a striking way to the danger of flirting with a railroad train at a grade crossing. He writes of what the engineer is thinking about.

A train moving sixty miles an hour is coming at the rate of eighty-eight feet a second, he says, and if, when first seen, is a quarter of a mile away, will reach the crossing in fifteen seconds. Is fifteen seconds so valuable as to court death for it?

Again, a heavy train at sixty miles an hour takes 1,800 feet in which to stop, or more than a quarter of a mile. A motor car at twenty miles an hour could stop in thirty-five feet.

Many a motor car collision has derailed a train, taking heavy toll. Willful invitation of a collision might properly be called manslaughter. And the train has the right of way by law and by fact.

Dollar a Mile.

If a driver is caught speeding through Middletown, Conn., he may expect to pay a dollar a mile for every mile he has been going. A recent offender, charged with going forty miles an hour, paid $40.

Gasoline Alley Duet Holds Record for Partnership Harmony

THERE actually is one successful partnership ownership of an automobile—the one owned by William D. Gannon and Walter W. Drew, 1469 Winona avenue—the men from whom Frank King originated his characters of "Walt" and "Bill" in his famous cartoon, Gasoline Alley. They are joint owners of a Reo touring car. But a canvass of automobile row fails to explode the old theory that it is almost impossible for two ordinary mortals to own a single car without riding to a squall.

Conflict over varying causes have made love turn into hate, and ambition into jealousy and envy. Financial differences with arguments over who used up the gasoline, and who should pay repair bills, have split these partnerships. And differences over reckless driving have caused one owner to sell out to the other. It takes even temperament to make a partnership even begin to be successful.

U. S. Auto Bill.

Annual automobile cost of this country, excepting taxes and interest, is about $8,000,000,000, estimate Firestone tire officials. Of this, the largest item is depreciation, which is figured at $1,800,000,000.

Farmers Help Big Motor Plants in Late Season Race

Production for Year Is Expected to Fall 400,000 Cars.

BY WHITCOMB WILLIAMS.

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 18.—[Special.]—Unmistakable signs of an improvement in the automobile industry are noted all along the line, according to reports received from the various manufacturing heads, dealers, and legitimate used car merchants.

What makes the outlook for the industry more promising than a short time ago is the practically complete discontinuance by manufacturers of the policy which compelled dealers to accumulate stocks of cars in excess of their requirements. Drastic changes made by manufacturers in their producing methods; general improvement in the agricultural situation, and the prospects for at least moderate recovery this fall in buying add to the optimism.

Car builders are proceeding cautiously and watching their steps. They are satisfied to keep just a bit ahead of incoming orders, so ultimate consumers can be supplied with cars without much delay. They are simply keeping in line with actual sales and avoiding over-accumulation of stock.

With one or two exceptions dealers are not asked to overload themselves with cars, and, therefore, are keeping their orders in close line with their sales. An unexpected demand for cars is coming from the wheat and cotton section—and a majority of them for the closed models. High prices for the crops is doing the work, along with a general business increase.

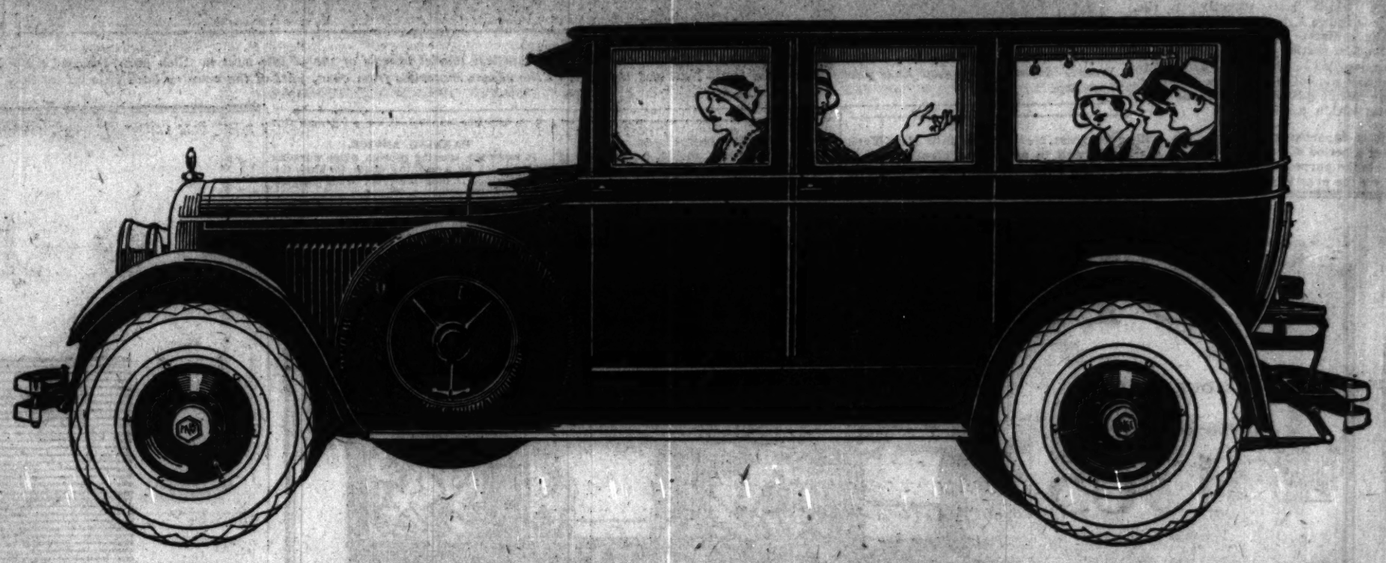
Employment figures in the Detroit automobile industry for the week show a decrease of 1,046 from that of the previous week. However, there are still 195,996 workmen employed in Detroit alone in the manufacture of automobiles, and are turning out cars in the same proportion as were 210,000 employes one year ago—during the overproduction period.

The used car problem is still the sore spot that refuses to heal. This problem is destined to be a continuous one. Just at present dealeres throughout the country have, in their anxiety to dispose of their new stock of 1924 models, found themselves in possession of an overstock of tradeins. They also report that the "crop" is of a better variety than ever before, and that bargains are plenty. Prices paid by dealers for these used vehicles have, they claim, been too high. This leaves the dealer as the only looser—he pays too much for a good used car and sells the same car for too little. According to official figures furnished by the National Automobile Dealers' association the losses sustained by dealers during the second quarter of 1924 amounted to the tidy sum of $6,327,475.

Efforts of manufacturers to educate their dealers in regard to used car values are beginning to be rewarded, inasmuch as dealers are checking up more carefully on tradeins.

A careful survey places the number of cars to be manufactured during the last quarter of 1924 at approximately 1,100,000—about 380,000 each month. This, added to the total output for the first eight months of the year, would mean a total production for the year of about 3,500,000 machines. This would show a decline of approximately 400,000 as compared with 1923, but would exceed the average for the last three years by about 750,000 cars.

Unfortunately for manufacturers, profits have not held up as well as output, and earnings are likely to fall below those of 1923. Prices of cars, in many cases, are being advanced with an idea of increasing profit margins and more than twenty manufacturers have taken such action during the last few months, including many of the leading companies.



This $2770 Paige Gives You $4000-Car Advantages!

What are $4000-car advantages? Size and comfort for one thing. You expect a big car for that money. Size—wheelbase—adds to riding comfort as well as appearance. You look for long springs and roomy, deep cushioned seats.

Big power is another thing you get in a $4000 car. Ability to meet any performance situation without straining. You expect it to last long. To stand up for years. And you count on relief from mechanical upkeep.

You are right to expect these advantages. But now you need not pay $4000 for them! Read below how Paige—for $2770—offers these selfsame advantages. Here are facts:

Size and Comfort

Paige makes fun of detours—casts driving limits aside! Why? It's long—131-inch wheelbase. Paige's rear springs are more than 5 feet long. Snubbers all 'round.

You cannot buy finer spring suspension! And for an inch or two more of wheelbase that a few others have you must pay $178 to $1090 more an inch! Several cars costing hundreds more than Paige are smaller!

Power and Performance

Paige's big 70 h. p. six-cylinder motor is more than ample for any job. Its size means unstrained power—hence long life. It means ability to climb hills in high that stall most others. Outstrip them on the straightaway. Throttle down to 2 miles an hour in high—then "get away" first. Finer performance is not to be had!

To equal Paige's 331.4 cu. in. piston displacement in so fine a car costs close to $1000 more!

Long Life and Economy

You expect a $4000 car to stand up season after season. You may confidently expect the $2770 Paige to do the same! Paige's weight—4300 lbs.—indicates its staunchness. Running expense is remarkably low—far lower than most other big cars of the same advantages. Mechanical expense is long-postponed—thanks to fineness of materials and construction. The Paige is built for 100,000 miles of care-free service.

What other advantages can a $4000 car offer you? Check up on what higher priced cars give. Then check up Paige. For only $2770 you may now enjoy all the big power and fine performance, the size and comfort, the long life, of far higher-priced cars.

Drive the Paige. Put it to your own tests. See how it measures up—excels most—in every point. Telephone or come in today for a demonstration.

The Richardson Multicrome Roof in tapestry tan, shown on the home of Richard Albert, Esq., Oberlin Blvd., Cincinnati, Ohio

RICHARDSON Product

From the makers of Flex-a-tile Housetops, Viskalt Membrane Roofs, Lok-Top Shingles and similar products

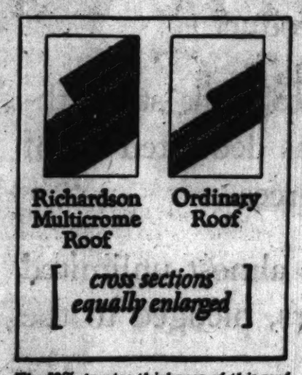
Tapestry tan—Richardson's latest creation in roofing beauty

Brand new is this Richardson Multicrome Roof in tapestry tan. Here is a color effect for your home, more elaborate, richer than has heretofore been available.

The tapestry tan coloring is secured with the new Richardson opal (weathered brown and jade green slate flakes combined in endless variety) and bronze mosaic shingles (similarly formed with weathered brown and tile red) set against a background of rich weathered brown. Blended as they are here, these brighter colors take on soft, pastel tones of peculiar beauty. This is a roof to harmonize effectively with almost any home.

The Richardson Multicrome Roof

Tapestry tan, however, is but one example of the beauty secured in the Richardson Multicrome Roof. Equally attractive is the onyx effect (formed in the same manner with a jade green setting). The opal and bronze mosaic colorings used alone are also greatly admired. Many other color effects are possible—one to please every taste.



The 50% greater thickness of this roof adds beauty of texture and years of endurance. Closely over-lapping slate flakes further protect the sturdy Viskalt-saturated base against weather and fire hazards

The Multicrome Roof is built of Richardson Super-Giant Shingles, extra large, extra heavy—to give greater beauty, longer endurance. The high quality of its inner materials, too, assures lasting beauty for this roof. Its base is sturdy Richardson felt, for fifty years recognized as the best. And the waterproofing is Viskalt—unusually durable because 99.8% pure bitumen, especially vacuum-processed.

The Richardson Multicrome Roof represents the maximum roof value at a moderate price. It is economical to lay and equally good for new or over-the-old-roof jobs.

Prove the facts yourself

Go to the nearest dealer whose name is listed below, or to your contractor and ask to see the color combinations in Richardson Multicrome Roofs. Also ask him to show you the reasons for their unusual endurance.

Meanwhile send for our beautiful new booklet, Roofs of Distinction, showing the exclusive color combinations of Richardson slate surfacing. Or ask for our booklet, Roofing on the Farm. Write Dept. 1-Y, 1457 Conway Bldg., Chicago.

FARM AND GARDEN

Soft Corn Makes Tough Problems for Steer Feeder

Recent Experience Feeding for Market Makes Farmer Cautious.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

THE cross word puzzle condition of the live stock and crop situation is a difficult one for farmers to solve in their attempt to find a wise course to follow in handling their bumper crop of soft corn. It is like trying to decipher cross talk on a rural telephone line where all of the 200 subscribers are trying to talk at the same time.

Ordinarily farmers with soft corn would not hesitate to fill their feed lots full of steers, but hundreds of cattle feeders who have had their fingers burned feeding steers for the market within recent years are cautious.

Feed Lots Idle.

Sixty per cent less feeder cattle have been taken out to fed lots of the corn belt this year than last; empty bunks are standing in feed lots throughout the big feeding sections; cheap feeder cattle are available; money is plentiful at a lower rate of interest, but farmers seem to be waiting for their neighbors to take the plunge and try cattle once more.

Old time feeders shake their heads when 10 and 11 cent hogs come up to the pasture fence and grunt for dollar corn. Comparatively few of them are throwing open their gates to welcome the cheap feeder steer.

But the soft corn is there, acres and acres of it. What are they to do with it? Some one will have to feed the bulk of this year's crop of more than 2,500,000,000. It is roughly figured that 80 per cent of the corn is fed and only 20 per cent marketed as corn.

Almost every corn grower who has had experience in feeding knows he can usually get more for soft corn by feeding it to cattle than in any other way. Cattle make more economic gains on soft corn than hogs. However, hogs do fairly well on immature corn, but it is risky to feed it to lambs, horses, and mules where it is soft enough to ferment or mold easily.

Hopes for Late Corn.

Farmers coming here to market from Kane, Kendall, and Grundy counties, as well as other big cattle feeding sections, say that most of the feeders in their neighborhoods are still waiting to see how the corn crop turns out. The recent favorable weather has led farmers to believe that some of their late corn will still have a chance to mature ears of fairly high quality.

G. M. Petty, a feeder living near Liberty, Mo., says few farmers in his part of the country are feeding cattle this fall. Many are going to sell their corn, except what they feed to their hogs.

Kansas farmers have a big corn crop, and are short of hogs. A farmer from Sabatha, Kas., Brown county, recently said that despite the big corn crop and shortage of porkers the farmers in his territory are not planning to feed many cattle. They will have well matured corn and expect to sell it for cash.

Throughout the western part of the corn belt, particularly in Nebraska, Kansas, and Missouri, farmers are waiting to see what moves are made by farmers in other corn states where so much of the crop is soft.

In Iowa, where much of the crop is soft, corn raisers usually feed the bulk of their crop, and cattle usually get their full share, but they will fall short on beef cattle this year. Iowa feeders bought 90,000 fewer steers during June, July, August, and September of this year than they did during the same period last season, according to the government's bureau of agricultural economics. There is expected a reduction of one-fourth to one-half in Iowa's fall and winter feeding.

Figures Show Drop.

Government figures show that only 730,000 head of feeder cattle were taken from the twelve leading markets to the feed lots in seven corn belt states during July, August, and September; while last year there were 1,058,000 taken out to these states. There is only about a month left of the period when feeders are moving from the western range to the feed lots of the middle west. The feeder movement usually begins in August and ends about the middle of November.

L. B. Mann, a live stock market expert at the Union stockyards, says many farmers are buying light cattle of fairly good quality, expecting to rough them through the winter and either finish them on grass next summer or on next year's corn crop. He believes feeder cattle are as low as they will get this season.

Farmers who buy cattle of high quality expect to put a good finish on them, and this can't be done with soft corn," he said. "Experienced feeders know this and many of them are buying cows and heifers. They expect to market the cows next spring.

"Feeder prices are now comparatively low. Good feeders can be bought for 6 and 6½ cents. A lot of them are being bought by farmers for less than 6 cents, and many are selling for less than 5 cents a pound. Conditions look promising to many famers who have plenty of feed and are experienced in preparing cattle for the market."

All the Money They Want.

In making the rounds at the Union stockyards the other day I met one man who said that he knew of many farmers who were not buying cattle because they were unable to borrow money to buy even one carload of feeders. This is not in harmony with the views of financial men who are in close touch with both city and country banks which make it their business to lend money to farmers.

Melvin A. Traylor, president of the First Trust and Savings bank, Chicago, says there is plenty of money available for cattle feeders.

"Any farmer who has plenty of feed and has had experience in feeding should have no trouble in borrowing money," he said. "I know of one bank that has arranged to lend from $400,000 to $500,000 to farmers this fall and its officers would be glad to lend $2,000,000 to men who want to feed live stock. I know of another loan agency that has arranged to lend $3,000,000 to farmers on live stock. This agency expects to lend $5,000,000 to live stock men by the first of the year.

"Farmers can get all the money they want at an interest rate of from 6 to 6½ per cent, which is 1 per cent less than it has been during the last few years."

Intermediate Credit System.

It is Mr. Traylor's opinion that the farmer with soft corn will in most cases find it best to feed it to cattle. But it is different with the man who has corn that is well matured and hard. Whether he feeds it to cattle depends on what he has to pay for feeders, what he can get for the corn, and how good he is on guessing what the price of cattle will be when they are ready to sell.

Another indication of the farmers' credit situation is shown by the experience of officials of the Chicago Live Stock Commission association, a farmers' coöperative live stock selling agency. The 100,000 farmers who ship to this organization are offered money through the intermediate credit system. The Chicago coöperative concern has sent out 200 carloads of live stock to farmers this season and has lent money on only twenty-five cars, or fifteen loans averaging $3,100. This indicates that most farmers are able to get money at a satisfactory rate of interest from their local bankers.

Sheep in Favor.

If farmers suddenly decided to fill up their feed lots with cattle, they may have some difficulty in getting just what they want at a reasonable price, live stock men say. Market experts estimate that there will be 500,000 less cattle sent to market from the range this fall than last, but there will be a great many more sheep, probably near 500,000.

Farmers have made money on sheep in many sections of the middle west. This has encouraged them to fill their pastures with sheep instead of cattle. Some who bought sheep last fall more than paid for the original cost of the flock with the money they got from the spring clip of wool and the lamb crop.

The baby beef game is attracting more and more farmers in the corn belt. Raising beef calves and selling them in the fall while they are still nursing is becoming a profitable business for many in northeastern Missouri. This is a common practice on many Missouri farms in the old cattle feeding sections where steers were once kept on the place so long that farmers knew them by name.

THE PRINCE'S FLOCK.

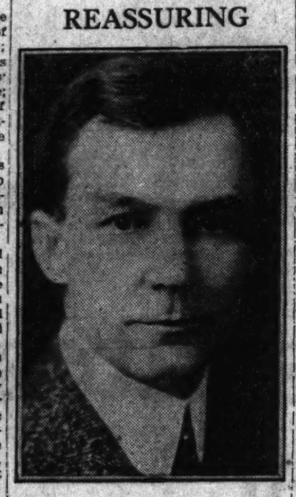
REASSURING



[Loop Photo.]

MELVIN A. TRAYLOR, president of the First Trust and Savings bank, says farmers need fear no trouble in borrowing money.

Poultry Tips

It may not pay to feed high priced grain to roosters, but there is profit in feeding cockerels. Feed cockerels a liberal ration of grain for a couple of weeks before they are put on the market, and sell the old roosters just as they come from the breeding pens.

Purdue's poultry short course opens on Nov. 10, and lasts for two weeks. The course gives direct contact with the principles, practices, and problems of poultry production, marketing, and management for the flock owner.

CITY PUTS ITS BUILDING CODE IN BOOK FORM

Now on Sale at Library in City Hall.

An edition of 5,000 copies of the building ordinances of Chicago, containing all amendments up to and including July 1, 1924, with a complete index, has been printed and placed on sale in the municipal reference library, room 1005 city hall, at the cost price of publication, 50 cents per copy.

FREDERICK REX. [Maizene Photo.]

"The building code has been unobtainable for some time, as the last edition was printed in 1920," said Frederick Rex, municipal reference librarian, "and has long been exhausted. Builders, contractors, and various civic bodies for the last two or three years have urged the publication of a new edition of the building ordinances without success up to the present time."

Forest Preserve Buys 47 Acres at Chicago Heights

The forest preserve commissioners have bought forty-seven acres in Bloom from G. S. Angus for $58,000. It is bounded on the north by Orr road and on the east by the C. & E. I. and adjoins the new athletic field of the Chicago Heights high school. This is in line with the policy of the commissioners to have a belt of forest preserve extending from Glenwood to Chicago Heights along Thorn creek.

Jackson Park Hotel Sold by Albert O'Rourke, $150,000

The Jackson Park hotel, containing ninety rooms and four stores, at 1537 East 63d, was sold by Albert O'Rourke to the Chicago Title and Trust company, as trustee, for an indicated $150,000, subject to $62,000.

TWELVE FLATS FOR EVANSTON.

Work is under way on a twelve flat building at 718 Reba place, Evanston, by W. C. Bannerman & Co. Farrier, Quinn & Christiensen were architects. The cost is placed at $90,000.

Building Permits

There were fifteen building permits issued yesterday for a total of $560,000. Those for $10,000 and more were:

Green-st., S., 6101, 2 story brick flats; J. Jonkema, owner, mas., and carp.; Kocher-Larson, arch. $17,000
Neenah-av., 4441, 2 story brick flats; S. Rebersky, owner; W. E. Simmons, arch. 12,500

Brokers' Notes

Alvin L. Wagner and Percy E. Wagner, who comprise the Woodlawn realty firm of Wagner Brothers, have sent out invitations to the formal opening next Saturday of their new offices at 6222 Cottage Grove avenue, which they claim to be the finest of the kind to be found in the city. American walnut, marble, and bronze are used with a prodigality unknown to the average real estate dealer in this part of the world. Percy Wagner points with reasonable pride to the fact that the walnut is walnut, and not stained soft wood; the marble is honest to goodness marble, and the bronze isn't painted iron but the genuine article.

Here's a somewhat belated announcement, but of enough interest to warrant running even at this late date. Hodge, Nicolson & Jamme announce that Lester W. Porter has become a partner in their concern. Mr. Porter has been in charge of the real estate department of the Central Manufacturing District bank for several years. Prior to that he was for seven years senior land appraiser of the interstate commerce commission under the federal valuation of railways.

W. H. Ames, formerly with W. K. Young & Bro., is now associated with Willis & Frankenstein. Mr. Ames announces that he will continue to specialize in downtown locations and investments with his new connection.

W. H. AMES. [Kochns photo.]

The Sheridan Agency and Loan corporation, formerly at 4715 Broadway, it is announced, has gone out of the real estate business. Henry J. Dike, president, has gone to Pasadena, Cal., to join his family, which is residing there. Edward P. Lundstrom, vice president and treasurer, will open new offices at 4554 Broadway. The new firm will be known as Henry J. Dike and Edward P. Lundstrom and will carry on a general realty business and deal in first and second mortgages.

SIXTY-THIRD STREET LEASE.

Mrs. Beagye B. Kaplon has renewed her lease at 1365 East 63d for ten years form Oct. 1 at a term rental of $43,200 through McKey & Poague. She operates the Woodlawn Style Shop.

WALGREEN GETS CORNER SHOP AT MADISON-KEDZIE

The Madison-Kedzie Building corporation, which announces that its fifteen stores will be completed Nov. 1 and its two floors of offices thirty days later, has leased the corner store to the Walgreen Drug company for fifteen years with a guaranteed term rental of $225,000. As the lease is on a guaranty basis and this is one of the best business corners on the west side, the total is expected to run well over this figure.

The fifty-fifth Walgreen store will open here next month. The Waukegan store, announced last week will be the fifty-sixth.

Nine of the fifteen stores in the Madison-Kedzie building have been rented. The Martha Washington Candy company will pay $16,800 for five years for a shop on the Kedzie side. "Little Jack" will pay $250,800 for fifteen years for restaurant space on the Madison street side.

'Cheaper to Pay Rent than Move' Gastmann's Motto

If the rest of Chicago happened to be like Mr. Adolph Gastmann, we'd never have any May 1 hard luck moving stories; in fact, we wouldn't have any moving companies to write about. Mr. Gastmann, who operates a loan bank at 303 South Clark, intends to move shortly into the Covenant club building. This will be the second time he has moved in thirty-four years. He will pay a rental of $103,880 for a ten year term. Mary Levy & Bro. and Michael Flicht & Co. were brokers.

American Bolt to Build Warehouse on South Side

The American Bolt corporation has had plans drawn by A. Epstein for a one and two story warehouse on the south side of West 47th, near South Turner avenue, in the Kedzie section of the Central Manufacturing district, to represent a total investment of $230,000.

Delta Chi of U. of C. Buys Woodlawn Avenue House

The Delta Chi fraternity of the University of Chicago has bought the residence at 5740 Woodlawn avenue, which it has been occupying under lease, from Marie S. Falkenau for $47,500.

ATTORNEY BUYS HOTEL BUILDING.

Attorney Max M. Grossman has bought the northeast corner of Clark and Ohio, 59x80, from Albert O'Rourke for an indicated $130,000, subject to $86,000. The three story building contain three stores and the thirty-two room Maitman hotel. Mr. Grossman may remodel the hotel when leases expire next spring.

MAGAZINES WRITE ABOUT TRIBUNE TOWER.

Joseph I. Karl, building editor of the Real Estate News, has devoted his supplement in the October edition to The Tribune Tower. The Oct. 13th issue of Buildings and Building Management also has an illustrated article on The Tribune Tower.

[For other real estate news see page 14, part 2.]

Beg Your Pardon

Architect Walter W. Ahlschlager informs us that the new theater to be erected at Robey, Lincoln and Belle Plaine from designs by Walter W. Ahlschlager, Inc., and pictured in this department last Sunday, will have 2,722 actual seats and not 2,000 or 2,200 as we intimated.

NORTH CHICAGO FACTORY DEAL.

Hoeft & Co., now at 400 North Ashland, makers of poultry supplies, have bought the one story factory at Davis street and Hoover avenue, North Chicago, from the Standard Conveyor company of St. Paul for a reported $65,000 through Hodge, Nicolson & Jamme.

BEGIN ON BROADWAY BUILDING.

Harry Weiss has started work on a three story building at 6237 Broadway, 75x125, to contain four stores, eight flats, a two story garage, and shop in the rear from plans by Van Gunten & Van Gunten. The cost is placed at $122,000.

MOTOR INDUSTRY, OFF 6,000, STILL ABOVE NORMAL

New York, Oct. 18.—[Special.]—Decrease of about 6,000 cars in motor production during September from August was not enough to cause a decline in the automobile index, which increased from 13 per cent above normal to 31 per cent above. This is a 19 point increase. A much larger decrease could have occurred without causing any misgivings in the industry because a decline in the September production is a seasonal one.

The index shows that the motor business is in a healthy condition. A decline may be expected during the rest of the year, but there is little likelihood of the index going below normal.

Industrial centers have shown a slight improvement in production. Unemployment is on the decrease, iron and steel productions have also registered further gains. The farm market has undoubtedly made the largest improvement with wheat, reaching $1.50 a bushel.

Fort Sheridan Mechanic Loses Name; Finds It

"John Doe!" called Municipal Judge Eberhardt in the South Clark street court yesterday. No answer. The group of defendants before him just glowered. Suddenly Policeman Pensin propelled a man in front of the bench. "Look here," the defendant expostulated, "I ain't John Doe. I'm Charles Langer." "I didn't know what his name was yesterday," Pensin explained, "and he didn't, either." Langer, a mechanic at Fort Sheridan, was discharged.

ARCOLA WEEK

October 20th—25th

THIS IS THE WEEK Heating Contractors have set aside to furnish ARCOLA estimates to owners of small homes, stores, shops, flats and other small buildings. Many heating stores will keep open evenings so that husband and wife can go together to see this wonderful heating outfit that furnishes radiator warmth to the whole house.

Go to the nearest heating store

Go this week. Get a free estimate. It involves no obligation. Learn for what a surprisingly small down payment the ARCOLA hot-water heating outfit can be completely installed with American Radiators. Our new Easy Payment Plan makes it possible for your dealer to offer monthly payments.

Don't shiver through another winter

There's no need for it when, for a very small cost, you can have the wonderful comfort of radiator warmth from ARCOLA. Think of it! A fine American Radiator in each room. No room too cold; no room too hot; even, healthful warmth the whole house through. For your family's sake, get your ARCOLA estimate this week.

Start saving money this winter

You can, for ARCOLA—thanks to its wonderful system of automatic control—burns amazingly little fuel. A few shovelfuls occasionally are about all the attention it needs. You can put into the bank much of the money you have been putting into the fire. For your pocket-book's sake, get your ARCOLA estimate this week.

The new ARCOLA is also on display at our headquarters at 816 So. Mich. Ave., Chicago

For small homes without basements the new IDEAL ARCOLA Heating Outfit. It furnishes hot-water, radiator warmth for stores, offices, garages and other small buildings as well.

For small homes with basements the new IDEAL Assembled Sectional Boiler. Very low priced to meet the demand for radiator warmth in this type of home.

For medium-sized homes the new IDEAL ARCO Round Boiler. For a generation, the standard in its field, and now greatly improved though lower in price.

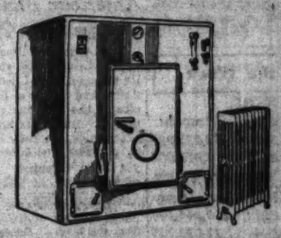
For average-sized homes the IDEAL ARCO Sectional Boiler. Another new member of the IDEAL family, moderately priced, efficient and economical.



For larger homes

the new IDEAL TYPE A Heat Machine. Also for offices, schools, churches and other buildings. Already famous for its beauty and economy of fuel, it has been made even more efficient and attractive.

For larger buildings the new IDEAL Smokeless Boiler where soft coal is used. For larger schools, apartments, churches, offices and other buildings. Through its IDEAL Smoke Oxidizer, it burns its own smoke and saves fuel as well.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

STATE REALTORS NAME E. MOLINE MAN PRESIDENT

Monmouth Wins Silver "Home Town Cup."

BY AL CHASE.

Galesburg, Ill., Oct. 18.—Illinois realtors closed their annual convention in this city by electing George W. Ross of East Moline president of the Illinois Association of Real Estate Boards. He will succeed James R. Smart of Evanston.

At the same session, held in the Plaza theater, the winner of the annual home town cup contest, which took place last night at the Galesburg club, was announced. It goes to Monmouth this year and the eloquence of J. Clyde McCoy in telling of the attractions of his home town brought the much sought silver trophy to the Monmouth Real Estate board.

Evanston Second in Contest.

Although there's no cup for second place, it's interesting to know that Evanston was next in line for the prize. John A. Kappelman was the orator who told of the university suburb's glories. Aurora won a cup for attendance at the convention, in which several cities in the northern part of the state participated. Thirty-five and a half per cent of the active members of the Aurora board were at Galesburg. There were ten vice presidents named at the annual election. They are: Ralph V. Field of Galesburg, Ralph Skillen of Oak Park, S. K. Hughes of Champaign, Charles E. Jackson of Rockford, D. L. Ogden of East St. Louis, Harry Topping of Kankakee, C. A. Allen of Cairo, H. V. Hill of Mount Vernon, R. C. Mitchell of Rock Island, and J. A. Morton of Springfield.

Four directors were elected—Henry G. Zander, who is also president of the Chicago Real Estate board; J. Soule Warterfield, Chicago; E. H. Duff, Oak Park, and Lee Grandcolas, Belleville.

Harry Goldstine, former president of the Chicago real estate board and chairman of the legislative committee of the Illinois association, in a talk on legislation presented several resolutions which were unanimously adopted by the realtors.

One was to have special assessments on property condemned for public improvements spread over several years. Instead of a property owner having to pay a lump sum for damages, he would have ten years to do so. The city, it was stated, could then issue warrants in anticipation of the collection of the assessment.

Want Corporation Law Amended.

Another resolution urged the amending of the present municipal corporation law which would give real estate corporations greater powers.

It was stated that at the annual meeting of the board of directors of the association in January the location of next year's convention would be determined upon.

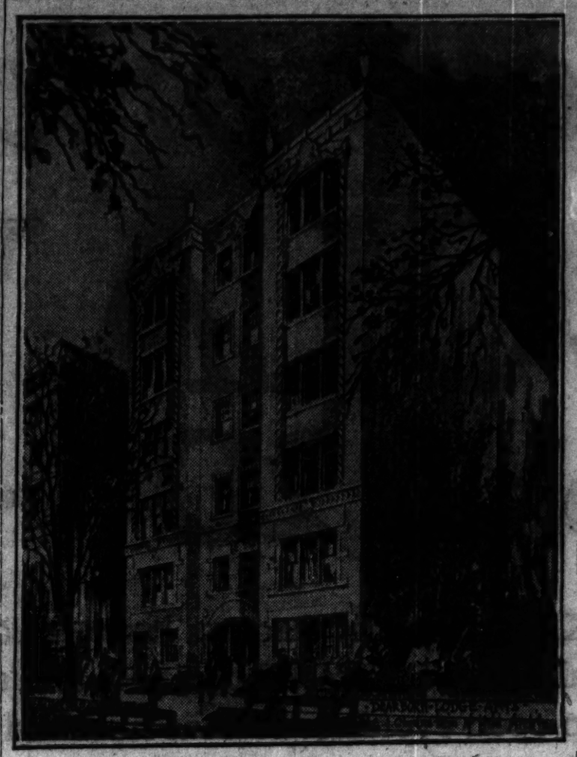
Ritz Theater, at Harding and Lawrence

Above is the $678,000 Ritz theater told about in this department last Sunday, to be erected at the northwest corner of Harding and Lawrence by the Crawford Building corporation from plans by Gallup & Foy. It'll have approximately 2,000 seats and will show pictures and vaudeville. The opening is set for next April.

Dearborn Lodge Apartments



Here is a rendering by Charles Morgan of the Dearborn Lodge apartments to be erected at 1349 North Dearborn from plans by E. J. Ohrenstein & Hild, as told about in this department on Oct. 11. Strauss Brothers have underwritten a $135,000 bond issue. There'll be forty apartments.

Subdivision News

Theodore S. Williams, who recently bought 100 acres, partly in Lake Bluff, on the west side of Green Bay road, between Rockland road and Blodgett avenue, for a reported $250,000, has sold ninety-six and a half acres to Samuel Q. Goldman & Co. for $336,000, according to Mr. Goldman.

Improvements are to be put in, the new owner states, and he will subdivide in the spring into acre and half acre lots. He expects to build a few houses.

News of the Architects

Ira C. Saxe of 351 Belden avenue announces that he has opened a branch office at 109 North Dearborn street, suite 807. His loop hours will be 12 to 1 and 5 to 7 p. m.

Wrigley Treasurer Buys Bellevue Place House

James C. Cox, treasurer of the William Wrigley Jr. company, has bought the residence at 100 Bellevue place from Aldis J. Browne of Ross & Co. for an undisclosed consideration. Mr. Cox will remodel and occupy it. Ralph E. Petersen of McMenemy & Martin and Ross & Co. were brokers. Mr. Browne bought the property last spring from the Manierre estate.

American Bank Note Plans Large New Chicago Plant

The American Bank Note company, it was announced yesterday, is to sell its present local branch at Indiana and 20th, and erect a huge plant on the site of the Armour residence on Michigan avenue, between 37th street and 37th place. A four story building will be erected, although no architect has yet been selected. A large tower, with chimes, is planned.

COAL COMPANY BUYS TRACT.

The Calumet Coal company has bought from the heirs of George B. Swift of Downers Grove the ten acres along the north side of 81st between Robey and the Pennsylvania tracks. Frank J. Cimral of the South Shore Realty company was broker.

BUYS ELM STREET HOUSE.

J. F. Gowing of Pratt & Lamberg, varnish manufacturers, has bought the residence at 39 East Elm from William H. Emery, president of the Chicago Rawhide company, for a reported $27,500 through Arthur J. McAuley of McMenemy & Martin.

First Unit of New West Side Hospital

This is the first unit of the $400,000 Franklin Boulevard hospital, now under construction at the northwest corner of Franklin boulevard and Sawyer avenue from plans by Dwight G. Wallace. It will cost $200,000, will be fireproof, and have sixty-seven beds. It is being built by a group of physicians organized under the name of the Franklin Boulevard Hospital and Training School for Nurses, Inc. Completion date is set for early next spring.

Toy Tinkers of Evanston to Have New Tinkery

The Toy Tinkers of Evanston are going to have a new tinkery. They've bought an "L" shaped site on Leon place, in the university suburb, ninety-six feet west of the Ridge, extending through to the Ridge, from W. F. Childs for $16,800.

Next year they'll erect a structure where their interesting toys will be made. Let's hope they engage an architect with enough imagination to make the building as different from the ordinary "factory" as their toys are from the average plaything.

LINCOLN AVENUE SALE.

Dr. Abel P. M. Sandahl sold the theater, stores, and flats at 2043-54 Lincoln avenue to Glen S. Young for a reported $80,000, taking in exchange the fifteen flats at 7216 East End avenue. B. Mellen of Charles A. Stevens & Co. and the Guaranty Realty company were brokers. I. J. Berkson was attorney.

BUYS CHICAGO HEIGHTS PLANT.

The National Lead Battery company of St. Paul has bought the plant of the Red Top Steel Post company in Chicago Heights and ported $65,000 through Hodge, Nicolson & Jamme were brokers.

PLAN $300,000 ANNEX TO WEST SIDE HOSPITAL

The Norwegian-American hospital at 1044 North Francisco, has bought 52x121 on Richmond, 52 feet south of Thomas, for $28,800, and next year will erect a $300,000 five story wing to be used for hospital purposes and a nurses' home.

Glaver & Dinkelberg also will draw plans for a power and central heating plant in the middle of the block.

The hospital now owns all but a few lots in the block bounded by Richmond, Francisco, Thomas, and Cortez. Andrew Hummeland was attorney.

ENGRAVERS BUY WAREHOUSE.

The U. S. A. company, engravers at 844 Rush, has bought the two story warehouse at the southwest corner of Halsted and Aldine, 74x150, from Mandel Brothers for an indicated $48,000 and will use it for storage purposes. Martin & Miller were brokers.

IF YOU REALLY WANT TO PAY LESS FOR A GOOD GARAGE—

Why Not Start Here!

When you buy your garage you want four things; quality, permanency, quick construction, and low prices. You want quality in your lumber, hardware and fittings; you want permanency because a permanent garage built on your own premises is the only garage that will endure; you want quick construction before the cold snap sets in; you want all these things at a low price. That means you want a Mid-City garage. Whether you want a one, two, three or four car garage, get started right. Mail the coupon. It costs you nothing, but you'll be glad you didn't overlook the Mid-City proposition and Mid-City's amazingly low prices.

PRICE OF WHEAT HOLDING STRONG AS WEEK ENDS

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Wheat values fluctuate rapidly within a fair range, but fail to get very far in either direction.

Prices had a range of 1⅝@2¼c for the day and after a substantial bulge at one time reacted in sympathy with the northwest and closed with net losses of ⅜@1⅛c. For the week, however, there was net gains of 2⅞@7⅛c.

Corn market was unsettled and closed ¼@⅜c higher and for the week showed a loss of 2¼@2½c. Oats were ⅛c lower to ⅛c higher for the day and ⅝@⅞c higher for the week, while rye was ⅛@⅜c higher for the day, and up 6⅝@8c for the week. As compared with a week ago lard gained 22½@77½c, while ribs were 10c higher to 13½c lower, and bellies 2½@12½c lower.

Export Demand Disappointing.

Export demand for cash wheat here was disappointing with No. 2 hard sold early at 2½c over December c. i. f. Buffalo, and later there were claims of offers as low as 2c over. Duluth reported 2,000,000 bu. wheat sold for export early, but this did not show up at the seaboard where sales finally were estimated at only 400,000 bu. The disappointing export demand plus increased hedging pressure in Minneapolis and Winnipeg were responsible for the reaction from the high point here. December closed at $1.50 to $1.50¾, May at $1.53 to $1.53¾, and July at $1.34¼.

While rains have fallen in parts of Argentina there was no precipitation where it was needed the most. An official report estimated the condition in that country at 96 per cent of normal which on the basis of an average yield suggested a crop of 204,000,000 bu., and an exportable surplus of 130,000,000 bu. or 45,000,000 bu. less than in 1923-24. Liverpool closed ⅛c to ⅜c higher. With favorable weather a material increase in the Canadian movement is expected. No. 1 Northern there declined to ½c over October at the last, the smallest premium on the crop.

Corn Resists Pressure.

Corn showed fair resistance to pressure with some of the local operators on the bull side and with a light trade the market was easily influenced. December closed at $1.09¼@109⅝. May at $1.11⅛@1.11¼, and July at $1.11⅝. There were further claims of export inquiries at the seaboard and St. Louis also reported requests for offers, but only a few small lots have been sold abroad of late. Weather conditions were generally excellent for the new crop.

Oats were influenced largely by the action of other grains, and the undertone was easy with December 53⅝@53⅞c at the last. Sales of 1,000 bu. were made to go to store. Cash lots on spot showed little change as compared with the December.

December Rye Advances.

December rye is acting a little tight and went to ⅝c over May at the last despite sales of 35,000 bu made to go to store. Duluth was offering a cargo to come here at 2½c under December and it was understood that several cargo lots might be brought down here for delivery on December contracts. Export sales at the seaboard were estimated at 200,000 bu.

Provisions were firm throughout the day and with light offerings it took but little buying to make a higher range on lard, the finish being 12½@27½c higher. Ribs were unchanged to 10c higher and bellies were unchanged. A good cash trade was reported. Packing of hogs at Chicago for the season to date were 4,301,000 against 5,140,000 last year. Prices follow:

Cash Grain News

Duluth reported 2,000,000 bu wheat and a cargo of rye sold for export on Friday, but that was not reflected in business at the seaboard. The latter reported only 400,000 bu wheat and 200,000 bu rye sold during the day. Local handlers sold 50,000 bu No. 2 hard to exporters at 2½c over Chicago December c. i. f. Buffalo, but this price was not obtainable for additional grain.

Domestic shipping sales here were 50,000 bu corn, 40,000 bu oats, and 5,000 bu barley, with 100,000 bu oats and 35,000 bu rye sold to go to store.

Basis on hard winter wheat here was ¼@1c lower, with No. 2 hard ¼@1¼c under and No. 3 hard at 1¼@2c under. Red winter was firm at 8@9c over for No. 2 and 6@7c over for No. 3. Receipts, 157 cars. No. 2 hard to arrive was offered at 2½c under December, with 3c under the best bid. Outside markets were unchanged to 2c lower, with a slow demand.

Offerings of cash corn were not large and the spot basis was a little easier at 2c over December for No. 3 mixed, 3c over for yellow, and 2@3½c over for white. Receipts, 127 cars. Outside markets were unchanged to 2c lower.

Cash oats sold at 1@1¼c under December for No. 2 white and 3@3½c under for No. 3 white. Receipts, 115 cars.

Heavy Wheat Movement

Primary receipts of wheat for the week were 20,109,000 bu, compared with 20,475,000 bu the previous week and 9,772,000 bu last year. They were the lightest in a month, but the largest at this time in five years. Movement of oats was also large, but materially less than the previous week, being 7,911,000 bu, against 7,533,000 bu last year. Corn receipts were 3,744,000 bu, compared with 3,475,000 bu the previous week and 4,858,000 bu last year. Details follow:

Cotton Prices Higher

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—COTTON.—Cotton prices closed around the highest of the day with gains of 17 to 22 points, in the face of a favorable weather map and rather bearish week end statistics. Large exports, however, and reports from Houston, Tex., of a good export demand combined with a prospective improvement in the European economic situation induced speculative buying and covering by shorts. Chicago Surface Lines Earn Less than Year Ago

The statement of the earnings and expenses of the Chicago Surface Lines for the month of September, 1924, shows a decrease in both gross and net as compared with the same period a year ago. As compared with last August, however, net earnings were larger despite a small decline in gross receipts.

The income account follows:

For September—	1924.	1923.
Gross earnings	$4,664,985	$4,679,423
Divisible receipts	242,028	316,527

Radio Market Time.

Market quotations and market news will be sent out over The Chicago Tribune radiocast, W-G-N, on the Drake hotel, formerly WDAP, direct from the "wheat pit," every half hour during the trading hours. Closing quotations and market news will be sent out daily at 1:25 p. m., except on Saturday, when it will be broadcast at 12:10 p. m. The final summary will be broadcast at 3 p. m.

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

Action of the wheat market is so erratic it keeps the local traders guessing. They were a little bearish last night, because of the decline, while those who have been emphatically bullish seemed confident of their position. The short interest was increased on the decline.

Cash interests here for the most part are talking bearish on wheat and have been of late without getting anywhere. They are selling hard winter wheat at reduced premiums c. i. f. Buffalo, sales being made yesterday at 2½c over Chicago December, while one broker claimed that there were also sales at 2c over.

Exporters were good buyers of wheat on the decline, and the exchanging of futures for cash grain was on a liberal scale. Duluth appears to be doing the bulk of the business. For the time being the pit element is disposed to be a little bearish and is selling wheat on the price. In some quarters it is claimed that wheat at $1.50 is high enough for the present, and all advances meet good selling.

Argentine news was bullish. While there were reports of light rains by some of the cables and the close from Buenos Aires was 1¾@1¾c higher on wheat and ⅛@1c up on corn, there were reports of light rains in the south and west, but most cables said that the rains were insufficient. Russell's cable said light rains were falling and the official condition of the wheat crop is 96 per cent of normal. On this basis it would indicate a possible crop of 204,000,000 bu, compared with 240,000,000 bu last year.

In an analysis of the world's wheat stocks, B. W. Snow says, they show in a striking manner the world's scarcity and rapid disappearance of wheat. During September the world's visible supply increased only 14,912,000 bu, and despite the heavy purchases the United Kingdom stocks show a decrease of 2,480,000 bu in September against a standoff last year. Any analysis of current changes in world's wheat supply, he says, can only add to evidence of acute world's wheat shortage.

Expectations are that the world's shipments for the week will be around 18,000,000 bu. A fair increase in the visible supply and in supplies on ocean passage is expected.

A. C. Beane of Fenner & Beane, New Orleans, one of the largest cotton houses in the south, has been here the last week looking over the situation. He is decidedly bullish on cotton.

Large purchases of foreign wheat which France must make this winter will be centralized through the government's grain bureau, says a Paris cable. French requirements have been estimated at 56,000,000 to 80,000,000 bu.

The spread between December and May wheat at the close yesterday was 3c at Chicago. A week ago it was around 5c. The reference yesterday to the spread being 6½c within a few days should have referred to the difference several weeks ago.

Duluth appears to have a lot of rye to sell and was offering it c. i. f. Chicago at 2½c under December price. It is intimated that several more cargoes may be worked from that port to Chicago.

Argentine cables to a New York exporter said that the wheat crop there was past all chances for large yields.

Good Hay Wanted

All the good hay sells readily at full prices. Dealers advise against shipping poor stuff which is difficult to place. Arrivals were 19 cars timothy, 1 car each of alfalfa, southwestern prairie, and packing rye straw. Prices follow:

Dry Goods and Garment News

[Copyright: 1924: By Fairchild News Service.]

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Oral arguments in the matter of Pullman surcharge rates will be heard by the interstate commerce commission on Nov. 24. The straight rate case has also been reopened and Commissioner Campbell will take further testimony at Chicago on Nov. 6.

NEW YORK.—In a decision of far reaching importance to the textile industry, the board of United States general appraisers today ruled that imported cotton cloths woven with circular box looms are not subject to the additional 5 per cent tariff imposed on goods woven with drop boxes. The government sought to have the additional duty maintained.

EDINBURGH.—While the Scottish woolen industry is not particularly active as a whole, mills whose looms are working on tweeds for the American trade report having orders enough to permit of full time operations.

WALL STREET NOTES

Speculative attention yesterday was riveted on the railroad shares by the continuance of high car loadings, rumors of dividend resumptions and increases, and reports of progress toward the consolidation of several roads, particularly in the east. Buying of the coalers was fairly active just before the close. Delaware and Hudson standing out with a gain of more than 4 points, and Lackawanna, Erie second preferred, Reading, and Pittsburgh and West Virginia closing 1@2 points above Friday's final prices.

Revival of interest in the Rock Island issues followed the prediction of Chairman Hayden that the road would earn nearly $4 a share on its common stock this year as against $1.32 last year, and publication of statistics showing that car loadings in the first half of October were about 7,500 cars over those of the corresponding period in September and nearly 6,000 above October of last year. Other strong spots in the rail group included Gulf, Mobile and Northern, Missouri Pacific preferred, Norfolk and Western, the Wabash issues, and Western Pacific, all up a point or more.

American Can again led the pivotal issues by moving up 3 points to 120¼. United States Steel and Baldwin improved fractionally, the former closing above 107. Pipe shares featured the specialty list. Iron Products jumped 5 points to 50, and then eased slightly, while United States Cast Iron Pipe and Universal Pipe and Radiator preferred each showed net gains of about 2½ points.

American Water Works responded favorably to the publication of a plan for splitting up the stock, closing 1¾ higher at 116 after having sold at 115⅛ in the early dealings. General Electric touched 250, closing slightly below that for a gain of 3 points. Strength of Consolidated Gas, which moved up about 2 points, was coincident with the cessation of heavy liquidation for the account of a large estate.

Commercial Solvents issues established new peak prices for the year. Some of the other outstanding strong spots were American International Corporation, American Tobacco, Loose-Wiles Biscuit, Nash Motors, Otis Elevator, and Worthington Pump, up 2@3 points.

Further improvement was shown on the curb exchange. There were a number of strong issues in the public utility group under the leadership of Middle West Utilities and East Penn Electric. Initial dealings began in American Water Works, which sold at 23½@24 on a when issued basis. Radio shares also were higher. In the petroleum division most interest was attached to the steady demand in Vacuum Oil and International Petroleum. Other shares were quiet and firm.

Responding to the easier tone of the money market over the week-end, bond prices scored moderate improvement. Liberty bonds followed the trend of the treasury 4¼s, which mounted 9-32 to a record high price of 106 25-32. Although easing off slightly at the close, the "Mellons" still maintained a substantial net gain.

FINANCIAL NOTES

Plans for consolidating the Cuban Dominican Sugar company, the Sugar Estates of the Oriente and the West India Sugar Finance corporation have been tentatively drafted and placed before the various directorates for consideration. Completion of the merger, it is expected in Wall street, will be announced next week. A combination of these properties will give the new corporations a production rivalling that of the Punta Alegre and Cuban American Sugar companies.

A plan permitting employes of the United Cigar stores to subscribe to the common stock at $50 a share, provides for monthly installment payments of 25 cents or 50 cents a share which may be deducted from salaries in weekly installments of 6 cents to 12 cents. On this basis the stock would be paid for in five or seven years. Cash dividends, now $2 a share annually, will be credited as payments and stock dividends of 5 per cent in common annually will be sold at the current market price and the proceeds credited. Interest at 5 per cent will be charged on the unpaid balance.

The Columbia Gas and Electric company has declared an initial quarterly dividend of $1.75 a share on 7 per cent preferred series "A" stock. A special dividend of 3 per cent on the common stock of the Gulbransen company, piano manufacturers, has been authorized.

September bookings of fabricated structural steel aggregated 174,200 tons, against 156,000 tons in August and 135,200 in September, 1923. September shipments amounted to 197,600 tons, against 187,200 in August.

Northwestern Pennsylvania refiners have reduced the price of gasoline ½ cent a gallon.

September production of news print in the United States totaling 116,206 tons was 271 tons less than in August, but shipments of 116,508 tons showed a gain of 501 tons. The Canadian output was 101,446 tons, against 113,763 in August and shipments 106,228, against 113,148.

Metal Markets.

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—COPPER—Firm; export demand better; domestic consumers hesitating. Most producers ag asking 13¼c. Copper is still available at 13¼c for delivery during the balance of the year. TIN—Steady, demand fair for nearby deliveries. LEAD—Heavy deliveries on contract, undertone firmer. ZINC—Also firmer; domestic consuming demand increased. ANTIMONY—Higher, owing to the continued light offerings from China.

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—LEAD—Dull at $7.80. ZINC—Slab, dull, at $6.30.

RAILROAD NOTES

Class 1 railroads on Oct. 1 had 11,329 locomotives in need of repair, 17.6 per cent of the number on line, a decrease of 429 under the number reported Sept. 15. In the last half of September the railroads repaired and turned out of the shop 33,955 locomotives, the largest number on record ever repaired in any similar period.

Freight tonnage on lines operating east from Chicago and St. Louis last week showed a big volume. General merchandise shipments showed a big total, and this was considered a favorable indication. Freight is being handled expeditiously in most cases, with traffic conditions in excellent shape.

Railroad equipment orders since Oct. 1 exceeded $32,000,000, according to the Railway Age, and included seventy-three locomotives, 10,385 freight cars, and 148 passenger cars. Equipment business pending is estimated at about $100,000,000.

The interstate commerce commission fixed the final value of the Union Freight Railroad company of Boston at $439,833 as of June 30, 1915.

The Pere Marquette handled 32,674 carloads in the first fifteen days of October, as against 33,472 a year ago.

The Burlington handled 24,273 cars, loaded on its own system and received from connections from Oct. 1 and Oct. 14, inclusive. A year ago, in the same period, the road handled 25,424 cars, showing the increase in business this year as 10.4 per cent in the two weeks.

QUEEN BESS VS. FLAPPER; TAKING MEASURE OF 1924

BY SCRUTATOR.

Any first class cafeteria offers a greater variety of diet than was available to the queen or countess of the sixteenth century—except possibly in the matter of meats. The queen had a variety of game not usually available to a millionaire today.

A Tudor banquet was a matter of seven or eight varieties of meat, beer, and wine, bread and jellies or preserves—luxury of the upper classes, of course. Vegetable possibilities were practically limited to carrots, cabbage, beans, peas, onions, and two or three others.

It is doubtful, however, whether modern vegetables and fruits would have appealed to them. They evidently enjoyed the business of eating, but had small success with the stomach aches that so often followed.

The item of beer and wine may call forth some regret from some readers of this column. The queen was well provided, of course, but grain was so scarce that even a high officer of the church had only two hogsheads of beer per year as his allowance. Assuming that the hogsheads contained sixty-three gallons, this was only about one-third of a gallon per day—not a very impressive allotment of home brew.

With all the resources of her kingdom and the plunder of the Indies brought back by her gallant buccaneers, Queen Elizabeth's boudoir was a poor second to a modern beauty parlor. She bobbed, of course—to make a place for her wigs.

She wore a mirror at her belt, inferior to the vanity case on sale at any bargain counter today. Her rouge seems to have been effective, and as the queen of the Albion that got its poetic name from its chalk cliffs, she had plenty of coarse face powder. Described as a "wonderful woman in ridiculous clothes," it is evident that she was no more successful in escaping criticism than is the modern flapper.

The effect of her crude cosmetics on her skin well may be imagined, but the modern girl is subject to this penalty if she uses the cheaper varieties.

No queen sported a wrist watch, but the egg shaped Nuremberg watches of that period, heavily jeweled, probably were satisfactory. As recently, there was a vogue for enormous earrings, but the men wore most of them. The crudely cut stones of that period made such ornaments inferior in point of looks to the cheap novelty jewelry in reach of any woman's purse today.

The range of entertainment possible to the queen was minus the movies, of course, and the music at any state ball probably not much more fun than the jazz band at any good Chicago dance hall. They had some good shows in her day; however, some of them have been acted off and on ever since. The real lady of the times wore a mask when she attended the theater, although her coating of paint already was a pretty effective disguise. Others faded this custom.

Queen Elizabeth had one advantage over the modern working girl that will appeal to some newspapermen. She scooped her subjects on most of the foreign news, as information usually came to court first. But all she could learn at immense expense was not a fraction of what any modern girl can get for 2 cents a day.

By rigging up a home made crystal radio set for $10, any girl, any evening, can listen in on news, entertainment, statecraft, and wit that probably would compare favorably with the fireside conversations at Queen Bess' court.

The queen, however, had this advantage. It was a younger age and people really knew the thrill of wonder and how to marvel. Would anything really astonish the modern working girl?

Commoner grades of hogs lost Friday's advances on the week end session, while the small proportion of good to choice kinds were absorbed readily at previous day's upturns, choice weighty butchers equaling Friday's top at $11.25 and standing 25c above last Thursday. Poorer quality helped materially in lowering the general average price 5c at $10.35, with closing market on all, but choice grades in a top heavy condition.

Hog values during the first four days of last week tumbled unevenly 75c to $2.00, according to weights, with heavy off the least. Part of these sensational declines were recovered on Friday's reaction, although prevailing quotations are still 60c to $1.35 lower than a week ago, top showing 60c loss, with average off 95c since the previous Saturday. The "spread" between the closing top and average prices is as wide as any time in two months.

Hog receipts last week at 140,100 were largest since middle of August, being 32,600 larger than previous week, 65,500 smaller than a year ago, and 7,800 below the ten year average. The estimated average weight of hogs at 227 lbs. equaled the lightest week since last June, being the same as previous week, 2 lbs. lighter than a year ago, 3 lbs. lighter than two years ago, but 8 lbs. above the ten year average. Average price last week at $10.65 stands 30c below previous week, $3.25 above a year ago, and 10c below the ten year average.

Cattle receipts last week at 74,600 were largest of the year, yet the general average price of good beef steers at $10.35 stood highest of the year. Top yearlings reached $12.60, against $12.40 previous week and $12.80 a year ago when heavy steers topped the market. Yearlings closed mostly 25c higher than a week ago, while heavy weights were at least that much lower, with plain kinds generally 50c lower. Butcher stock little changed compared with a week ago, feeding steers weak to 25c lower and calves 50c@$1.00 off from a week ago. About 13,400 western rangers arrived during the week and prices underwent little change.

Lambs Close Firm.

After a sharp set back earlier in the week, fat lamb market recovered part of the loss and closed on an upgrade, but still reflects 25@50c decline compared with the high point last week. Daily top prices dropped from $14.00 Monday to $13.50 Wednesday, but reached $13.75 again at the close. Sheep receipts at 109,700 were among the largest of the year, accounting for the slump in killing stock at the opening, an unusually big share consisting of fat native lambs. A letup in western range supplies caused a shortage of feeding and breeding stock, resulting in a narrowing of the "spread" between feeders and killers.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 32,000 cattle, 44,000 hogs, and 33,000 sheep, against 34,794 cattle, 47,374 hogs, and 40,732 sheep, a week ago, and 32,320 cattle, 53,387 hogs, and 37,371 sheep, the corresponding day a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 72,000 cattle, 150,000 hogs, and 100,000 sheep, against 73,743 cattle, 193,377 hogs, and 107,381 sheep a year ago.

The New York Times.

New York, Oct. 18.—[Special.] — A firm tone prevailed in the stock market throughout the morning session today and good sized gains were registered in most of the active stocks. Gains of one to two points or more were recorded in both the industrial and the railroad group and trading was on a more active scale.

As was the case earlier in the week, however, the bulk of the business transacted was for the account of the professional element, and of this no small part was for the covering of short commitments put out earlier in the week, when political scares overcame Wall street despite the strengthening of the betting odds in favor of President Coolidge.

Hysteria Over Politics Vanishes.

The hysteria which prevailed last Tuesday, when "politics" were injected into the stock market, was cleared away before the close of the week and Wall street was again feeling normal as regards the hoped for outcome of the election.

This changed in sentiment resulted in a steady recovery in the market since last Wednesday and this recovery was not only sufficient to erase all of Tuesday's reaction, but carried the averages above last week's final levels. All this suggests that the market had been scarcely more than ruffled on the surface by the incidents of the week.

Week's Events Are Ignored.

The German loan subscription, which speculative Wall street predicted would be "staged" by a demonstration of strength on the stock exchange, had produced no effect; neither had the political situation, unless in the way of checking attempts to break the market; neither had the return of money rates to the midsummer minimum.

The stock market might almost be said to have reflected accurately the general business situation, in standing as a whole at an unchanged level, regardless of influences which might reasonably have caused some definite movement.

U. S. Bonds Move Higher.

The bond market's aspect did not change. Another upward step was taken in the curiously persistent advance to "new high records" in the treasury 4¼ per cents. Most of the other federal loans moved slowly with them, though not yet reaching high records of their own.

The new German bonds moved independently. At one time today they sold down to 92, which is lower than the price at which their stock exchange history began last Wednesday and only ¼ point above the lowest price yet reached. But they closed not much below 94, which just now seems to be something of a "pegged price."

Other Markets Are Quiet.

Other markets ended the week as quietly as stocks and bonds, but mostly ended it in line with the week's tendencies. Cotton rose again fractionally. The market is trying to strike a balance between the unquestionably heavy foreign demand and the propitious harvest weather, supplemented by a "movement into sight," such as the south has not seen in many years.

The statement of the New York clearing house banks, made public as of the close of business Oct. 18, showed the following changes: Loans, discount, investments, etc., decreased $5,869,000; net demand deposits increased $51,082,000; time deposits increased $1,838,000; circulation decreased $21,000 and excess reserves increased $20,746,380.

German External Loan, 1924.

The $110,000,000 German external loan of 1924, 7 per cent bonds are part of an international loan to be issued for the purpose of carrying into effect the plan of the first committee of experts appointed by the reparation commission to the double purpose of insuring currency stability in Germany and of financing, especially, deliveries in kind during the preliminary period of economic rehabilitation.

The loan is to be issued in Great Britain, France, Italy, Switzerland, Holland, Belgium, Sweden, Germany, and America in bonds of various currencies for an amount to yield, at current rates of exchange, approximately 800,000,000 gold marks [approximately $190,000,000].

The service of interest and amortization of the loan is:

[1] A direct and unconditional obligation of the German government chargeable on all the assets and revenues of that government.

[2] A specific first charge on all payments provided for under the Dawes plan to or for the account of the agent-general for reparation payments, such charge being prior to reparation and other treaty payments, which in turn have a specific precedence over the existing German debt.

[3] A first charge by way of collateral security on the "controlled revenues," i. e., the gross revenues of the German government derived from the customs and from the taxes on tobacco, beer and sugar, the net revenue from the spirits monopoly and such tax as may hereafter be similarly assigned by that government in accordance with the terms of the final protocol of the London conference. The "controlled revenues" are estimated as amounting annually to not less than 1,000,000,000 gold marks [approximately $240,000,000].

The German government may not create any further charge upon the controlled revenues ranking prior to or equally with the charge created in favor of the bonds of this loan.

In the London protocol the governments of Belgium, Great Britain [with her dominions], France, Greece Italy, Japan, Portugal, Roumania, and Jugo-Slavia agreed that, in case sanctions have to be imposed in consequence of a default by Germany, they will safeguard any specific securities which may be pledged to the service of the loan.

These governments further declare that they consider the service of the loan as entitled to absolute priority as regards any resources of Germany so far as such resources may have been subjected to a general charge in favor of the loan and also as regards any resources that may arise as a result of the imposition of sanctions.

These bonds are due Oct. 15, 1949, and are non-redeemable prior to maturity, except for the sinking fund. The sinking fund for this issue provides for $4,620,000 a year, payable monthly beginning Nov. 15, 1924. This is sufficient to retire annually one twenty-fifth of the issue at 105.

Bonds are to be retired through the sinking fund by purchase if obtainable at or below 105 and accrued interest, or if not so obtainable, by redemption by lot at 105 and accrued interest. Redemption dates for the sinking fund are Oct. 15 of each year, beginning 1925.

This issue is payable, principal and interest in United States gold coin.

These bonds are a sound investment.

We Think It Is Perfection— —We Invite Your Opinion

Of course we are enthusiastic—perhaps prejudiced—because this car represents a life-time of experience—is in fact, the realization of a life-long ambition.

So we ask you to judge it by your own standards—test it, as severely as you choose—and then tell us if you ever saw or drove—or rode in—its equal.

OF COURSE THE CUT CANNOT do justice to such a beautiful thing.

SO YOU MUST SEE THE CAR itself—look at its graceful lines from a distance—as your friends will see it as you flash by.

THEN STUDY MINUTELY each detail of design, construction, finish and appointments.

WE BELIEVE that, in design, this body is perfectly "balanced."

WE KNOW that Vertical "8" motor under the hood is the most perfectly balanced motor at all speeds ever made.

BUT BALANCE is just as desirable in body design—in upholstering—in color effects—and in general appearance as it is in mechanical construction.

WHEN YOU SEE A CAR the appearance of which does not favorably impress you, it is generally due to imperfect "balance" in the design.

IT IS INHARMONIOUS—falls just short of being symmetrical. It may be indefinable—you cannot put it in words—but you feel it—it is there.

EVERYONE WHO SEES this latest Rickenbacker—this Vertical-"8"-Superfine—goes into raptures over its beauty as well as its wonderful performance.

YOU MUST SEE THIS CAR—it is a treat just to look at.

AND YOU MUST DRIVE IT—for that is an experience never to be forgotten.

DO YOU IMAGINE you are so blasé—so experienced with other cars—that you are no longer capable of a real thrill?

THEN YOU HAVE ONE COMING!—when for the first time you sit at the wheel, and feel the marvelous smoothness of this motor—the acceleration—the speed!

HOW THEFREE FLOW—and the surplus—of power, levels down hills—how the long, flat, alloy springs make all roads good roads!

DON'T DEFER THIS TREAT—today is the best day to enjoy your first ride in a Vertical-"8"-Superfine.

PHONE RIGHT NOW—and a demonstrator will be at your door.

P. S.—Select the model best suited to your needs: Drive it: Then consider the price. That is the one thing you will not be able to understand. Such a magnificent car—such marvelous performance—at such a low price!

Local Talent The Hardest in the World to Rub Off by George M. Cohan

WELL, I'm still here. Yes, sir—here I am. I'll bet some of you boys are surprised to find me still at it.

Last week I wrote a letter demanding encouragement. I even went as far as to put myself on record that unless a little pat on the back was forthcoming from the gentlemanly editor himself I'd cease to be a member of the staff. Of course, I'm not claiming that the entire newspaper world knelt down and implored me to continue on with this word juggling business, but I will say that something happened. Yes, sir. And what happened was just this. I received a telegram from headquarters. Here it is!

YOUR LAST ARTICLE VERY AMUSING. NOW YOU HAVE THE RIGHT IDEA. ROAST YOURSELF AND BEAT THE OTHER FELLOWS TO IT.

Meaning, I suppose, that the other fellows (whoever they happen to be) have been panning the living daylights out of everything I've written up to now.

My first impulse was to answer the wire as follows:

I HAVE A BETTER IDEA. I'M GOING TO DISCHARGE MYSELF AND BEAT YOU TO IT.

But on serious second thought I decided the best way to get even would be to pester the life out of these newspaper people until they finally put me under oath to quit the game forever and pay me a handsome sum for doing so.

I dare say an agreement of that kind would be just as satisfactory to the readers as it would be to me, because then you folks wouldn't be annoyed on Sundays and I wouldn't have to worry throughout the week.

However, until some such arrangement is thought out we'll all have to stand the gaff and hope for the best.

Whether I succeed or fail at this letter writing proposition, you must at least admit that up to now I've made a bold stab at the thing and my downfall, if it does come, will not be because of any lack of nerve. I've done my level best, and have tried to shoot straight at every subject Ive tackled, and if I've failed to hit the old bullseye it's poor marksmanship and nothing more.

The fellow who first pulled the old speech, "familiarity breeds contempt," had some head on his shoulders.

I'M free to confess that I've been terribly anxious to make good at this job, but I've realized right along that in order to do so I would have to overcome certain handicaps and prejudices the average writer doesn't ordinarily meet up with. For instance, while I haven't been actually accused of doing this work for publicity purposes, I know several fast thinking birds who suspect me of merely trying to keep my name before the public during my enforced retirement from the play producing business.

But that's not so—and to prove it I'm perfectly willing to sign the name of John Smith to these letters of mine, if the editor makes the request. I presume, though, that if I did that I'd be accused of being one of the famous Smith Brothers spreading propaganda in favor of the cough drops.

The fast thinking boys just won't be convinced that any man will waste time on anything that doesn't spell dollars and cents.

This business of being well known doesn't place a man in such a soft spot, after all. I know what I'm talking about, because I have a handshaking acquaintance with at least ten per cent of the United States population, and for that reason I come under the head of local talent. And don't forget that local talent comes under the head of a joke.

If you'll just think back to the local talent you knew in your old home town you'll know exactly what I'm getting at.

"That guy should stick on his job in the rolling mill and quit singing."

That's a remark you've often heard passed about one of the old home town boys who tried to be good natured and entertaining.

Should that same poor fish vocalize his way to fame and fortune later in life and grab himself a job in grand opera as a leading tenor it would make no difference. The home town boys would always have him tabbed for local talent and still wonder how he ever got out of the mill.

WHY is that? What's the reason?

George Ade answered the riddle pretty satisfactorily years ago when he organized his "I Knew Him When" club.

Of course, what I'm trying to do is to make a point in favor of myself. I'm one of the local talent and the United States is my home town. I'm trying to prove that no matter how cleverly put together or well thought out these letters of mine may be there will always be that great membership in Mr. Ade's club to shake their heads and say, "That guy ought to put on his dancing shoes and quit kidding."

Well, let me tell you something right now—I'm not going to put on my dancing shoes. No, sir. And, what's more, I'm not kidding. I'm absolutely on the level and dead serious with these letters of mine and insist upon being taken that way.

And, after all, why shouldn't a song and dance man become a journalist if he happens to feel that way about it?

I know any number of journalists who would gladly become song and dance men if they could sing and dance as well as I can journal.

Now, wait a minute! Don't be in a hurry to condemn me for raving like this. I'm merely trying to find a way to prove conclusively that mine is no primrose path on the way to literary fame. The same condition comes up in every man's life once he decides to turn his footsteps in a new direction.

The chances are a thousand to one that when Calvin Coolidge first made a stab at politics a lot of tea drinking birds in Vermont laughed their heads off at the idea of any of their local talent attempting to do aything outside of making maple sugar.

A little later, when Calvin became the mayor of Northampton, Mass., the same Vermont crowd couldn't understand how a big town like Northampton could be successfully run by one

Blue Ribbon Fiction

THE STORY THUS FAR—Jane Borden, left all but penniless at her father's death, has gone with an uncle to live in a southern hunting camp, her only remaining possession except for some worthless railroad stock. Riding forth alone one day, she is trapped by a grass fire and rescued in the nick of time by a "great, lean, sober body" whom she finds to be Dave MacIvor, a young Scotchman considerably in awe of his aunt, Miss Allie Drummond, who lives with him, but sternly defiant toward the rest of the world. He has no use, for example, for the sort of men who have been trying to "develop" the country, and will have no dealings with Sheppard Gail, Jane's bankrupt but carefree neighbor, who wants him to sell his valuable timber and provide some business for the decaying railroad of which Jane is part owner. This MacIvor seems fated to be Jane's guardian angel. On her second ride about the country he saves her from a threatening moonshiner, puts her on his horse—her own has been driven away by the outlaw—and quiets her fears with conversation. As she prepares to start for home there is the crack of a rifle, and MacIvor falls, a red stain spreading on his face.

INSTALLMENT III.

The Second Patient.

JANE BORDEN heard herself scream as from a great distance; the horse started and swerved under her, carrying her past the still figure on the ground. She caught a crackling sound in the woods behind her, wheeled the horse and slid to the track. She had seen blood before; once, at a treacherous water jump, she had seen death in as sudden guise as this. But it needed all her strength of will to approach that figure now. There was a difference, she thought, somewhere in the background of her mind, between those honest accidents of the hunting field and this unclean thing of human intent.

MacIvor had been shot from behind. She saw that the bullet had struck obliquely above the ear, tearing an ugly wound. She was certain he was dead, and when she stooped and heard his breathing it seemed an uncanny, affrighting thing. She felt clumsily for a pulse in the outstretched arm, and found it; he was still alive, in spite of that bullet in his brain. For an instant the discovery seemed to add a spiteful complication to her own problem. If he had been killed outright she could have ridden at once to carry the news. Now, a divided duty confronted her; she must get help as quickly as she could; and yet, by staying, she might perhaps save MacIvor's life. The wound bled freely; he might die from loss of blood before she could find the camp and bring back aid.

Common sense decided abruptly. She had no skill herself. It was best to ride on and leave the rest to chance. The word caught at her memory. This man did not believe in chance; she accepted an amendment as if he had insisted; let his God look after him, then. She flung herself into the saddle and urged the horse along the rough track at the best speed she dared. The twigs of the oaks reached out and whipped her as she fled past them; the great beast stumbled heavily in the sand; she was not even sure of her way, choosing at random and hoping that she might come out on some familiar landmark. Chance again—the thing in which MacIvor had no faith!

She came at last up on the slanting pine which identified the road. The camp was within a thousand yards of that gaunt, inclining trunk, and at the sight of it she dug her heels into the horse's flanks. Chance had served her turn, at least, and MacIvor's, too, perhaps. He would have called it something else. It didn't matter.

This man did not believe in chance; let his God look after him, then. She flung herself into the saddle.

HER uncle lounged in his wicker chair on the porch, a book on his knee, the inevitable glass at his elbow. He looked up, as she rode straight toward him, with his familiar air of amused resignation.

"Well, now what? Where did you find that Arab steed? Don't tell me you've been swapping horses."

A kind of anger flamed in her. This man lived on the outer surface of things, refused to take life as anything more than a rather dull joke. The emotion colored her tone and phrase. She wanted to be brutally blunt.

"Mr. MacIvor's shot—I'm afraid he's killed. We'll have to hurry!"

It pleased her to see that the words startled him out of his detachment. He got to his feet with a spring, his mouth open, his eyes wide.

"MacIvor! Who shot him—where——?"

"Call Latham—we'll need the cart to bring him in." She slid to the ground. "Hurry—there's no time to talk now."

He was still too deliberate to suit her mood. She slipped past him to the house and ran to the kitchen wing, where Latham and his sullen wife, Johanna, were at work. Her abrupt command seemed to paralyze the male; he showed yellow eyeballs, lifted unsteady, pink palmed hands. It was the woman who displayed an adult quality in the emergency. She turned a lean, ominous countenance toward her mate.

"You, Latham! D'in you hear what Miss Jane say? Stan' like a calf! G'on out 'uh stable an' git 'at wagon fo' I take an'——"

The threat hung in the air agitated by Latham's departure. Jane repressed an hysterical impulse to laugh. She was a little afraid of Johanna herself; the woman's silent ill humor contradicted her preconceived ideas of darky good nature. Latham was far more like the Negroes of the stage and page on which she had built her opinions of the race.

She followed her to the stables and, on impulse, adopted a hint from his wife's manner toward him. He leaped under the flick of her sharp command as if a whip had touched him. She remembered what MacIvor had said: they were like children. He was right, she thought, about Latham at least. Under orders he was effective; left to himself he would have needed half an hour to harness the draft horse to the light cart. As it was he accomplished it swiftly, so that he was backing the wagon from the open shed by the time Warren Borden appeared, leading MacIvor's horse.

Jane kept command instinctively. At her bidding the two men climbed into the cart and she led the way on the saddle horse. It was queer that she should remember the path so clearly now. She was never in doubt about it. MacIvor lay as she had left him, the sand below his head darkened by his blood.

WARREN BORDEN needed only a brief inspection to reassure her chief anxiety. Like most men who have dealt long with doctors, he had some skill at makeshift medicine.

"It's a glancing wound," he announced. "There may be concussion, of course, but I don't think the skull's fractured." He wagged his head. "Half an inch to the left and would be different. Lucky."

Again the girl thought of MacIvor's hostility toward that word. To him, probably, a divine interference had swerved the bullet just enough. She wondered why it couldn't have been made to miss him altogether, in that case. Of course, he wouldn't follow up any such line of reasoning. People who held fast to set beliefs were careful never to pursue reflections that disagreed with them.

She helped lift the heavy, awkward burden to the bed of the cart, conscious of a reluctant compassion. MacIvor probably wouldn't want anybody to be sorry for him, she thought. It was odd that she should feel responsible for him, as if it were her fault that he had been shot. She had no doubt that it was the man Breck who had fired at him. But by his own statement he had been on Breck's track when he had rescued her. She wasn't to blame for this, then.

At the camp, when MacIvor had been carried to a bed on the ground floor, she overruled her uncle's suggestion that Latham ride to fetch the doctor from the village at the end of the rails. So much, she felt, she could do herself.

MacIvor's horse, ungainly as it looked, had speed and a sure foot for the uncertain sand of the lanes. She sent the big beast on at the best pace she dared. It seemed a short ride, in spite of her impatience, when she rounded the curve of a low hill and emerged above the straggling settlement, a forlorn huddle of low graceless buildings flanking both sides of the track. The dominating structure was the station, a long, one story shanty of unpainted pine, stained by the weather, propped on wooden stilts, five feet above the rails, and fringed by a rickety platform beneath which, as she cantered past, a few gaunt hounds uncurled themselves and barked distrustfully. A group of tatterdemalion Negroes, sunning themselves against the station wall, slept on, in spite of the tumult below them. She drew rein at the doorway of the store and postoffice, meeting the incurious, squinting inspection of three lank, sun bitten youths in faded jeans, who slouched and spat in the strip of shadow. She addressed them inclusively.

"Where does the doctor live?"

They exchanged looks, as if to determine which should assume the painful effort of speech, and all three spat again, meditatively, while the issue lay under cogitation. Before they reached a decision the storekeeper presented himself in the doorway. Plainly he was a member of a higher social order, distinguished by collar and sleeve gaiters and suspenders.

"Was you lookin' for Doctor MacLean, ma'am?" He shielded his eyes from the sun. "Anybody ailin'?"

"Yes." She sharpened her speech, annoyed at the delay. "Mr. MacIvor's been shot——"

The audience received the intelligence with visible interest, but with no display of excitement. Simultaneously the three youths spat. The storekeeper lowered his jaw.

"Dave MacIvor? Shot bad, ma'am?"

"I don't know. That's why I'm so anxious to find the doctor—at once. If you'll point out his house——"

He gestured across the track at one of the two houses which had known paint. She stirred the horse with her heel, suddenly depressed at a thought of the sort of doctor who would be likely to live in such a place. But her first sight of Doctor MacLean reassured her. He was small and thin and old, and there was about him none of that prosperous assurance which she had come to associate with the expensive specialists of her experience, but she felt at once that he knew his work and followed it as much for love as for a living.

SHE told him briefly what had happened. He rubbed his chin, his fingers making a scratching sound against the white bristles of a short beard.

"I'll ride right over, ma'am. Dave MacIvor's wrong headed, some ways, but we ain't ready to lose him yet awhile, I reckon."

She waited while a lame Negro saddled his horse. They rode past the store together and she observed that the three meditative youths had not moved. Somehow they seemed to personify the dreary dejection of the country, sterile and desolate and acquiescent. The old man riding beside her put her thought into words, as if she had spoken it aloud.

"It ain't all their fault, ma'am. They ain't bad boys. It's the way things stand that's to blame. They's no use for a man to work, the way cotton and tobacco been sellin' these two—three years. And the land ain't much good, anyways. It's a right sorry country, now the timber's gone."

She nodded. Why didn't they get away from it, then? If they had a spark of ambition about them they'd emigrate. Again he seemed to follow the thought.

"I should go home," said MacIvor slowly. MacLean overruled the protest.

"Right funny, how a man hates to move out'n the country where he belongs. I been meanin' to go ever since they stopped cuttin' the pines, and I ain't got round to it yet. It's sorry country, sure enough, but it gits so it don't look sorry till some stranger comes and sees it."

The horses plodded carefully down a slope in the trodden sand. The old man pursued his topic, his voice high and thin and faintly musical.

"One way, it's all Dave MacIvor's fault we're so bad off," he said. "You'd hardly believe how things has changed since he stopped them cuttin' the timber. The town was alive, those times. Stores and saloons and a bank. It'd be like that again if Dave would sell his woods."

"Perhaps he will, now." She remembered her uncle's suggestion. MacIvor, he declared, had been shrewd to wait his own time. "I understand that the price is much higher than it used to be."

The doctor laughed. "That's so, ma'am, but it don't matter to Dave. Trees—he sets more store by a sorry old pine than by a human, any day. That timber won't be cut till Dave's dead."

She felt the undercurrent of bitterness in his thin, genial voice and could understand it, even share it a little. Her imagination lifted a sudden vision of this countryside in the height of the timber days, the roaring trade of the pineboard towns, the stream of yellow lumber going out and the thinner, yellower stream of gold that flowed back. Tales of lumber camps woke in her memory, providing a background of contrast against which the languid, consenting stupor of the present found a new significance, indicting the man who lay unconscious at the camp as the single cause of all this decay. It lay at his door—the dead desolation of the town, the poverty and emptiness of the countryside, the effect on the dejected natives who had stayed. He was responsible, in a sense, for those three lank, lounging boys at the store; except for him they might have been busy, alert, prosperous.

The thought rode with her. If Gail spoke truly, it was all to gratify some private grudge and whim; if Warren Borden's conjecture was correct, it was to serve a private profit. Either way, MacIvor had starved and broken his country and his neighbors, given them nothing in place of what he had withheld.

In this light he gained, somehow, in her estimate. At least he was a power, a man strong enough and hard enough to set his wish against the interest of a whole community, to face the consequences unafraid, selfish, no doubt, and narrow and stubborn as well, but owning, too, the rugged virtues of those defects.

THEY found him conscious, when they reached the camp, but weak from loss of blood and still showing the effect of shock. Her first opinion of the doctor was confirmed by his deftness at his work. He dressed the wound swiftly.

"Reckon you better stay right here, Dave, till you get over the worst of it. They's no sign of concussion, but you've got a mean wound and you've bled a heap."

"I should go home," said MacIvor slowly. MacLean overruled the protest with an authority that sat strangely on his slight, reedy figure, and Jane observed that his patient yielded the point at once.

"I must get word to my aunt, then." He spoke to her, looking past MacLean. She nodded.

"I'll send Latham over at once. You mustn't think of trying to ride till Doctor MacLean says it's safe."

"I'll be over in the morning," said MacLean. "You stay where you are till then, anyhow."

Meeting her uncle's glance, Jane Borden surprised a gleam of satisfaction in it, and was puzzled. She had expected him to resent the intrusion, as he had resented, of late, everything that involved any personal inconvenience. He was plainly glad that MacIvor could not be moved at once. She wondered why.

The doctor slanted his head and studied Warren Borden as he stood beside his horse, ready to go back. He had declined an offer of refreshment, and his glance moved, now, to the glass and bottle on the porch table.

"You use liquor much, Mr. Borden?"

Borden frowned. It was a point on which Jane had learned to keep silent. Any reference to his steady tippling irritated him at once.

"I never drink except when I can get it," he said shortly.

The doctor did not smile. "You wouldn't get it, if you was a patient of mine, sir."

Borden chuckled. "That's one reason I give you fellows plenty of room, doctor. If I'd believed everything they tell me, I'd have cashed in long ago."

The old man nodded slowly and climbed to the saddle. As he vanished at the bend in the land, Borden turned to the girl with an abrupt change of manner.

"Jane, this is unholy luck—this whole business! I've been getting a headache trying to figure out a way of putting that sour Scotchman under an obligation, and here he is—right where I wanted him."

She frowned, vaguely displeased at his tone. "I don't see——"

He made an impatient sound in his throat. "O, don't be dense, Jane! Don't you realize that this fellow controls the only money that's left in this hole? If we can manage him, it means getting the road back on its feet, money enough to get out of here and stay out. This is our chance."

Again she was repelled by the tone. It wasn't like him, to count eagerly on taking advantage of his own hospitality to extract a profit. She had heard him air views of men who inveigled guests under their week end roofs with a canny eye cocked on the market.

"We'd better wait till he's well, hadn't we?" She meant it as a gentle rebuke, but he took it as another sign of dullness.

"Nonsense! This is the time to go after him. A man's always easier to handle when he's on his back." He stopped to fill the glass of whisky and water, drank, his hand visibly tremulous. Her brows drew together. This home made spirit that Shepard Gail had brought him must be at the bottom of his altered attitude. But she knew that a protest would only anger him, and held her tongue.

Latham was dispatched to carry word to Miss Drummond, and Johanna, sullen and clumsy, waited on the lunch table. Warren Borden's spirits mounted steadily during the meal.

"I tell you, Jane, it's the luckiest thing that's happened for years—our coming down here! I just felt in my bones that there was a profit left in that old road! It takes a northerner to see it, that's all. A fellow like Gail would starve to death with a million right under his eye. I'll show them yet!"

BY the time Latham returned with a note from Miss Drummond, whose anxiety had clearly been allayed in advance by Jane's own reassuring letter, Warren Borden had talked himself into a mood of pure optimism. They would manage the sale of the timber for this backwoods plutocrat; there would be room for a substantial profit here. The railroad, earning excellent dividends for a year or two, would be salable to investors who looked only at annual reports; they could go back to New York with full pockets.

"I'll go in and amuse him now," he announced, emptying his glass. "There's no time like the present."

She was driven to open protest by this. "Uncle Warren! Don't you realize that he's ill? You can't mean to bother him with business when he's——"

His easy irritation flared at her. "See here, Jane—leave this to me, please! You don't seem to understand that it's no time to quibble——"

"I can understand that Mr. MacIvor's our guest, and in no condition to be troubled by——"

"Pshaw! MacLean said it was nothing. He'll be up and about by tomorrow. You couldn't hurt that fellow's head with a glancing shot! And you don't realize what this means to us, Jane. It's the last chance—if we don't find a way of unloading our Dundee stock, we'll stay right where we are till we die—till I die, I mean. We're living on the annuity my father bought for me, right now. And if anything happens to me, that stops. Don't forget that. I'm not thinking about myself—it's you. You'd be stranded down here with nothing but a piece of bare sand and a waste basket full of worthless paper. We can't afford to waste a chance like this—I've got to talk to that fellow when I can be sure he'll listen."

"I'd much prefer——"

He stopped her with an impatient gesture. "It doesn't matter what you think you'd prefer. It's my business to look out for you and I'm going to do it."

He moved away quickly. A sense of helplessness came on her. The change in him of which, now that she looked back, she should have been aware long ago, revealed itself suddenly, with an effect of shock. He had never been like this in the old days; he wasn't himself, not the Warren Borden she knew, at least. It had been swifter, more visible, this process of degeneration, since they had come to the camp, but she remembered, now, that it had begun long before that—a growing irritability, a relaxation of standards in speech and address and conduct. She was afraid, not of him, but for him and

LOCAL TALENT . . . . . By George M. Cohan

of their own gang. Still a little later on, when Coolidge became governor of Massachusetts, the folks in Northampton giggled all over the place at the ridiculous idea of a Northampton mayor being placed in such an important position. A little later on, when he was sworn into the Presidency of the whole United States, the boys around the state house in Boston probably had a hearty laugh at the hopelessness of any man they had ever known personally filling in as chief executive of the nation.

AND so it goes all along the line. The merry ha ha from those we know and who think they know us—local talent, local talent engraved on every medal they slip us. It's just the fact that the average man will never acknowledge greatness in any local talent.

I've watched this thing pretty closely for years and I've finally arrived at the conclusion that it's not a matter of living up to expectations; it's really a case of trying to live them down.

Did you ever have a fellow say to you, "You know, before I got to know you I used to wonder what sort of a man you were?"

"Why was that?" you naturally ask.

"O, I don't know," he'll say, "you seemed sort of strange, but now I know you're just a regular fellow."

Well, believe me, the minute that speech is pulled you're gone, you've absolutely lost out with that bird, because what's really in his mind is that he's got your real number at last and you're not such-a-much after all.

In other words, the illusion is gone. The fellow who first pulled the old speech, "familiarity breeds contempt," had some head on his shoulders. At least he could never have worn an after dinner coffee cup for a hat.

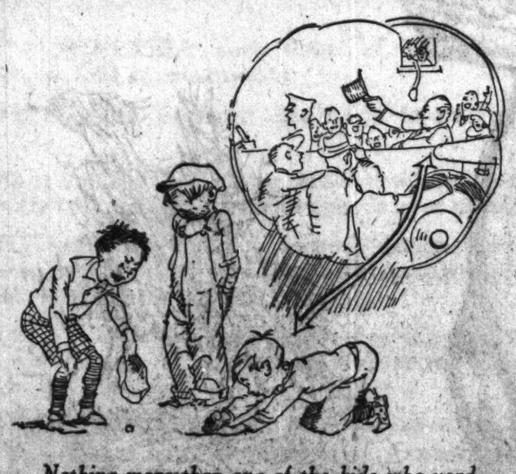
There is a certain fascination or mystery or whatever it is about any person we don't happen to know much about. Every man's valet imagines he's working for the biggest sap on earth.

HERE'S a funny one, and it's the truth, too. I rooted for Jack Dempsey long before I ever met him, and was always sure he was going to win. I rooted for him after I met him, too, but I was always afraid he was going to lose. Now, why had I lost such complete confidence in the man? The answer is that he had ceased to be a figure—he had become just a fellow I knew.

It's a queer twist in the mind, but you must admit it's there.

No actual happening in life is nearly as interesting as the dramatization of the thing. We're all dramatists. We're all imaginative, and the only wet blankets in life are cold facts.

Why did one baseball player walk up to another baseball player and offer him a bribe to throw a game? Because he'd met him and knew him (or at least thought he did) and so underestimated the man, figuring him a boob. He certainly would never have made any such proposal to a stranger, but he felt perfectly safe in putting the proposition before one of his own home town gang.



Nothing more than one of the kids who used to play marbles with them.

And what happened? Scandal, disgrace, expulsion followed the expose.

Just another case of never allowing a man to escape from the category of local talent.

The schoolboy of the present day might just as well make up his mind right now that no matter what he accomplishes in after years his schoolmates will always have him tabbed for nothing more than one of the kids who used to play marbles with them. Of course, the rest of the world may accept him as a perfectly wonderful person, but his old time neighbors will always look upon him as an ordinary lad who used to pass their houses every day with his school books under his arm.

Only the other day, in the smoking compartment of a Pullman car, I heard a man say, "Why! I knew Henry Ford years ago in Buffalo when he used to hang around the old Iroquois hotel and the whole gang used to kid the life out of him about that car of his that he was going to put on the market some day."

We all waited for him to continue his story, but that's as far as he went. Now, what was the idea of making a crack like that without following it up in some way or other? What reason on earth could that man have had for saying such a thing outside of the fact that he wanted to get a knock in for one of the local talent he'd known back home?

Well, now, this is my dope on it. What that man really wanted to say was, "This bird Henry Ford doesn't amount to anything. Of course, you fellows think he does, but I tell you you're wrong. Why, he's nothing but a guy that I knew years ago."

Now, how can anybody account for a slant like that?

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER JR. told me once he wasn't much of a mixer in his boyhood days. I've often wondered since whether John's father hadn't quietly tipped the boy off to the local talent stuff. It's a pretty safe bet that the old gentleman's early day cronies never gave him credit for being able to dig deep enough to strike water, let alone oil.

I dare say it's the same the world over. We force ourselves to see things as we want to see them and to measure men from the standpoint of how big or little we'd really like them to be. It's the old gag about "the wish being father to the thought," and the thought being second cousin to the sour grape vine in the old back yard.

And so it is with me and this new job of mine. I've got all these local talent hurdles to take, a pair of song and dance shoes to live down, and ten million guys to convince that I swing a wicked pencil before I'll be recognized as a great man of letters.

Well, to tell you the truth, the task doesn't frighten me in the least. I'm going to make it. Yes, sir, I'm going to fold this letter writing business up and put it in my pocket.

That's what I said about the show business a good many years ago, but nobody believed me at the time.

Now, listen! I'll tell you what I'm going to do. Commencing next Sunday, I'm going to take all the news of the week and pack it tightly into one article and let you know a song and dance man's view on current events. I'll fool around with that idea for a few Sundays, and if it doesn't strike twelve I'll switch to some other scheme and keep on trying until I hit upon some definite style of letter that will make the news dealers wonder what the mad rush is all about.

That's quite a promise to make, but, if I say it myself, I'm a promising young journalist.

You see, I have no one to advise me at all. I've got to think this thing out single handed and I'm going to do it, too. Yes, sir. I'll do it just as sure as Coolidge will be elected or that my name is for herself. His reference to her dependence on his annuity startled her; she saw herself left alone and penniless in this wilderness, if he should die.

SHE followed him to MacIvor's room, led by an unfamiliar need of human contact to reassure her against this new fear. As she reached the open doorway she heard MacIvor's, clear and determined.

"Once for all, sir, I will not talk of cutting. I passed my word to my father that the timber should stand while I stood."

"Very proper attitude, too very proper." She heard Borden's quick response. "I can understand exactly how you feel about it. But your father would certainly change his mind if he were here today. When he died, I take it, there was no real profit in this long leaf pine of yours. Now it will bring——"

"I have no concern with that, sir. It was no greed of money that moved my father. He had seen enough—and I had seen enough. I will not kindle a new flame in the hell that was lighted in our hills in those days. You have not seen the timber towns, the men who fall the trees. I have. I will not bring them back."

She came into the room, hoping her presence would end the talk, but her uncle seemed hardly aware that she was there. MacIvor greeted her with a slight motion of his head. She saw that his eyes were hard and bright.

"O, that!" Borden waved his hand. "Of course, lumberjacks are apt to be a rough lot, but that surely isn't a reason for refusing to take the profit you've earned! They'll come and go, and there's an end of that."

"Yes. An end of more than that." MacIvor nodded slowly. "We will not agree on this, Mr. Borden. I say again that I will not sell—at any price or on any terms."

Borden's face went suddenly crimson. For an instant Jane thought that he would let his temper go completely, and she touched his arm in warning and reminder. He regained control of his irritation with a visible effort and something of his old manner was in his answer at last.

"Well, it's your affair, of course. I meant only to point out that conditions have changed—that you have a large sum locked up in unproductive timber—but, as I say, it is your own affair and none of my business. I meant it kindly——"

"And I take it so, sir." MacIvor moved his head again. Borden rose.

"I'll let you rest now. I'm afraid this has tired you."

"Yes." Jane intervened quickly. "I'm sure the doctor wouldn't want Mr. MacIvor to talk business just yet." She produced Miss Ailie's note and forced a diversion by reading it aloud.

"I told her it was just a scratch. I didn't want to frighten her."

"That was kindly thought of."

Borden sauntered out, maintaining his semblance of unconcern. She took the chair by the bedside.

"Would you like me to read or talk or would you rather try to sleep?" She spoke with a warmth prompted by her disapproval of her uncle's course.

"I think I could sleep," he said frankly. "You are kind, Miss Borden. "I am sorry that I must trouble you."

"I think I owed you more than this," she interrupted quickly. "It was in my quarrel, too, that you were hurt. You must remember that."

"My trouble with Breck is older," he said, wearily. "You must not blame yourself for any part of it."

She left him. Her uncle paced fretfully on the veranda, a deep groove between his brows.

"Did you hear him, Jane? The man's a fanatic! He won't cut his timber because lumbermen don't sing hymns while they work. Actually, that's his reason! And he owns a hundred square miles of virgin pine!"

"He's in pain and weak," she said quietly. "I'm sorry that you spoke to him about it. We can wait, at least till he's on his feet."

"There's no time to loose," he said. "Somebody else will get in on it if we don't. I've got to think, Jane! There's bound to be a way around this."

She watched him prepare to think by refilling his glass. Her attitude toward liquor had been always as tolerant as his, but she had now a quick sense of anger at the pale liquid in the bottle, almost a personal feeling.

"I don't believe that stuff's good for you, Uncle Warren. "And you're drinking a lot of it, too."

He shook his head impatiently. "O, don't begin on that, Jane. It's first rate whisky. Gail ages it, you see. Moonshine's just the same as any whisky, except that it's usually sold before it's fit to drink. This is three years old, Gail says, and I believe him."

She knew better than to insist, and his emphasis a little reassured her. After all, he might be right. But her uneasiness continued as she watched him slouch in his chair and scowl above the glass. He was so different from the merry, irresponsible uncle who had been more like a jolly elder brother than a guardian. Again she confronted a displeased amazement that he should greedily insist on talking business with a reluctant and wounded guest. He had been a man without creed, but, like so many such men, he had been the slave of a code which made no exceptions. This thing he had done was more shocking, to her view, than a sin.

IT was a distinct relief to see Sheppard Gail swing gracefully out of the saddle. He was a member of her own order, in spite of trivial differences of surface; the thing she thought of as a gentleman, with no distinct formula behind the term. His presence in this backwoods lessened her growing sense of solitude, the feeling that she was alien and alone.

"What's this about Dave MacIvor being killed?" She felt a genuine solicitude in his tone. He didn't like MacIvor, perhaps, but he could be sorry to hear he was hurt. She explained quickly, and saw with approval that he was honestly relieved.

"I've been looking for this," he said soberly. "Dave has been hunting trouble mighty hard. Rufe Breck isn't like the boys around here. He's from the hills, and it's risky business to meddle with him."

She related her own experience with the moonshiner. His eyes went black and angry as he listened.

"Laid a hand on you, did he? That fixes him. We've been leaving him alone, but he'll go now. I——"

She opened her eyes wide, pleased that graver offense was in his sight the less, that he was angrier at the affront to her than at the attack on MacIvor. He seemed to follow the thought and laughed mildly at himself.

"I reckon that does look funny to you, maybe. You see, down here we look at things different. A lady——" he stopped. "A fight's a fight, and Dave went hunting for this one. But mishandling you——" He shook his head. "Breck goes. I'll ride over to Tyre this evening and see the sheriff myself."

Warren Borden looked thoughtful. "Sheriff a friend of yours, Gail?"

Gail smiled. "I wouldn't say just that. But he's apt to listen when I talk. If he didn't, they'd be another sheriff pretty soon, that would."

Borden chuckled. "You mean that, Gail? You pull as much influence as that?"

"You don't want to listen to me brag, do you, Mr. Borden?" Gail's pleasant grin apologized for even so much of a boast. "The county most generally goes our way, these times It ain't a lot to be proud of, any more."

Borden's teeth showed for a moment. "I want to talk business with you, Gail. Jane won't mind. I've got a notion."

Jane liked the quick, deferential glance at her which prefaced Gail's assent. He didn't forget his manners, however Warren Borden might.

"I ought to see if my patient's all right, anyway," She left them on the verandah. Her uncle was filling his glass again. MacIvor was asleep, his face touched with an added grimness below the bandages. He made her think again of the picture; one of Cromwell's Ironsides would have looked so, after Nassby. And her thought would move to the men on the verandah. There was a cavalier, to match this puritan; she smiled a little; Sheppard Gail would have fitted as easily into one of Rupert's regiments. And Jane Borden? She would have been for the king, she decided.

SHE avoided the porch as the afternoon declined, conscious of the talk there and a little curious that it should last so long. Once or twice she heard Gail's pleasant laugh, touched, now, with a note of excitement. She changed for dinner, although the habit had been dropped when they came here. Gail's presence seemed to restore at once the formalities and the appeal of the usages which had seemed discordant in the woods. She emerged on the porch feeling more like herself than she had felt since her first glimpse of the camp. Gail's instant leap to his feet, his eager, instinctive gallantry, pleased her.

"We have been wasting too much time on business, Mr. Borden." He had an undeniably appealing smile, and his voice could be boyish and sophisticated at once. "How's old Dave, Miss Borden?"

"Still asleep. You're staying for dinner, of course? Please do."

He hesitated. "I'd like to, thanks."

Borden seconded the invitation with his old cordiality and carried Gail off to his room. Jane noticed that the bottle on the stand was almost empty, and when the two men joined her it was clear that her uncle had consumed more than his share Gail was entirely at ease and self-sure; Warren Borden, by contrast, seemed almost gross in his good humor. He laughed a little too loudly, his voice was high pitched and overbearing; he referred mysteriously to a surprise in store for Jane, to his own shrewdness, to Gail's enlistment in some endeavor which he chose not to explain.

"There's a kick in the old horse yet, Janie. You'll see! I knew there was money waiting for us down here. Sixth sense and all that." He wagged his head at Gail. "Shame on you—under your nose all the time, and you never smelled it!"

"The old hound for the cold scent," said Gail smoothly. "Don't rub it in, Mr. Borden." He turned easily to the girl. "I'd sure like for you to ride to our pack, Miss Borden—there's good sport with our native hounds. They want manners, but they have the nose."

She welcomed the change of topic and liked him for perceiving that she had had enough of her uncle's mysterious allusions to money. She observed approvingly that he barely touched his glass, and afterward, before the fatwood fire, declined to join Warren Borden in his attentions to the fresh bottle. He kept the talk close to his fox hounds and his hunters, and she knew enough of the jargon to enjoy it. He knew a great deal about it; she learned, for the first time, that even seemingly absurd trivialities of costume had their origin in common sense—the brilliant color of the huntsman's coat, the shape of the headgear, the pattern of boot, all had a sound reason for existence. She discovered that he knew his Surtees almost by heart and that he collected editions, in a modest way. The sense that he was a survival from a forgotten age grew on her, with a kindred consciousness that they were of the same order. She liked him, and was glad that he had stayed, sorry that he took his leave so early.

WARREN BORDEN dropped an unsteady arm about her shoulders when they were alone.

"Janie, old girl, I've got it, this time! I'm going to show them, yet." He changed his tone abruptly. "I'm going to take care of you all right, Janie—you needn't worry any more. You'll be fixed, no matter what happens to me." She detected a warning of coming sentimentality in the voice, and drew away. She had never seen him so plainly affected by his drink.

"You'd better turn in," she said gently. "You—you sound tired, Uncle Warren. I'll see that everything's all right."

He agreed with a startling readiness. "That's right—I am tried—dead tired, Janie. Tell you about it in the morning."

But in the morning he did not appear for breakfast, and after waiting long beyond the usual hour, she tapped on his door. He did not answer; she went in, to find him seemingly asleep. She could not rouse him. A sudden panic woke in her. She ran in MacIvor's room, afraid of something she could not identify. He listened grimly,

"You say he finished a bottle of Gail's whisky, yesterday?"

"I'm afraid he did."

"It may be no more than that, then. But MacLean will be here soon. And my aunt, too, if I know her." He met her eyes for a moment. "You need not fear, Miss Borden. This raw spirit is more powerful than the liquor your uncle has been used to."

She was a little comforted, in spite of a certain shame. According to the code under which she had lived, there was no disgrace in intoxication, provided a man bore it decently, and yet, under MacIvor's glance, she had a quick, deep sense of humiliation. Even a puritan, she thought, had less respect for a weakling tippler than for a gentleman who carried his drink gaily and well.

When Doctor MacLean arrived she was conscious of an instant comfort, a faith in him which seemed the stronger because he had so little of the professional air to which she was used in men of his calling. The deep, fluttering respirations which had alarmed her became now reassuring; there was a vigor about them that ridiculed her anxieties. She was startled by the doctor's tone.

"How long has he been like this?"

She told him all she knew. He rubbed the short bristles of his beard.

"Has he been under treatment, in the north, do you know? A special diet?"

She shook her head. "He wouldn't listen to what the doctors told him. He always ate what he pleased. He used to say that doctors only wanted to interfere with his comforts."

"I reckon they did." He spoke drily. "Fond of sweet stuff, wasn't he? And liked a drink, too, eh?."

She nodded. "He took a great fancy to the whisky they make down here. He's been taking a lot of it, lately"

Again he nodded. "Thought so. It's too bad this didn't come while he was north. They could have done a mite for him, up there, maybe. Intravenous injection to alkalinize this here acidosis—but it looks to me like it be too late, anyhow. This coma——"

"What is it, doctor? I don't understand——"

He shrugged. "Only what happens when a man poisons himself for years. Diabetic coma, we call it. They isn't anything to do for it. He won't suffer, and that's some comfort."

She stood very still. "You mean he's going to die?"

"I hate to say so, but——"

"Thanks for being honest with me. I'd rather know now."

Her mind refused to focus. There was a helpless pity for the unconscious man she had loved; there was a glow of anger, too, at the folly that had brought him to this, as if he had committed slow suicide, almost intentionally, by criminal neglect. She thrust this graceless thought from her. And in its place came the memory of his confidence, last night, his talk of rehabilitation. He wouldn't live to carry out whatever plan he had devised.

Her own plight came clearly before her in the train of this reflection. His income would die with him—there would be nothing for her. Again she rejected the consideration, a little shamed that she could spare a thought for such a matter, in such a time. Compassion welled in her; Warren Borden was dying, at fifty-four; she felt the presence of an unrealized tragedy, a wasted, sterile life, foreshortened by the only pleasures it had held, cheap, trivial pleasures, too—the mere sensory reactions to food and drink. It seemed suddenly horrible that a life should have held so little.

The doctor's hand touched her arm gently and in a new, ominous silence, she listened in vain for that labored breath.

An Odd Tale of the Queer Tangle We Call Life, with Some Light on the Baffling Mystery as to Who Poisoned Peter McAusland.

There were voices coming down the terrace; three men, with Peter McAusland himself in the lead.

SINCE the future keeps its events so carefully up its sleeve, it was with no premonition that the two guests walked the terrace at Lakeholme that afternoon.

Of all places Lakeholme, spread out in the richness of the October afternoon, looked the least threatening. It seemed rather one of those fortunate spots where the world of men grows thin and lets through some hint of a brighter backing. Formal gardens surrounding the house, then pine woods, the glint of a lake, and the great stretches of private links still showing the furrows left by wartime potatoes. Those potatoes, carefully reproduced in the newspapers, had been a compelling gesture. But, then, Peter McAusland was a master of gesture. Lakeholme itself was one, swept defiantly in the face of the world as a fortress of masculine retreat.

On the terrace the smaller of the two men blinked about him, thinking aloud in a voice dryly harsh.

"The place epitomizes his life, you know."

"What place and whose life?" asked the other.

"McAusland's, of course, whose else? A bitter grasping for power in the midst of a still more bitter isolation."

"O," the other murmured.

He was Doctor Hobyn, the sort of physician to whom the reporters delight to allude as "the famous specialist." A large, inflamed sort of man, put up in the Jeffersonian manner of turned out toes and entrailed dignity. His glance held a perpetual blue choler and everything he said sounded tremendously important.

"With McAusland a lot of that's liver," he pronounced.

Much of his professional reputation came from his way of explaining ethical or moral lapses as physical derangements. Women found him especially comforting. But, like the Metropolitan musem, which he vaguely resembled, Doctor Hobyn was deadly respectable in spite of the curious knowledges inside him.

"Who else is here?" he asked.

"Father Sebastian, for one."

That came with an added dryness, and the doctor whistled softly.

"But look here, Montefiore, isn't that going rather far?"

The one addressed as Montefiore was obviously a Jew and as obviously a lawyer. He was a wispy little man, with a domelike head on which the hair had met its Marne. His glance was of an almost venemous intelligence and his politics as reactionary as the Talmud. He was that unpopular thing known as a "corporation lawyer," and certain journals served him up as a Jewish looking monkey sitting on the shoulder of a bloated human "trust." In return he had pickled his tongue in an acid impertinence.

"Really, now—Father Sebastian," Hobyn rumbled on; "why wasn't he the—er—other man?"

"My dear fellow, there never was another man, the trial proved that," Montefiore rasped. "It is simply that it has taken McAusland twenty-five years to admit that he was wrong."

"But to have Father Sebastian here, and the boy at the same time."

"Merely a rather sweeping admission on McAusland's part that his accusations were groundless. He never did do anything by halves."

HOBYN pondered that breathily.

"That's spleen. Well," he continued, as if the pronouncement disassociated him from all responsibility, "I'm here professionally."

"So am I. He made his will this morning with the aid of his attorney. I am not betraying confidence. We are all to witness it after dinner."

"His will? Why, I gave him another fifteen years after my examination this morning."

"As I said, McAusland loves to go the whole hog. As to the guests, the only one I know of is this Mr. Mahan."

"Just who is he, anyway?"

"My dear man, did you ever know just who any of these westerners are?"

Monefiore's own birthplace had been Portugal, but he spoke with all the adamantine conceit of your as nearly native as any New Yorker can be.

"With them we have to reverse things," he continued. "Here amongst ourselves we know with such ghastly certainty just who everybody is that we seldom trouble to know them. Westerners, on the other hand, come with an appalling capacity for personal intimacy and no indications of who they may really be."

"They probably don't know themselves. And is this Mahan one whom you know with such appalling intimacy?"

"I know that I don't know him, and that's something."

Montefiore stopped as a figure detached itself from the shadow of a great stone vase. A spare figure, his face striking a note of sun bronze in the midst of a general effect of pleasing grayness. An unobtrusive figure, one at which people would hardly glance twice. If they did so they were apt to look again. It took notice to detect the texture of the man. From his grizzled hair and the sun wrinkles about his eyes, he was probably well into the forties, but his still supple lines took off some years of that.

His gray gaze held a twinkle. He must have heard part of the conversation at least, but Montefiore's native impertinence came instantly to his rescue.

"Ah, Mr. Mahan, we were just discussing you."

"May I ask the verdict?" the other inquired, and Montefiore's hands went up in one of his incurable gestures.

"Simply that we couldn't arrive at any at all."

Mahan considered that as he proferred his cigar case.

"Well, that is the only verdict I have been able to arrive at myself," he said.

He seemed to have a way of finishing a subject with a single sentence. One could almost see it expiring on the flagstones at their feet. The doctor glowered as though he suspected the other's interior organs.

"You are here in connection with the Matanzas oil fields, aren't you?" Monefiore suggested.

One of his tricks was to imply something which he knew to be false in order that the truth might rush out to refute it. But Mahan leaped the trap as if it were not there. Montefiore thought he had never seen so noncommittal a gaze as this man's; it appeared to take everything in and give nothing back, like a mirror.

"No, I'm—just here, I guess," said Mahan. "I'm really a most useless person, quite unconnected with anything. Just a man—at large."

"How did you get out?" chuckled Montefiore.

"I found out that we are none of us ever really in."

That finished that. Mahan swung himself up to a seat on the broad balustrade of the terrace. A quiet man and one, as Montefiore had already discovered, surprisingly well informed. One met him everywhere, even at houses like this, where his only claim to an invitation seemed the fact that he honestly did not care if he were invited or not. That attitude was particularly baffling to women, but he flew no flags and offered no explanations.

AT the formal entrance down the terrace men were twining an elaborate design of the flags of the former allies. That was in preparation for the morrow, when a visiting marshal of France would pin a decoration on Peter McAusland's coat in recognition of his aid to the devastated zone. There would be a luncheon with a senator or two, some ambassadors, and an Episcopal bishop. McAusland liked the grand manner, and a bishop is perhaps the best that America can do. There would also be reporters and a battery of moving picture cameras, for McAusland had the knack of being always "big news." The importance of it all made the comparative non-distinction of the little house party all the more apparent.

Mahan was considering that behind his quiet glance. He looked up at the house, soaring above them into a bouquet of towers with much machicolation. From a flagstaff flew the McAusland pennon, a green star on a white ground. That private flag certainly lent an air, especially when one remembered it could be seen over half the world, in every place where rubber or oil could be profitably secured. Peter McAusland's way had been to seize defenseless little tropical places and wind them up in a net of his plantations and steamer lines. The Starboard islands were practically in his pocket. Waganda, a considerable part of Mexico, and the oil ports of the Persian gulf dangled like ornaments from his watch chain.

He was something of a great little man in his way, with a lingering Scotch middle class complex and a strange inability to forget an enemy or to hold a friendship. The wreck of his domestic life proved that. But that, of course, was over now, and this occasion was the acknowledgment of its end.

And yet—Mahan wondered again, wondering just what he was wondering at. His capacity for wonderment was almost embarrassing at times. Meanwhile he gazed up at the great mass of the house.

"Quite a place," he remarked.

"You are probably aware that Lakeholme is considered one of our best examples of Spanish renaissance," Hobyn offered.

"That means feudal Gothic with a touch of Moorish subtlety," Mahan nodded.

"Are you one of those who profess to draw a connection between the character of a man and the kind of house he builds?" demanded the physician.

Mahan took his time in replying, half draping himself along the balustrade.

"Do you know, the way in which we attempt to trace connections always strikes me as rather ridiculous?" he said at last. "It makes me think of a man with a basket of snakes trying to sort them out by joining up the nearest head to the nearest tail."

"I see—one of your picturesque western similes," Hobyn patronized. "But, really now—who ever heard of a basket of snakes?"

"No one, probably," Mahan agreed. "Yet here it is, all about us everywhere we go. A queer snarl of human events of which we see only the heads and tails—buzz or poison as the case may be. And who can tell which middle really belongs to which finish?"

Hobyn snorted, with an odd effect of hoofing at the flagstones. Montefiore gave one of his keen chuckles.

"My good man, I'd like to have you on the witness box."

THERE were voices coming down the terrace; three men, with Peter McAusland himself in the lead. He was extraordinarily like the caricatures of himself. Those keen pens always depicted him as a little man, thickset, with long body and short legs and a face like a cherub in need of a shave. A purely exterior, rubber sort of cherub fashioned about a core of inner iron. How the artists managed to express all that with a few strokes of the pen, they and heaven alone knew. But that was how he looked as he came down the terrace, clad in a shabby golfing suit, his closely clipped beard like a silver frosting on his pink face.

Coming quickly, a step or two in advance of his companions, he resembled a high powered tug pulling along a couple of craft. Craft totally dissimilar, yet alike just then in a common air of being stripped down and rather rudderless, both bound to McAusland's motive force.

The elder of the two, in clerical black with a gold cross, was known as Father Sebastian. Tall, gaunt, his face was too furrowed and sensitive for genuine strength. Twenty-five years before, as rector of a fashionable Episcopal church, he had attracted much notice by his revival of a fiery mysticism accompanied by much ritual. Then he had suddenly resigned and plunged into social missionary work in what is vaguely known as the tenement districts.

The other, the only young man in the party, was Hugh McAusland. It was across his cradle that Peter McAusland had battled with his wife until the highest court in the union had pronounced the child his own. Since then, until within a few days, Hugh McAusland had never seen this legally proven father of his. And Father Sebastian was the man whom Peter McAusland had been bitterly bent upon proving to be the partner of his wife's supposed guilt.

It was a strange situation as the three came together along the terrace; one created by Peter McAusland's sudden right about face in deciding to acknowledge his son. The situation was hardly a credit to his good taste. But then, Mahan reflected, one did not become the McAusland Tire company, the Cosmic Oil, and the Green Star lines by dint of good taste. It took something ruthless to force the world to deliver up so much of its guarded values.

The host stopped, with much glitter of eyeglasses and smiling teeth.

"Mr. Mahan, I believe you have not yet met my son—and Father Sebastian."

The cleric bowed gravely. Hugh thrust out an impulsive hand.

"Say, you are from the west, aren't you, Mr. Mahan?"

"My son has spent some years in—Oregon, wasn't it?" his father explained.

In his slim, slightly Italian fashion, Hugh probably resembled his mother. Just then his good looks were clouded over as if he had really no desire to be there in this situation of his father's contriving. McAusland was voluble, almost noisy, with much show of paternal affection. Of the three, it was the father who most kept his dignity at that moment.

Smiling hugely, McAusland turned his glittering eyeglasses on the group.

"A doctor, a lawyer, and a priest," he crowed. "Usually that combination is the last in a man's life."

He laughed at his own joke. Like most small men, he seemed to make up in egoism for his lack of inches. He went relentlessly on, pursuing his pleasantry with a hand on his son's shoulder.

"And when you add an heir—really, all it needs is an undertaker, eh, Hugh? I trust that that is not Mr. Mahan's role."

Hugh made a dutiful attempt at laughter; it rang flatly and he flushed at the sound of it. With loud good humor McAusland clapped him again upon the shoulder.

"But at your age you can afford to give the old man a few years more, my boy—fifteen to twenty of them, Doctor Hobyn said this morning. You will pardon us, gentlemen; we have things to see to for tomorrow."

LINKING arms, he bore his son away, and with his departure there seemed somehow more air to breathe. The man undoubtedly had power of a sort; it stood out about him like an aggressive mist. The group on the terrace drifted apart, and it was Father Sebastian who fell to Mahan's share.

Munificent gifts they proved as the will was read. Everything without reserve to "my dear son, Hugh Peter McAusland." Hugh, standing in the window, paled as he listened.

They strolled down through the gardens, then across the shaven meadows to the lake. The light lay in golden bars between the pines, the autumn haze was as a bloom upon the land.

"A wonderful place, this," Father Sebastian was saying. "Though, of course, to yourself, after the vast spaces of your own marvelous west——"

That he was genuinely a somebody was proven by his instantaneous eastern habit of placing all westerners as a race apart. He had the physical dignities of an old school tragedian. They matched well with the slight flamboyance of his self-bestowed clerical title.

"I can see how the place must seem to you after the east side," Mahan returned.

"Ah—the east side."

Mahan had chosen the right word. With it another atmosphere descended on the Father; one of a wilderness of people pent up in a clattering place.

"The east side," he repeated. "There are times when I almost suspect that Swedenborg knew something. Have you read his description of the city of the average dead? A place of drab infinitude, where shadows, unaware of their own death, conduct a memory of buying and selling, a mockery of spectral gains and losses. And in the center of it all a hole that leads down to the hells."

They had reached the lake, where swans preened amongst the sedges and the pines doubled themselves in the still surface. A piece of some placid paradise it looked, but the clergyman's eyes were clouded by the visions which, it seemed, he had not quite the fiber to support.

"The hopelessness of it all," he went on. "The snarling monotony, not aware of its own death, hardly of its own misery, even. It is the deathly respectability that is so terrible; you have no idea of the prides of the poor. Even their sins are without spirit or joy. They circle round their hole to hell, but they never really jump into it. Down there are fire and brilliance and all the things which they dare not face. But here"—he paused, sweeping a hand toward the arrogance of Lakeholme—"here is a man who has dared. Only McAusland himself could tell what he has faced to tap the golden stream of the world like this."

"But is there so much actual distress in New York?"

"Distress is always with us; starvation, no—except the bitter hunger of the spirit, unrecognized except as a perpetual snarl and whine. Against the glitter of the city those districts are like a black picture on a gold screen. How to get that gold into the picture is the question. Money is the only way I can see. There are times when I could commit almost any crime if I thought it would effect that."

II.

THE routine of Lakeholme was unsparingly English in its model, and dinner had passed with a smother of food and ceremony.

In a disjointed group the guests strolled down the curio gallery. Vaulted ceiling and walls of mosaic and dull gold; great mirrors recessed in deep alcoves; rows of cases containing things rare and strange from the McAusland properties scattered across the world's map.

"This gallery always reminds me of a department store," Montefiore shrugged.

Mahan, walking at his side, stopped to examine a case of specimens from the south sea islands. More curious than curios they seemed; had there been women at Lakeholme, they would have had to be curtained. Their presence struck a revealing sidelight on the character of their owner.

"A store with some odd departments, certainly," he replied. "And what comes next on the program?"

"The signing of the will, I believe. Our host has a touch of the dear old melodrama about him.

"The cast is complete," Montefiore caustically continued. "The benevolent millionaire, the mystic priest, and the gallant young heir, whom all the audience know to be in for two hours and a half of engaging trouble. The rest of us are the comic character bits, I presume. Even the accused lady, though absent in person, is here in spirit."

"What became of Mrs. McAusland after the trial?"

"She refused all efforts at reconciliation, took her son, and went to relatives on the Pacific coast."

"That accounts for Oregon," Mahan nodded. "And Father Sebastian buried himself on the east side. Odd that the two proven innocent should have been the ones to throw up everything and disappear."

"It is usually the innocent who do the strange things," the lawyer returned. "Guilt is more apt to be circumspect. This is the way into the study."

McAusland's study was a surprise. With its silken hangings and gilt chairs, it more resembled a man's idea of a woman's boudoir, save for the incongruous mahogany desk.

There was probably a private staircase concealed somewhere above, but the only entrance from the gallery was by one of those mirror lined alcoves which held a sudden turn. That hidden entrance lent an intriguing air of secrecy to the place. One could imagine almost anything as taking place in that hidden nest. McAusland was awaiting them with the attorney who had drawn his will. In that pink setting with firelight and shaded lamps his silvered geniality made him look like some barbered Santa Claus scattering gifts.

Munificent gifts they proved as the will was read. Everything without reserve to "my dear son, Hugh Peter McAusland." Hugh, standing in the window, paled as he listened. Then came an added hush as the dryly legal tones went on.

". . . and in the event of the said Hugh Peter McAusland deceasing without legal issue . . . entire estate, as hereinbefore described . . . to——"

Impossible! Not even McAusland was capable of quite that. They must be hearing amiss. Hobyn was frankly open-mouthed beneath his clipped bottle brush mustache; Montefiore bent forward, startled, into the eminent counsel. Hugh had flushed, and his fingers were unconsciously destroying a silk curtain at his back. Father Sebastian might have been carved from some gray-green stone.

"——the Reverend James Clinton Dalhousie, now otherwise known as Father Sebastian, of the mission Church of Saint Mary the Sorrowful, City of New York——"

The whole estate to Father Sebastian, should Hugh die without legal children! It took all the combined social training of the group to surmount that moment. Only McAusland was the same, nodding delightedly like some miraculously frosted child. An unbelievable man; for a quarter of a century he had been bent in bitterness until it seemed that his mental and physical tissues must have "grown that way." Now, by some inconceivable contortion, he was leaning as far in the opposite direction.

IT was the doctor who first recovered from the general surprise, clapping Hugh upon the back.

"You will have to wait, my boy; I gave your father another lease of life this morning."

"Thank God for that," Hugh breathed.

"Amen," Father Sebastian pronounced. "And to you, lad, a happy marriage, and soon, I hope. And the Church of Saint Mary the Sorrowful is always open for christenings."

The signatures were witnessed, and they trooped out again. Mahan was last, with Peter McAusland at his side. The short passage from study to gallery was unlighted, and Mahan halted. Surely when he came in he had turned at a sharp angle, yet there, right ahead of him, was a glimpse of the brilliantly lit curio gallery.

McAusland nodded at the other's surprise.

"That is merely a reflection," he explained. "One is reflected from the mirror that faces the gallery; we calculated the angles with precision. A man of my mark has to take precautions, you know. As I sit in my study with the door open I can see any one who approaches, or who even crosses the gallery here."

Mahan examined the angling of the mirrors, and an involuntary, "But, if you can see them, then——" rose to his lips. But he cut it short, substituting a smile of understanding.

"And persons seen in reflection, unknown to themselves, are seen so differently," he said.

"One catches them off guard like that," McAusland returned, rubbing his plump hands in satisfaction. "One never knows; there may even be treacheries in one's own household. Should anything happen to me, you might remember I mentioned that suspicion."

So that was his place here in this Lakeholme affair, Mahan thought as he prepared for bed that night. His was the role of the impartial observer who was to remember having been told something.

As he considered that, there came a tap on his door, and Hugh McAusland's voice.

"I just came to make sure that you are being properly looked after," he said, as he entered at Mahan's bidding. "Have you everything you want?"

"Everything, thanks."

Under his smile Mahan's glance was keen as he looked at the other, standing irresolutely just inside the door. He seemed a young man under stress, which is a thing that youth never understands. Of course, from his age, he must have shared in the stresses of the war. But that had been a general affair, while this, whatever it might be, was something private, locked in his own person. Mahan remembered times when he himself had been driven to seek comfort in unlikely quarters. As a rule it merely meant some one to listen to him.

"I have everything," he repeated, "except a disposition to sleep. Sit down and smoke. How long is it since you left the west?"

"Three weeks," Hugh answered, as he lit a cigaret and wandered uneasily about the room. "I feel like a fish out of water here."

"There are ways of becoming amphibious."

"But I don't know that I want to," Hugh objected, in the conservatism of his youth.

He took another turn, fingering at objects without seeing them. Mahan smoked quietly, certain that sooner or later the young fellow would talk.

"I don't want that money," Hugh burst out at last. "I never wanted to come here at all. All this means nothing to me. I had my own life out there and this is changing it all about."

"What had you planned for yourself?"

"I was starting out in civil engineering. I had just got my first job on a big power project up in the Cascades. I loved it."

There was pride in that announcement. One could imagine him, standing on the edge of some great gash in the earth, done up in gray cords, much leather, and all the cub engineer's consciousness of being virile and picturesque.

"I never wanted to come to this damn place—I merely came because of—things——"

Because of his mother, he meant. That was the reason for Father Sebastian's presence, too. This belated paternal recognition of Hugh was the final vindication of Mrs. McAusland. She, and not Peter McAusland's wealth, was the force which had drawn them both to Lakeholme.

Mahan let Hugh talk. Most of it was mere irritation and homesickness for the west, but the relief of speech was like pricking a blister. He was probably unconscious of how much poison he let out. At last he gathered himself for departure.

"Sorry to make a nuisance of myself but it is good to see one of my own kind of people. Thanks so much—good-night."

An engaging young man, and all the more so for being a trifle lost just then. From an open window Mahan looked out on the stretches of Lakeholme, graying under a rising moon. That pink and gold study remained with him as a somehow sinister memory. It must have been intended for Mrs. McAusland. A glowing hidden heart of the house it should have been, but for twenty-five years it had been empty of all save a brooding bitterness. A curious man, McAusland; and a queer squirming world, all heads and tails.

III.

IT was late before Mahan strolled along the terrace next morning. He had breakfasted in his room. Preparations were afoot for the day's event; decorators hanging flags along the avenue, a truck load of roses being brought in. Through a bay of leaded glass he saw McAusland and Hugh together in the study, and in a few moments they came out.

"Anything you need from the drug store, Mr. Mahan?" his host inquired. "I am sending Hugh on a little errand. The fact is—" he paused, glancing about in humorous caution—"but don't let Hobyn know it. Aspirin; I have a rotten headache and there's the luncheon to face. Hobyn hates aspirin and would make me lie down and perhaps countermand the whole affair. But you and Hugh won't give me away."

Hugh smiled mechanically. He never addressed his father except as "you," sometimes actually distorting his sentences to avoid a more intimate form. McAusland went gaily on.

"Where is Father Sebastian? I sent for him—O, there he is. Come, padre, I heard you wished to run into the town, and here is Hugh just going. A nice tete-a-tete drive for you both. A chance to confess your sins, Hugh. Don't be too hard on him, father. Remember we were all younger, once. Just the aspirin, my boy, and don't let Hobyn get wind of it."

He bustled them off with incurable good humor, seeming to see nothing strange in this enforced intimacy between his son and the man whom he himself had accused of being that son's father. His jokes kept one almost afraid of what he might say next. There seemed actual intent under that genial exuberance. And through it all persisted the sense of the unseen presence of the woman who had never entered that house. It was a relief when the car rolled away with that ill assorted pair.

"And you, Mr. Mahan, what will you do with yourself until the luncheon?" McAusland asked. "Ride—motor? Or Hobyn is looking for someone to go round the links with him. Montefiore, I suspect, is in his room practicing a speech for the day's occasion. My own little impromptu of stammering thanks is already typed and learned."

Mahan's usually pleasant grayness had a steady quality that morning. He knew the mood which was upon him, coolly aloof, intensely watchful, even though there seemed nothing to watch. He never invited that mood, but he never fought it when it came.

It was that, rather than his own choice, which answered, "I was planning to examine the exhibits in your gallery."

"A-ha," McAusland exclaimed, digging him in the ribs with a Rabelasian understanding. "Some of them are quite interesting—eh? Of course, I understand that your interest is purely scientific. It is remarkable what a number of unsuspected scientists those South Sea cases have discovered amongst my visitors."

Mahan was in no hurry; it was some time before he lounged into the gallery, and he was still there when Hugh returned and went through the mirrored alcove into his father's study. A moment later he came out again, looking vaguely up and down the long vista.

"Have you seen my—Mr. McAusland lately?" he asked.

Stress again, Mahan though, as he looked at the other. Probably that drive with Father Sebastian had been hard on rawed young nerves. Electric projects in the Cascades were scarcely an adequate preparatin ffr the peculiar little hells of a complicated society.

"Mr. McAusland was in his study a few moments ago," Mahan answered. "I heard him give orders for Father Sebastian to be called there as soon as he returned."

"Well, I put the dope on his desk," said Hugh. "He'll see it when he comes back."

He lingered, frowning unseeingly at the curiosities, his mind busy with its own private affairs. There was speech dammed up behind his lips, and in a moment their barrier gave way.

"I simply can't stand this place!" he burst out. "I have had my mind made up ever since that will business last night. I'll stay through this French shindig this morning, of course, but as soon as that is over I'll pack up and just tell the old man that I'm going back west."

"You will probably be more at home there," Mahan agreed.

"It isn't so much that. It is—somehow I can't quite believe all this."

"You mean?"

"Damned if I know what I mean," Hugh answered as he strode irritatedly away.

Mahan strolled from case to case, stopping long before each one. A little later Father Sebastian entered the gallery and paused at his side. From the study came the sound of a radio loud speaker dropping stock reports.

". . . Manganese preferred, hundred seven-eighths . . . United Textile, ninety-four a quarter . . ."

Father Sebastian's mouth angled bitterly as he listened.

"The voice of our modern god," he said. "There was a time when the commandments burst through on the thunders of Sinai. Now all that the lightning seems able to bring is the shibboleths of Mammon."

He passed on, leaving Mahan to the contemplation of the weirdest case of all. A strange contrast, those frank indecencies of barbarism displayed in that house, which was the last word of civilization.

A few moments later Father Sebastian came out again and passed quickly without speaking. A man pursued he looked as he flung away down the gallery's length.

Mahan waited a few moments longer, apparently engrossed in the specimens before him. Then, as if he had seen all that he wished of the McAusland curios, he walked away.

The day's event was at hand, and it was time to assume the more formal dress it demanded. As Mahan made himself ready a knock sounded on his door.

"Mr. Montefiore wishes your presence in the private study, sir."

Montefiore, not McAusland—but Mahan betrayed no surprise as he heard it.

Downstairs the huge hall, much like the foyer of a theater, was filled with flowers, flags, and groups of important looking men. Guests were arriving; out on the terraces were batteries of moving picture cameras, with news reporters vainly trying to look as if they were mere ordinary human beings.

A buzz of talk, tricolors and Stars and Stripes, all the excitement of a great affair; in a few moments the official envoy of France would be driving up to the doors. But nowhere was there any sign of a host.

IV.

THE entire house party was gathered in the study, Montefiore seated at the desk, with Hobyn beside him. On opposite sides of the room stood Father Sebastian and Hugh, and their positions gave the affair the appearance of a tribunal.

"Shut the door, please, Mr. Mahan," Montefiore croaked. "Are you aware that our host has been taken seriously ill?"

"Not seriously," Hobyn put in. "I got at him in time."

"I simply can't stand this place!"

"Legally seriously, since he has been poisoned," Montefiore explained.

"Indeed?" Mahan inquired.

"You hardly seem surprised."

That was practically an accusation, but Mahan merely nodded. Without invitation he pulled forward one of the pink and gold chairs and sat down.

"I am waiting to hear the circumstances."

"Poison taken in mistake—or, as the evidence indicates, actually given to him in place of aspirin," Hobyn expounded. "The original tablets had been emptied from the box and bichloride substituted."

"I tell you I know nothing of it," Hugh burst out. "I put the box on the desk there just as it came from the drug store and——"

Montefiore checked him with an authoritative hand.

"McAusland demands that we send for the police and make an immediate arrest."

"A natural feeling for any one with a stomach full of bichloride," Mahan returned. "And my part in the affair?"

"Any light that you can throw on the matter. Hugh admits buying the box of aspirin. Father Sebastian accompanied him on the errand and was the only one aware of it."

"Except myself," Mahan suggested.

"That is what makes you valuable as a witness."

"Exactly," Mahan smiled, as if from some hidden knowledge. "An impartial witness. And both Father Sebastian and Hugh were at different times alone here in the study, Hugh to deliver the package and the other after Hugh had laid it on the desk. I can witness that."

Hugh flung to the window, his fingers shredding again at the curtain whose destruction he had begun the evening before. Standing by the fireplace, the father turned paler at Mahan's words.

"An excellent witness," said Montefiore. "Mr. McAusland suggested that both these gentlemen have had private conversation with you, and that possibly they might have unconsciously revealed their states of mind to you."

"Again the impartial witness, a man to whom men talk," Mahan smiled again. "How fortunate that I am here. Last night Hugh came to my room, and he did reveal far more than he knew. His state of mind was a bitter one."

From the window Hugh shot him a smoldering glance, but Mahan went quietly on.

"And yesterday Father Sebastian informed me of his conviction that there is no Providence guiding the world and that the only thing to do is to confiscate wealth—by violence if necessary—and divert it to the poor."

"I still hold that belief," the father put in with hollow firmness.

"That's bolshevism," Hobyn pronounced, as if it were a new disease.

"Ah-ha!" Montefiore interjected. "Now let us consider the will leaving all to Hugh——"

"And I warned him that he'd have to wait several years," Hobyn remembered, with the satisfaction of one who sees things piling blackly up against another.

"Fifteen years, you said, and to a boy of twenty-five that seems a lifetime," Montefiore went on. "Then again there is the clause leaving all to Father Sebastian in case Hugh should die without issue—and a death for murder in the electric chair is about as legal a death as there is."

"You mean to suggest I substituted that poison so that Hugh should be suspected?" the Father groaned. "Good God, can such things be?"

Mahan cheerfully said, "Your case seems complete, Mr. Montefiore. At least you cannot fail to hit one of them if you make the charge broad enough. A hideous attempt by a son against his own father; or a still more hideous conspiracy by an ordrained priest against son and father both."

"We have evidence enough to justify an arrest at least," Montefiore agreed, and his hand went towards the buzzer on the desk.

"ONE moment, though," said Mahan. "There are some things that we have overlooked."

"What things?"

Mahan rose as if what he were about to say demanded motion. Hands in pockets, a half whimsical expression on his face, he paced slowly about the room. His prevalent pleasant grayness took on an almost luminous effect. He spoke as though thinking aloud.

"Angles of reflection, for one thing. Also the stresses of a bent rod. And then, again, our basket of snakes. The nearest head to the nearest tail, of course, and they always seem to fit so well."

Hobyn's mouth opened, but Montefiore was sharply before him. "This hardly seems relevant, Mr. Mahan."

"No? And yet it is joining the wrong head to the wrong tail that constitutes the real irrelevancy," Mahan answered. "Can you take an iron rod which is bent sharply in one direction and bend it as sharply in the other? And have you ever known McAusland to bend that iron thing he calls his mind? But if you merely turn the rod around, what then? The same rod, the same bend, but being turned around it seems to be bent in the other direction."

"Really, Mr. Mahan," Montefiore began, but the other waved him quietly aside.

"Now for the angles of reflection. Permit me to open the door. You see that mirror in the alcove which reflects the curio gallery, and especially the case of South Sea specimens? A device, that, of McAusland's for watching men when off their guard."

"If this is actually leading to something definite," rasped Montefiore, but again his impatience merely slid off Mahan's coolness.

"It is leading to angles of reflection. The laws of them are such that if you see a person reflected in a mirror, then that person can also see you reflected in the same glass? Have you ever noticed that? Sitting at the desk there, what do you see in that mirror in the passage? A slice of the gallery. And any one standing in that slice of the gallery and looking into the alcove sees the reflection of this study. And I myself spent more than an hour in that particular slice of the gallery this morning."

The atmosphere became vibrant as some tightly stretched string. Hugh and Father Sebastian glanced at each other, each in triumph, that now the truth of the other's actions was to be made known.

"Twenty-five years of bitterness," Mahan went on. "A rod which could not change its twist, but decided to turn round and look as if bent the other way. A splendid situation—a doctor, a lawyer, a priest, an heir, a will. Only the undertaker lacking. Add an important occasion and all that machinery of publicity out there. A subtle idea, the benefactor stricken down at the greatest moment of his life by either the son he had just acknowledged, or by the man whom he had once accused of being that boy's father. Whichever way it went it would go far to prove that accusation right and to bring discredit on the woman whom he was convinced had wrecked his life happiness."

"You mean——"

It was doubtful which of the four had spoken those words. All of them, probably, and it seemed as if none had breath to say more.

"It is not for nothing that truth is always shown with a mirror in her hand," Mahan replied. "If you will rake in those ashes in the fireplace, or have them chemically analyzed, you will find traces at least of the tablets from that aspirin box."

It was only Montefiore who was able to ask the next question. "Thrown there by whom?"

"There was only one snake in that basket after all," said Mahan, with added whimsy. "The nearest head really does belong to the nearest tail. Buzz joins up with poison. You will notice how it was arranged that there should be a physician in the house, and no doubt Dr. Hobyn found the proper antidotes conveniently handy in Mr. McAusland's medicine chest. For it was Peter McAusland himself who threw the aspirin into the fire and replaced it with the bichloride tablets, of which he then took two."

Hugh flung himself impulsively towards Mahan. Laying a hand on the young fellow's shoulder, Mahan went on.

"The impartial witness, so carefully provided, has given his evidence. Now, as the representative of your father, unfortunately taken ill, it is your duty to meet the French marshal and carry through the luncheon. After that you can do as you please. You have been acknowledged by your father, and the whole country will know of it."

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.

THIS is a magnificent month, with good books and good weather in abundance, and we are daily hearing more literary chatter than we can remember. And the books that people seem to be talking about are Michael Arlen's "The Green Hat"; "Wings," by Ethel M. Kelley; "The Innocents," by H. Kitchell Webster; Mrs. Sedgwick's "The Little French Girl," and some half dozen other headliners.

There is, moreover, a considerable to do over Edgar Lee Masters' "The New Spoon River." If it be not too presumptuous of us, we proclaim that the first "Spoon River" (which hit the world right on the nose about nine years ago) is the most amazing work ever achieved by an American poet. Compared to it, the writings of Whitman are but so many pamphlets. "The New Spoon River," much of which is of the same priceless stuff that distinguished the other one, gives a tremendous sweep of American life, as it is lived in the towns where people do not dress for dinner. It is a great book, and we believe that Edgar Lee Masters is a great man. If he lived in Moscow, there would be heroic statues of him in the public squares, and if he lived in England he would not be the laureate. We can recommend "The New Spoon River" to all sorts of readers and to those who do not read often. It tells all there is to tell about America, and it has all of life in its pages of epitaphs. Moreover, it is the easiest book to read that we have encountered in many seasons.

The Hotel Algonquin remains the Nouvelle Athene of America. We know of no place here or abroad where so many of the great names and faces of literatures, art, stage, and cinema hold forth at the festive luncheon hour. It is famous, of course, for the Algonquin Round Table, whereat such personages as Heywood Broun, Marc Connolly, George S. Kaufman, Robert Benchley, Alexander Woollcott, J. V. A. Weaver, and others convene at noon and in the evening after the theater. And lunching at the Algonquin one sees almost daily, when they are in town, Joseph Hergesheimer, Carl Van Vechten, Burton Rascoe, Henrik Van Loon, Ernest Boyd, Ben Hecht (who has become, after many reluctant years, a New Yorker), Horace Liveright, the publisher, Gertrude Atherton, Edna Ferber, Thyra Samter Winslow, and a couple of platoons of gents and ladies who write our books.

The other evening we went to the opening of a new club that George Jean Nathan, Vincent Astor, and other worthies have flashed upon the world. It is called the France et Angleterre club because it has its rooms in a German turn verein over near Second avenue; and it sets itself up to be the most frightfully amusing place this side of Budapest. No less personage than that merry man about town, that sprightly savant, that gay cosmopolite and critic, George Jean Nathan himself, was receiving the guests, and with a grand manner bidding them stack their coats and top hats upon the piano. And what with the African band and the champagne and swiss cheese sandwiches, and the frolicking about on the dance floor, and the presence of Lady Diana Manners and other notables, a good time was had by all—or almost all. Which reminded us that the droll Nathan is the proud author of a new little book anent the theater. It is called "Materia Critica," a title leaving us no small doubts that Dr. Nathan takes himself and his dramatic criticism quite seriously. And it is perhaps just as well that he takes himself seriously, for many of us don't.

Miss Edna Ferber, who, in spite of her established residence at 50 Central Park West, remains at heart a loyal Chicagoan, is one of the most triumphant figures of this age of typewriters. Her splendid novel, "So Big," has been sold a hundred and fifty thousand times, and her new play, "Minick" (made from one of her short stories), is a tremendous hit here. It has long been our boast that Edna Ferber is one of the really great persons of our day in American literature; nor do we whisper the word "literature." The truth about American life which she sees and writes, and the brilliance with which she writes it, have won trimmings of laurel for her Paris hats.

It Takes the Rough Stuff

By PAUL W. GALLICO

"Was going to go to Australia with her. Never see a silk hat. Get up in the morning. Ride all day. You know."
"Of course, I know," said Susette, icily.
"You want to live like a beast."

LORD REGINALD was waiting in the library when Susette Marshall descended the stairs. He wore trousers whose length and hang had been measured to a fraction of an inch. Not a line, not a crease showed about his dinner coat. He doubtless had a scheme of having himself melted and poured into it. He had a rather fine face, with clear blue eyes and good-humored mouth, but upon it rested an expression of ineffable boredom.

He was the young man that mamma had selected for Susette to marry.

Assuming Lord Reggie's angle of vision, and glancing upward, one saw a rather small but independent looking young lady with short bobbed blonde hair of that thick, soft, silky texture that lured fingers to muss it. The fact that no one ever did may be laid to a hauteur of bearing and glance that she inherited directly from mamma, whose blood was so blue it seriously interfered with her behaving like a human being.

She had pale violet eyes and a red splash of a mouth, and was extraordinarily pleasant to look upon. She wore a sea green frock and a long coat trimmed with chinchilla and a bright colored scarf, knotted at her throat. A small green hat fitted closely about her head. A small gold mesh bag dangled from white fingers as she carefully completed her descent, and upon her face, too, rested an expression of world weariness and complete ennui.

"Cheer ho," said Lord Reggie, with no exclamation mark at the end of it, and yawned politely behind a white glove.

"O, hullo," said Susette about the way she would have said, "O, I thought it was later."

"Theater?" inquired Lord Reggie.

"Seen everything," replied Susette, and looked right through Lord Reggie.

"Concert?" Lord Reggie was checking them off disinterestedly.

"Stuffy!"

"Bit of a supper and a dance?" He had been over this ground before.

"Stupid. Anyway, I danced all last night."

Lord Reggie elevated one calm eyebrow. "With that Johnny Carter johnny?"

"Reggie, I wish you wouldn't call him a johnny."

"But his name is Johnny, isn't it?" Reggie elevated the other eyebrow to meet its mate.

"Don't be annoying, Reggie! You know that I've asked you . . ."

"All right, all right," soothed Lord Reggie, and lowered his brows. "Don't fluff up. Go walking?"

Susette managed to conceal a yawn, but got a dimple in her cheek doing so. "O, I suppose so," she said.

"I say," said Lord Reggie, exhibiting the first spark of interest, "do you know you've got a new dimple?"

"Don't be silly," said Susette, wearily; "I was swallowing a yawn."

"O," concluded Lord Reggie. They went out into the mild, pleasant summer evening.

AND this was six months or so after mamma had been bitten with the desire to be the mother of a Lady spelled with a capital L. Mamma was a great little contriver, but she was never noted for finesse; otherwise, she might have let them alone a bit, on the chance that they might develop an honest affection for one another, both being fine healthy young specimens. Mamma's idea was to nag them into a real swell and fussy church wedding, with her own name figuring in the society columns as a successful mother and parent of a Lady whose husband's ancestors had been with William, or James, or Henry, or John, or some one—she must really look it up and see which one it was.

Susette had labeled Lord Reggie as "stunning and interesting" until mamma's arch insinuations caused her to veto him. Susette made a point of vetoing the things that mamma wanted her to do. This was mamma's fault. Susette, however, continued to go out with Lord Reggie because he was handsome to look at and—well—after all, there's no getting around it, a lord is a lord.

Thus they marched, side by side, down the broad boulevard, a handsome couple bored stiff with each other. For ten minutes they said no word to one another. Then Lord Reggie removed his hat, mopped seventeen small beads of perspiration from his brow with a linen handkerchief, and replaced his hat.

"Let's get married, Susette," he said, and blushed.

"I should say not!" replied Susette, startled into more vehemence than the occasion called for.

"Ha!" trumpeted Lord Reggie, startlingly. "Ripping! You are a sport now, aren't you? You might just as well have said yes. I did ask you, now, didn't I? You're a witness."

Susette looked at Lord Reggie curiously. The man actually appeared to be delighted. "What do you mean, Reggie, by 'I did ask you now'?"

"Well, what I mean to say is, after all, I did ask you, didn't I?" insisted Lord Reggie. "You know, in case any one should want to know."

Susette pursued her point doggedly and without animus. "In case who should want to know?"

"O, the mater, or any one," admitted Lord Reggie. "Though there's no reason you shouldn't know, now that we're friends right enough. It was right after that beastly whistle had sounded—you know, for all ashore that's going ashore—that the mater said, 'Reggie, darling, if you should—mind you, now—just if you should get chummy with one of those beautiful American girls with a lot of family and money, do promise me you'll ask her to become Lady Petherbridge. Heaven knows we need fresh blood in our line, and all that, and all the peerage is doing it. There's Sir Ronald; married that Chicago girl, and she's a perfect go at court. They say the Prince is really fond of her. And that unbearable old Duchess of Harbaugh has been putting on no end of dog because they polished up that old tumbledown Harbaugh Hall with the money Harold's wife brought over from New York. Now, do be a good boy, and promise mother you'll try.'

"Well, you see, I never dreamed I'd be getting chummy with any American girl, so I promised the mater, don't you know. Well, I did keep it, didn't I? She can't say I didn't."

SUSETTE began to laugh. She laughed wholeheartedly and unrestrainedly. It was rare that a Marshall laughed so that people turned around and smiled and laughed a little in sympathy.

Lord Reggie looked blank until Susette found her breath and explained.

"I suppose you know that mamma has been nagging me to marry you for the last two months," she said.

"O, dear, yes," agreed Lord Reggie; "I could see the old girl was egging you on all the time, kind of pushing us together, don't you know. That's why I was rather afraid to pop it, don't you see, because, after all, you might have wanted to please her, and said yes."

Susette stopped laughing abruptly and looked hurt.

"Yes, that would have been frightful, I suppose," she said. "I had no idea the thought was so horrible to you. I hope you haven't been suffering right along."

Lord Reggie began to perspire mildly. "O, come, Susette. I didn't mean it just like that. I mean you're just not the pally kind, you know. You're society and sweeping down the staircase in a stunning frock waving a fan, and bed until noon, and maids and clay packs and all that."

"Perfectly plain," said Susette. "You just mean I'm worthless."

"O, dash it all, no!" protested Lord Reggie, and mopped furiously. "I mean you're too good. Not my sort. I can't stick this lord business, Susette. Sort of the family disappointment. Frightfully bashed on a little girl in Charlot's company. Awfully good sort. Regular pal. Liked to rough it and all that. Was going to forget the stuffy title and go to Australia with her. Got a sheep ranch there. Live in the open. Never see a silk hat. Be a human being. Get up in the morning. Ride all day. Nurse the silly ba-bas. Make a go of something. You know."

"Of course, I know," said Susette, icily. "You want to live like a beast, with some little chorus girl for a companion."

"Exactly!" agreed Lord Reggie, enthusiastically. "Cook our own food. Nights when you're tired stretch out before an open fire. Wear dirty clothes. Never give a hoopy if old Lady Muttonchop is giving a garden party, or some ass or other is getting up a bazaar. Ride into the wind with rain on our faces. Undress and splash about in our own brook. Jolly, eh?"

"Disgusting," replied Susette. "Why don't you go to your chorus girl?"

"All off," said Lord Reggie. "Mater bought her. Filthy trick. Didn't think Winifred would do such a thing. Awful disappointed in her. She made the mater put up a good round sum—five thousand pounds—so there's a satisfaction."

"DO you mean to say you let your mother buy your . . . I mean buy off the girl you were in love with?" Susette's American blood prompted this.

"Not really," admitted Lord Reggie. "I never thought the mater would do such a thing. I didn't know anything about it until Winifred wrote me from Scotland. She said the mater had put it so sensibly, and had been so generous, don't you know? After all, the mater is awfully clever."

"Hmph!" announced Susette, "I don't think you're much of a man."

"Well, really now, Susette——" protested Lord Reggie.

"In fact," continued Susette, with the calm exploratory interest displayed by a small boy engaged in pulling legs off a fly, "I think you're perfectly spineless. You ought to do extraordinarily well nursing sheep."

Lord Reggie's neck went from pink to red. The color then spread languidly to his face.

"I say, Susette," he remarked, with a slight twinge of annoyance, "I don't know that you've done anything so remarkable in your twenty-four years on this silly planet. People who occupy glass——"

"Twenty-three!" snapped Susette. "And there are plenty of people who like me."

"That Johnny Carter johnny among others, I suppose. Football player."

Lord Reggie said "football player" the way one might have said "street cleaner" or "bartender."

Susette bristled. "He's not a clothes horse, anyway."

"O, I say, now, see here, Susette!"

"Yes," continued Susette, getting up steam, "a clothes horse. A very stupid clothes horse. I don't suppose you've ever done a useful thing in your life."

This was a weird one, in view of the fact that Lord Reggie had announced his intention of nursing ba-bas in a classic wilderness, but Susette was too angry to select her arrows.

Lord Reggie's neck suffused again. "O, really—as one parasite to another. . . ."

"How dare you call me a parasite?" answered Susette dramatically, who, had she only known it, had not had such an interesting promenade in months. "You . . . you . . ." She failed here. Susette's education had neglected suitable epithets to apply to an aggravating young man.

Lord Reggie's neck flush had reached his ears and brow.

"Certainly," he said, "as long as we're going to be frank with one another, let's all have a say. I suppose it's not your fault, but you've been raised to be a drag on a man. You never think of anything but spending money, and that on yourself."

Susette caught her breath sharply. "I could kill you," she announced.

"DON'T turn around! Go into that alley on the right there. Shut up if you want to keep on living." The voice that spoke these words, a most unpleasant one, came from directly behind them.

"Wha—what?" said Reggie.

Something prodded him in the back. Instinct told him what it was.

"Get into that alley, both of you, and shut up," repeated the voice.

The situation demands a bit of explanation.

For the first time since they had met, Susette and Lord Reggie were actually so interested in what each had to say to the other that they did not notice where they were walking. They had turned off the boulevard at South Wilson street, walked heatedly from Ninth avenue clear down to First, over the railroad tracks and up Mugger street into the bad lands where the gas tanks and murders were.

Going into Mugger street—a street lamp had flashed upon a diamond brooch that Susette was wearing and hit a seedy looking individual, loafing outside a speak-easy, right plumb in the eye.

The individual whistled softly through his teeth, and was joined immediately by two other hardened characters who emerged from within. The three took up the trail. They spoke little. There was little to be said. They were all men of action.

Susette looked anxiously at Lord Reggie. What . . . what's happening, Reggie?"

"Holdup," said Reggie tersely. "Don't know how we ever got over here in the slums. We'd better do what they say until I can get a look at them. I'll look after you. Be sharp."

They turned into the deserted alley. The three followed. Two of them toyed with automatic pistols. The third had large, greedy hands.

"Stick 'em up an' keep quiet, an' you won't get hurt—may be," suggested the first villain. Lord Reggie's hands went up slowly. Susette plucked off a ring and her brooch and dropped them down her bosom.

"Smart!" said the second villain with a gun. "Bill's a great guy for fishin', ain't you Bill? Get 'em, Bill."

Susette gave a little frightened cry and covered her throat with her hands. The man with the greedy fingers reached out. Then suddenly there was a little noise that sounded like "thuck!" and the man dropped to the ground from as neat a left hook to the point of the chin as you could desire.

"We're in for it, Susette. Get on the ground and stay there," said Lord Reggie, hurriedly, who gave a passing glance to the knuckles of his left hand, and dove for the two villains with guns. The Johnny Carter johnny would have admired the tackle.

THERE was no shooting. The two remaining villains, brought to earth, reversed their weapons and commenced to belabor Lord Reggie with the butts. Susette, who had obediently dropped to her knees, saw that Lord Reggie was having a tremendous time with the two. His neck was red, his collar was gone, there was fire in his eye, he flailed and thrashed and swatted and grunted, and used a lot of fearfully bad words that Susette would never have suspected him of knowing.

The recipient of the left hook suddenly sat up and rubbed his chin. Then he drew a blackjack from his pocket and prepared to join the battle. Susette, with an agility she never dreamed she possessed, lit on his back before he reached his feet and began to scratch vigorously at his face

"Ugh! agh!" gulped the villain, much annoyed, "take her off, one of you guys; she's killing me . . . umph—leggo me . . ."

"Good girl," panted Lord Reggie, "ducking a vicious swipe with a gun butt; "dig the beggar's eyes out. O, you will, you—there!" and once more there was a "thuck" and one of the gun villains bit the dust and stayed out.

Susette's villain, goaded to action, threw her off, turned on her, and planted his grimy fist under her eye, raising a gorgeous welt, and laying her quite low.

"Ha!" bellowed Lord Reggie, terribly, called the villain a worse name than Susette had ever heard before, and flattened him with what an expert would have called a perfectly timed right cross to the jaw.

The one remaining villain was in a slightly groggy condition, but as his senses returned, he applied them to reversing his pistol and aiming it at Lord Reggie, a little unsteadily, but dangerously enough.

"O, you coward!" screamed Susette, and called him one of the names Reggie was using. Somehow or other she found herself on her knees, and she hurled her mesh bag at him with all the strength she had left. The bag caught the villain squarely in the eyes and wrapped itself around his nose.

"O, ripping! Perfectly ripping!" panted Lord Reggie, and leaped to the attack. There was a final "thuck" and the last villain assumed a horizontal upon the cobblestones, and that battle was over.

"WHEW!" said Lord Reggie, examined his bleeding knuckles interestedly for a moment, and then tried to fasten his collar. He was surprised to see that Susette was sitting on the curb, weeping bitterly.

It dawned upon him that perhaps she had been hurt. Her right eye was a vivid purple. Most of the chinchilla trimming had been ripped from her coat, and hung in wisps. Her bright scarf had been torn off, and her green hat sat rakishly on one ear. Her hair was disheveled into an aureole of fuzz that stood out wildly in the manner of the Fiji islander. The corners of her mouth drooped so that they were very frog.

Lord Reggie dropped on to his knees by her side. "Susette, you brave little thing," he said. "You're hurt badly. . . . I must do something."

Susette shook her head and wailed: "O, dear. . . . O, dear. . . . O, dear. . . ."

Lord Reggie placed his mighty left arm about Susette, and leaned the wild little head over on to his shoulder. "There,there, old girl," he soothed. "It's all over. You were splendid. Saved my life. Never forget it. Regular fellow."

"AAAAAAAaaaaaaaaah!" howled Susette in a minor key, "I w-want t-to be a pal, a-nd go to Australia and b-bathe in a brook and nurse silly ba-bas."

"Why, Susette, you darling," he fumbled, "you're the greatest little pal."

"No!" wept Susette, "I'd be a drag on a man. And you'll go off to Australia and marry a chorus girl, and ride in the wind."

"B-b-but I thought you were fond of that Johnny Carter johnny," said Lord Reggie. . . . "I . . . you said I was just a clothes horse."

"Johnny Carter johnny be damned," said Susette, and glorified in the knowledge that she could have used worse swear words if she felt like it. "I want you, and a sheep ranch, and dirty clothes. You're a man, Reggie."

There was no denying that. He kissed Susette ferociously and thoroughly as they sat on the curb in the shadowy alley with only the still unconscious forms of the three villains as witnesses.

"I-I didn't know English lords could fight," Susette said, admiringly.

"Went in for that sort of thing at Oxford," admitted Lord Reggie. "Rather liked it. I say, the beggars haven't budged yet."

Back in Susette's brain stirred a phrase she had once read in a newspaper and which she had remembered because it was so bizarre. She applied it proudly. "When you sock 'em, they stay socked," she announced, and hugged Lord Reggie.

THERE was but one regret. In the cab that bore them away from the scene of combat, Susette suddenly remembered.

"O, dear, Reggie," she said suddenly, "mother!"

"Hello, I'd forgotten about the old girl," said Lord Reggie. "Well, she'll have her wish."

"That's the trouble," replied Susette. "She was almost the cause of my losing you. I wish to annoy her."

"I say," said Lord Reggie, "she wants to have one of those stuffy affairs, doesn't she, with church and bishops and people and all that? Well, we'll jolly well get married tonight in private the way it should be done. Nobody's business but ours. I'll renounce the silly title tomorrow morning, and we'll sail for Australia in the afternoon. There."

"O, Reggie," said Susette.

OUT OF THE PAGES of The Chicago Tribune have come a great legion of grand and humble folk, heroes and heroines, men cowardly and men courageous, beautiful women, black villains and genial crooks, wise men and fools. The scenes have been in London and Paris and the South Sea islands; or a little American village; or Chicago; the sea and the African jungle; strange habitations half a world away; or just ordinary places in our own square.

BOOK publishers, who are always looking for good things, refused many fresh manuscripts to publish the serials that had run first in The Chicago Tribune. There are 21 books of Blue Ribbon fiction now on exhibition in the window of The Tribune on Madison street, at Dearborn.

THE TRIBUNE, in supplying this excellent fiction, not only saved its readers about $40, which is approximately the cost of the books, but it gave them the opportunity to read the stories first. It set a precedent for newspapers of the world in securing the best modern fiction money can buy. No price is too high, providing the story is worth the money. One short story cost The Tribune $3,500. And it went to the reader as a small part of his Sunday Tribune.

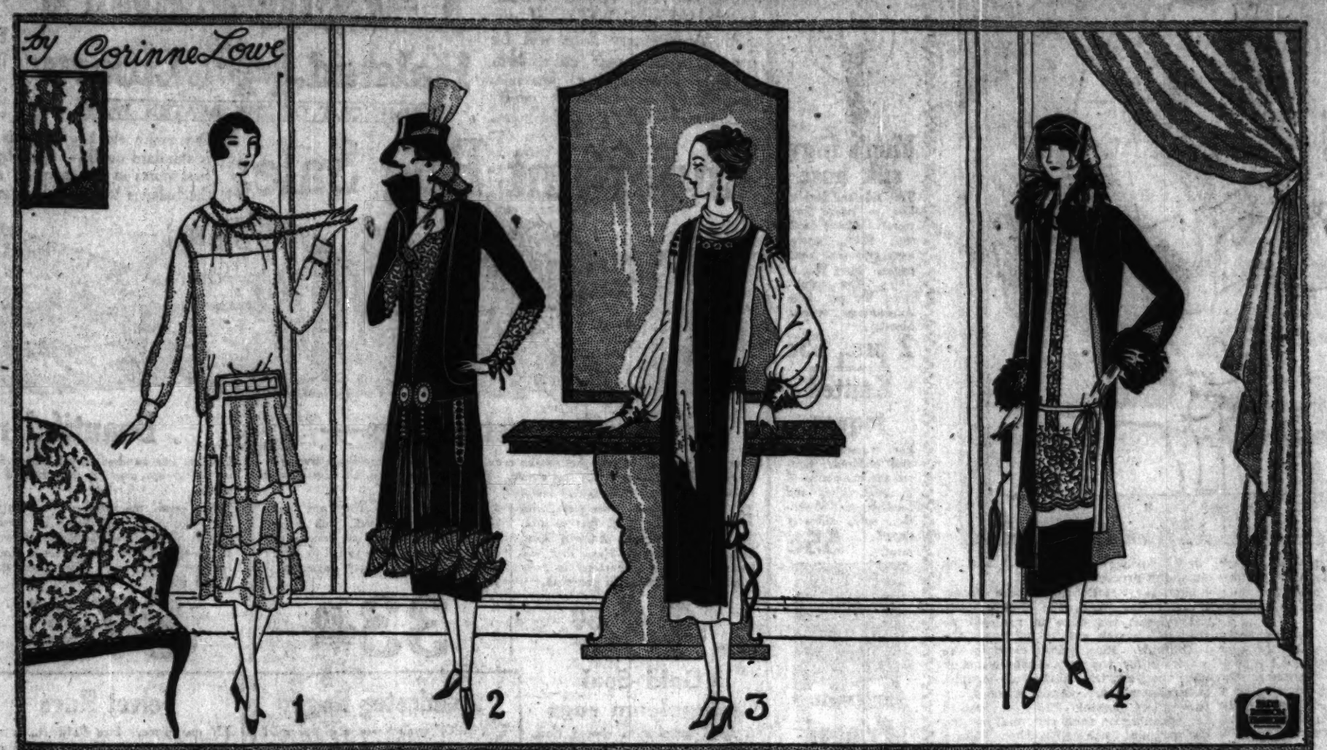
Woman's Section

SOME DON'TS FOR THE WOMAN NO LONGER SLENDER

by Corinne Lowe



NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—The other day I saw a friend of mine try on one of these frocks with the full knee flounce. She is a short, thick-set woman, and if she had been my enemy instead of my friend I should certainly have advised her to take the dress. As it was, I cried from the depths of a full heart, "Stop! Desist—unless you want to look like a mushroom with no room at the top."

The fact of it is that the season is full of pitfalls for the woman of the physique I have mentioned. The exaggeratedly flaring hem of either tunic or skirt is not becoming to her, and it does not matter whether that flare be produced by godets, plaits, or a circular cut. Such fullness detracts from height, and makes the short stocky woman look square. And, while not so calamitous for the sister whose surplus weight is modified by surplus height, it certainly cannot be considered the most fortunate choice even for her.

Fortunately, however, the flare is not compulsory. Indeed, even those women who are not forced to it, often retain the simple straight line unbroken by a single bit of fullness. And certainly those of us who have not taken rubber corsets, saccharine, and lettuce leaves seriously enough should cling to this line stoically. For nothing ever has been or ever will be designed for the heavy figure so benevolent as the straight, rather loose garment falling from shoulder to hem and girdled at the hips.

I am showing at the right of this page an afternoon model which, to tamper with a widely known advertisement, four out of five over forty ought to get. Of course, I do not mean that this costume should be invariable, but I do suggest it by way of general guidance. In the first place, it represents the straight line undiverted by any of this present impulse towards godets and circular cuts. In the second place, it is black, and the fact that this is always the wisest selection for the woman of surplus weight coincides with a passion for this tone which is now raised to its highest peak. In both separate coats and ensemble costumes we find its vogue established by perhaps three-fourths of the fashionable women of New York.

When I say that this model is admirable for the stout woman, I do not imply that it has any corresponding drawbacks for the slender one. Quite the contrary. It is the sort of conservative costume which, although reflecting the spirit of the latest mode, does not throw away all other considerations. And it is quite as smart for the slim as for the stout.

Yes, of course it is an ensemble costume! For I am showing today a group of afternoon models, and here the ensemble never gets bored repeating itself. The fact of it is that if I were psycho-analyzing autumn fashions, I should pronounce them suffering from a severe case of the family complex. Coats and frocks are dependent on each other and, while they may not be of the same material—often, indeed, it is otherwise—they show in color and trimming-touches the marks of the good old tribal feeling.

You may take this right hand ensemble costume of black broadcloth, of velvet, velveteen, satin, or one of the ribbed silks. You may make it also of kasha. For all of these represent fashionable choices in this field of apparel. In any case, the tunic will be of ivory crepe satin embroidered in milk glass beads, and the fur on the coat will be of black fox. In this model, which was sketched from a broadcloth original, diamond shaped insets of black satin band the coat.

Of course, we indulge in black almost as much as if there were a constitutional amendment forbidding us to wear it. But the ensemble model does not have to be—no, really it doesn't. All the brown and beige tones are good; so is gray, and, as for colors, we find a constant emphasis on the Burgundy red brewed this year by Ghannel; also, shutter and olive greens.

Very often the ensemble model comprehends a tunic—usually of crepe—which tends to be of equal length with the coat and here in this garment suppressed desires for color find an outlet. Sometimes you find the tunic made of red crepe, for it will be remembered that the combination of black and red is one of the smartest of the season and one reflected, not only by frocks and coats but by millinery as well. As regards the latter, one sees constantly hats of black velvet or felt set off by some dash of red. Then for the tunic we frequently encounter rich metal cloths, always stunning in conjunction with black. Or perhaps the tunic will trace a rich embroidery of metallic thread over the crepe background.

ANOTHER VIEW OF TODAY'S FIGURES.

This under-structure is quite as susceptible to fur as is the coat that goes with it. Occasionally both outer and inner garments are banded with some pelt, in which case the tunic drops its band below that of the jacket. However, the tendency is towards single treatment, so that when fur is administered to the tunic the coat is absolved and vice versa.

I have said that the alliance of black with red is impressive. But all of us do not like red and we are, therefore, comforted to hear of the present inclination toward lightening our somber hue with a bit of royal blue. Lanvin has sponsored this latter combination in the frock second from the right, a delightful creation which suspends back and front panels of black velvet over a foundation of royal blue chiffon. There is much shirring going on about the sleeves and at the raised waist line, and the costume would be incomplete without its scarf of matching chiffon wound closely about the throat.

This frock gains instant attention because of the sleeves, the new balloon type that Lanvin has launched this year. These sleeves are repeated in the coat designed to accompany our illustrated frock—a stunning, straight line black velvet affair with insets of royal blue showing beneath a cut-out design on the sleeves and down the front. And before I depart from the subject of sleeves let me say that the tendency of sleeves in afternoon gowns is to be—sleeves. Most models disregard the short lengths in favor of some version of the long model—fitted, balloon, peasant, or bishop.

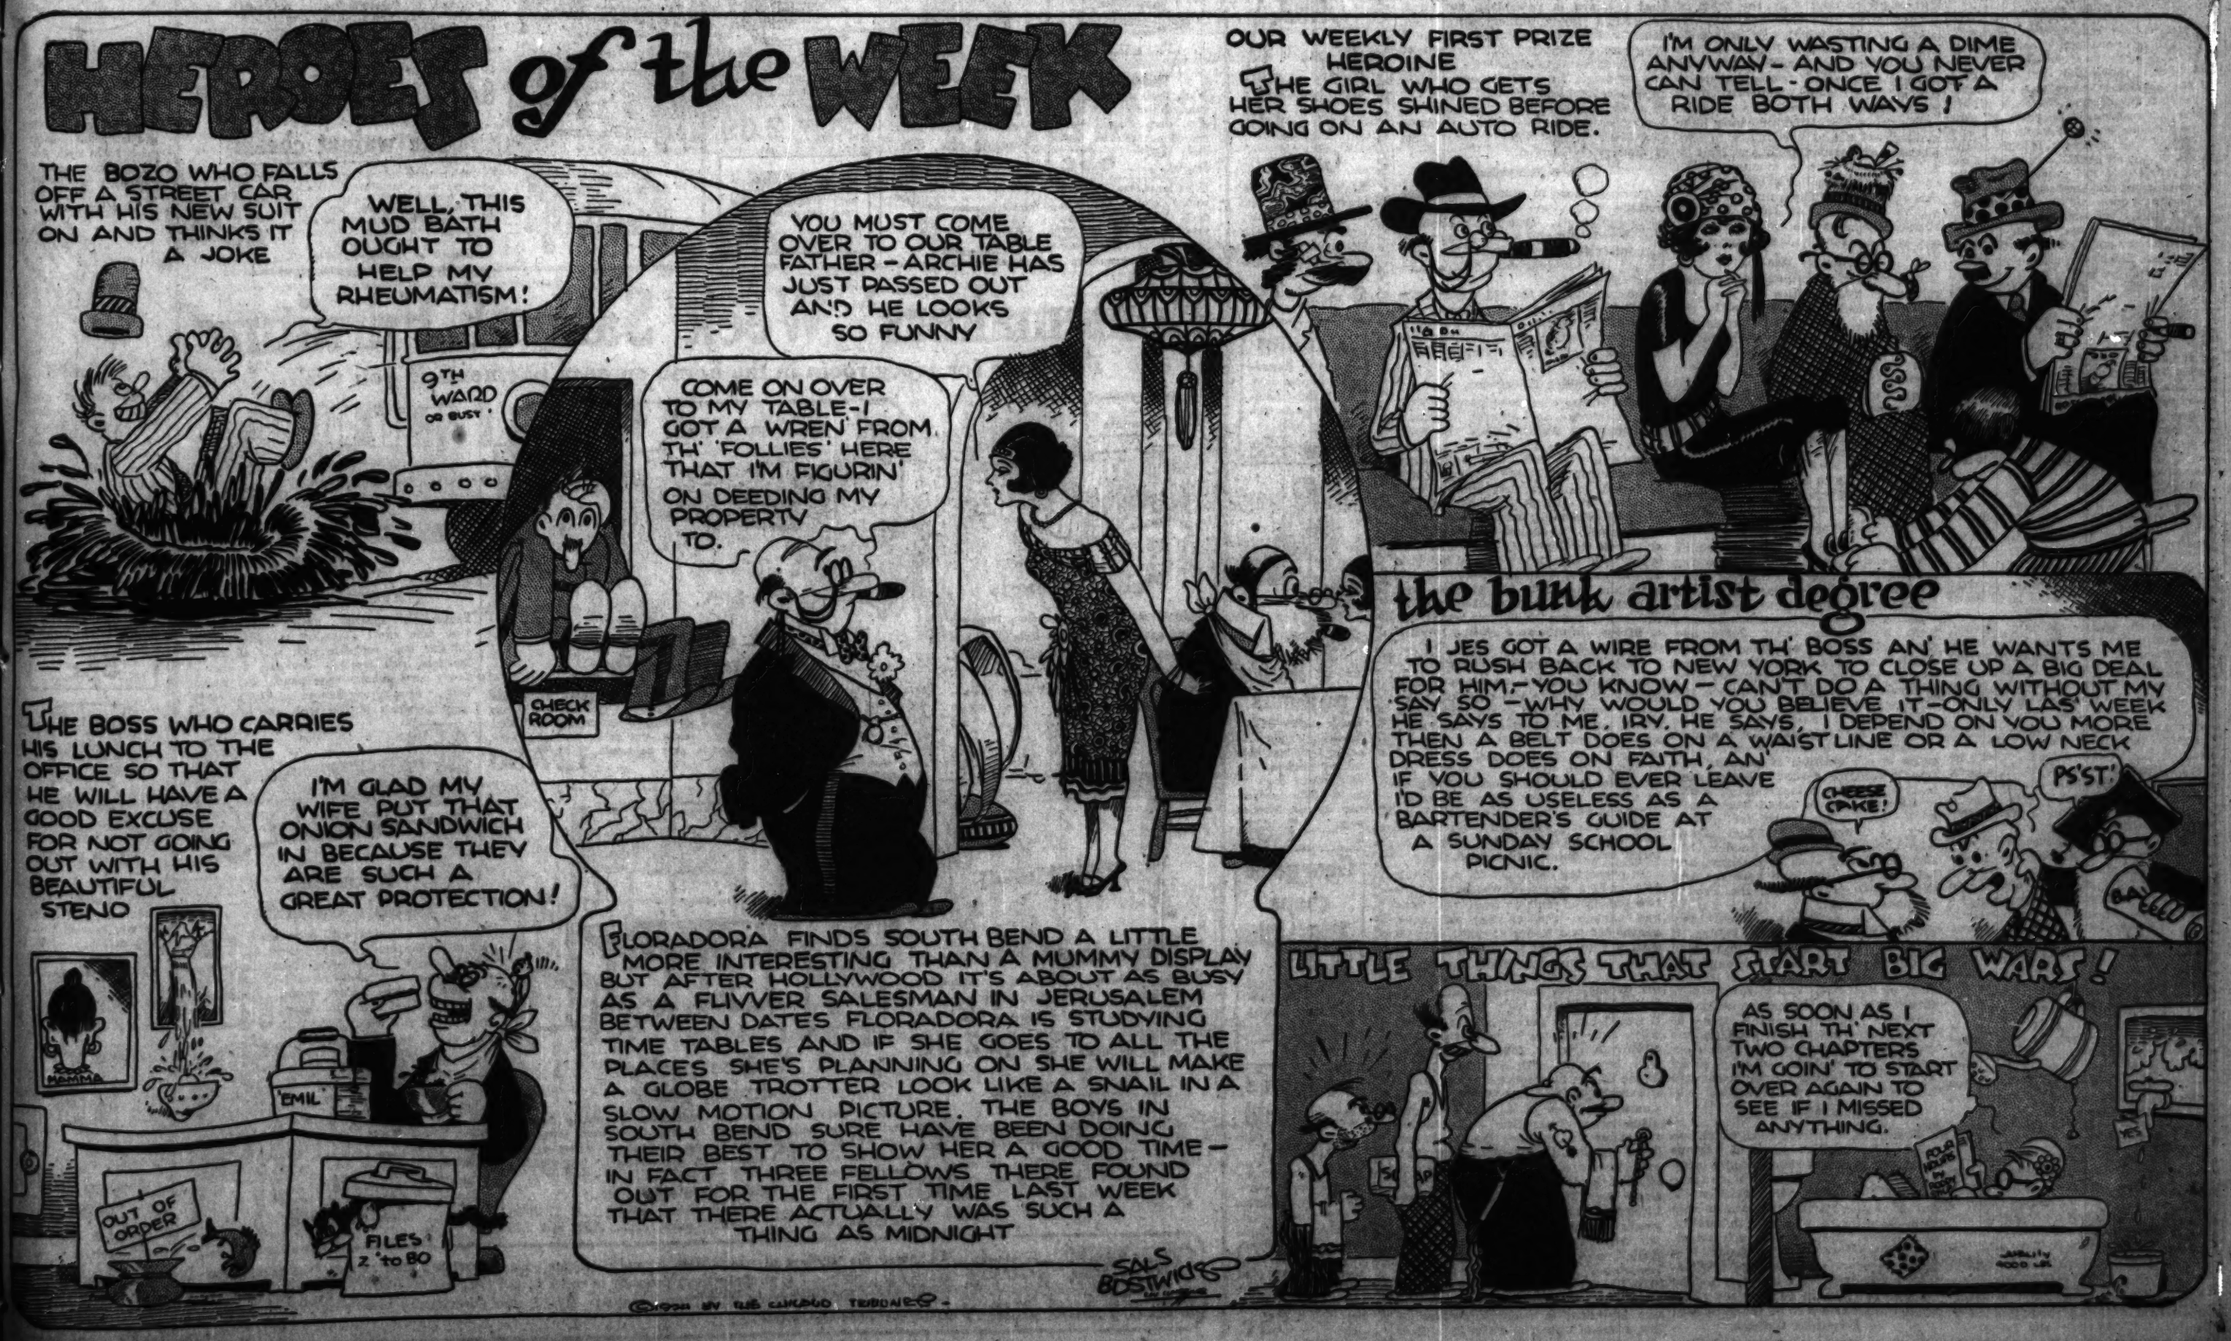
Here is a model which, in spite of the long slim line, is not to be lightly undertaken by the heavy sister among us. It is, like all Lanvin's creations, too youthful in spirit for any save the slender past-thirty type. Also, let me say that I have seldom seen a stocky woman, particularly if she have a short neck, come off well at the hands of scarfs. They give too much sense of bulk, and their fugitive folds are far from bestowing slimness on her who has not got it. On the other hand, many types of high collars are becoming to the woman who says, "And just think, I weighed only a hundred and eighteen when I was married."

The model that comes next has a more universal application. For a tall woman who weighs a little more than she likes to admit—or even for one of five feet six—this frock from Agnes would be exceedingly good. For the seams of the corsage extending back and front tend to break up the bulk of appearance and, although the tunic flares slightly, it does not do so enough to hurt. And, by the way, the seams cavorting about this bodice are significant of the season. There is any amount of this sort of treatment, and the seams have license to go any direction they want, to curve any way they want, and to neglect one side entirely.

This frock is made in black bengaline. The slender woman may choose for it, of course, such tones as red or green. But she will retain the fan shaped and fringed sections of ribbon which border the tunic and cover the outside of the high collar. Also, she will not likely discard the vestee and sleeve sections of cream lace. Ornamental buckles and matching tassels mark the front closing and the buttons used on the sleeve are of jet. The collar may be worn either closed or open.

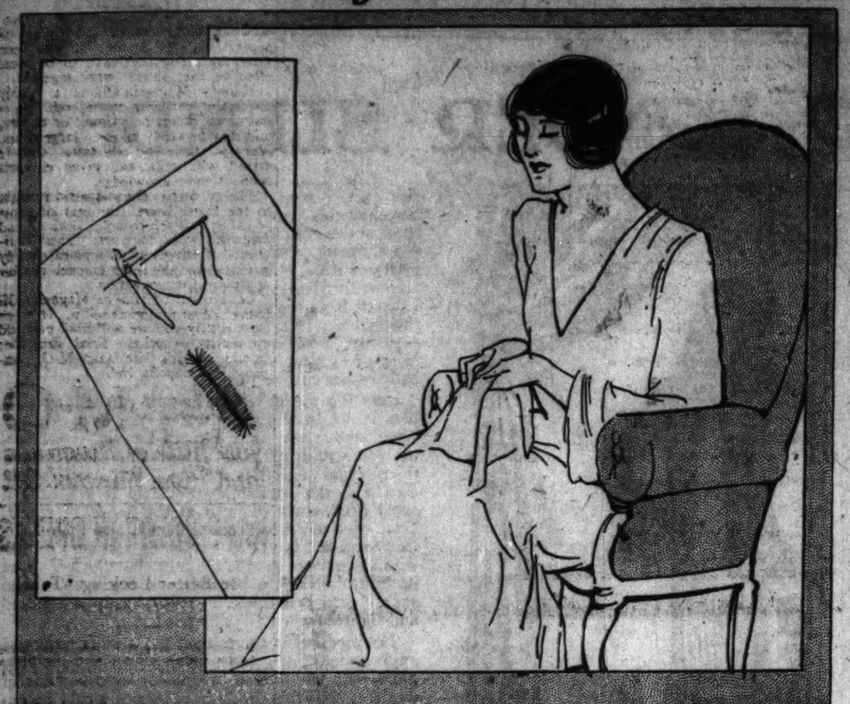
The hat worn with this costume might be equally recommended to many stoutish women, for, although hats are too individual to prescribe offhand, it may be accepted as a general rule that the extremely wide brimmed hat is not becoming to the short stout woman—certainly not if her throat also be short. Neither, on the other hand, does the narrow brim do the right thing by the round face. The solution should be found in a moderate brim flavored to taste or else in a draped turban which frames the face in exactly the right way. It goes without saying that the high crown, by its increased emphasis on height, should be welcomed by many women whose slenderness is a thing of the past.

One last word concerning the left hand model. Here in this frock from Lucien Lelong, so delightful for the slender type, we find a succession of fulled tiers that should be avoided by all who want to look thinner than they really are.



Practical and Fancy Needlework

By CLOTILDE



What is your sewing problem? Do you have trouble in following a pattern? Do you find difficulty in making a skirt hang evenly or making a sleeve that doesn't twist? If there is anything you would like to know about these or other problems of needlework write to Clotilde, The Tribune, Chicago, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope if a personal reply is desired.

BUTTONHOLE IDEAS.

SO many dresses button down the front part way or the entire length that it may not come amiss to make some suggestions about making buttonholes.

If you are not accustomed to making buttonholes, it will be wise to practice on cloth that works easily (does not ravel), folding it double and basting around the edges to keep it together. The distance a buttonhole is cut from the edge of a hem depends on the garment, but one should never be nearer than one-quarter of an inch. In shirt waists and men's shirts they are cut lengthwise in the middle of the plant and are worked around each end. Buttonholes that are cut horizontally to the hem are generally barred across the inside end.

If a button is flat, the buttonhole should measure one-eighth of an inch more than the diameter of the button; if it is dome shaped it will need to be a little longer. A good way is to use a pair of scissors with a set screw and try on a scrap of cloth. A buttonhole, if cut too long, does not stay fastened well, and it is apt to pull out in time if cut too short.

The slit should be cut perfectly straight to a thread on the warp or woof, as the case may be, and the position of each buttonhole marked on the garment before cutting any. Use a sharp pencil or a piece of French chalk that has been well sharpened to mark each hole, and cut exactly on the marks. If materials fray, it is a good idea first to overcast around the edge from the wrong side, taking tiny stitches.

The stitch is worked from right to left, beginning at the end farthest from the edge. Take the two threads at the eye of the needle and bring them toward you at the right of the needle, and under the point from you, drawing the needle through and making a knot or purl at the tip edge of the slit. Continue in this way, keeping the stitches an even depth and perhaps one thread of the material as the width between them, making the stitches lie flat.

If the thread should break or prove too short, put the needle through the slit to the wrong side and fasten. After threading the needle again insert it in the side of the last stitch, drawing the thread up through the last knot or purl, and proceed as before.

On heavy cloth, and where shank buttons are used, the end of the slit nearest the edge is rounded so that the button will lie flatly in the buttonhole. First stitch close to the marking for the buttonhole on each side, then cut the marked place, and, taking some sharp pointed scissors, cut the tiniest possible clip just beyond the stitching on each side, making the cut diagonal to the slit. Then make a third clip directly in front of the front end of the slit. Around this little place cut from one end to the other, and be sure not to cut too deep. A buttonhole punch is fine for this, but a little practice will make it possible to do it without.

Overcast the buttonhole on the wrong side and then, before working the buttonhole on the right side, thread an extra needle, and have the twist double. Insert the needle in the cloth at the end where you are to start working, bringing it to the right side and at just the depth of the buttonhole stitch below the slit. Put the needle through again from the right to the wrong side, at the opposite end of the slit, and let it hang while working. This double thread makes a bar to work the buttonhole stitch over and strengthens the hole.

QUINCES.

THE quince and the pomegranate are as ancient as Tyre and Sidon and as biblical as Babylon. It is even surmised that the apple of the garden of Eden was a quince, a Persian quince, and therefore highly edible. The botanical name of the quince comes from the name of a city in Crete, and as Crete is one of the lands of Greek myths, we should expect the quince to be associated with those ancient fascinations which center around Venus and all the other goddesses who, if as human as sometimes represented, perhaps made quince marmalade or at any rate used quince perfumes. It is even claimed that the quince was dedicated to Venus and thus became an emblem of love and happiness.

The Greeks used the quince in decorating temples, and it is said that it was the chosen ornament of statues of Hymen. [You who are looking for something uniquely symbolical for wedding suppers or breakfasts or luncheons should make your quince jellies, marmalades, etc., now.] The fact has not been hereby verified, but it is undoubtedly to be found in Plutarch, that the great and wise Solon, law giver of ancient Greece, enacted a law that this fruit should be invariably eaten by a newly wedded pair before they could assume the matrimonial estate. Homer has described a quince garden.

Subject of Poets.

In a book on the quince the description of its uses in Greece is followed by the following paragraph:

"From the classic plains of Greece, this golden fruit, in genial fellowship with literature and the arts, traveled into Italy, where Virgil, the prince of Latin poets, threw over its own inherent charms the rhythmic spell of his enchanting lays. One of the magic effusions of his genius appears in the beautiful lament of the shepherd Damon, in the VIIIth. eclogue, where he honors the quince by placing it among the select exponents of a higher order of nature, hypothetically conceived to illustrate the irremediable determination of the lover's despair."

All this seems a bit high flown, but it cements the idea that the quince is connected with love, as it is also extolled as a promoter of health and beauty. It has been credited with being the golden apple of the Hesperides. The elder Pliny wrote "enchanting panpgyrics" about it, and it seems to have been cultivated in profusion about Italy both for ornamental and useful intents."

Quince as Perfume.

A modern Italian horticulturist is authority for the fact that the peasantry in some parts of southern Europe prize the quince—undoubtedly the fully and tree ripened fruit—for perfuming their stores of linen, and that in yet warmer lands it is found as gratifying to the palate as to the senses.

And the writer, quoting this authority, says: "A recent traveler in Persia, after speaking of its use as a dessert, says it is yearly forwarded as presents to Bagdad, where the highly perfumed odor is found so powerful that if there be but a single quince in a caravan no one who accompanies it can remain unconscious of its presence."

Jewish and Mohammedan Quince.

It is said that the rabbinical traditions of the Jews make the quince the most ancient of all fruits, and that it was both because of its beauty and delightful fragrance that it tempted Eve. As to its being the oldest fruit it probably has to share that honor with the pomegranate. At any rate, it is said the quince grows in high perfection through Palestine and the surrounding countries, and that the fruit of Hebron is so mild that one may eat it out of hand, which one cannot do with the quinces our Pilgrim fathers early brought to America, but very likely the Spaniards brought them to this continent some hundred or more years earlier.

The Jews and Mohammedans have made great use of the quince in confections, and undoubtedly the fruit in Asia was of a type to encourage such use. The "Horticulturist" of 1849, has this statement: "The quince of Persia attains a weight of fifty or sixty ounces; ripens on the tree or in store, and can be eaten like a soft ripe pear."

Quince for Health.

Downing, in describing the quince, mentioned five varieties and says, "It was even more highly esteemed by the Greeks and Romans, for preserving than by us. 'Quinces,' says Columella, 'not only yield pleasure but health.' The English have believed quince preparations good for asthma, and it has a place in the old materia medica for various reasons, while everybody knows why its seeds have been used in beauty culture as well as the quince tree in landscape adorning. In fact, the statement seems exceptionally true that 'it seems to have travelled with the march of civilization, and been celebrated in song as in mythology.'"

Names of the Quince.

In a book for children, describing fruits and plants, is the following statement: "The Portuguese used quinces for making marmalade, and marmalade is simply the Portuguese word for quince." The author refrains from giving the exact Portuguese word which is "marmelo," "from which," says another author, "comes our marmalade, a most valuable form of preserving the Portugal quince, one of the best quality."

The French name is given as "coing" and "coignasier," also spelled "coignassier," meaning a corner, because of the old idea of planting this tree in a fence corner. Quince marmalade is made extensively in southern France, but is called "cotignac" from the Italian name for quince, which is "cotogno." This fact tells us who know a bit of early modern history something most interesting, and helps to settle, too, who were the first great cooks from whom the French learned their art.

The Dutch, calling the quince "kivepeer," and the Germans, calling it "quitte" and "quittenbaum," both cultivate the quince extensively. "Quitt" in German means quit in English, so we may make entertaining guesses about the German name for the quince. "Baum" means tree, of course, but it seems that the Germans sometimes call the quince "quittenapfel." They make a confection called by a name meaning quince bread and have other ways of preserving it.

Quince Marmalades.

To makers of marmalades, which are really like English jams of various sorts, the fact that this preserve originated in Portugal ought to have some interest. Among our varieties of quince is the Portugal, and it is said to be superior to all others in quality, as it is less harsh, stews much better, and is altogether milder in flavor. This ought to concern us, as does the fact that many quinces really too unripe to be good come to our market. The apple quince seems to be the main sort

In Preparing Quinces.

Keep a square of paper towelling or a paper napkin right by you when preparing quinces, and rub off the knife with it frequently. The fruit will be nicer, a quince juice more perfect, and the hands in a much better condition when this is done than when it is neglected. Quinces are so hard that a board is needed to cut them on. After slicing quinces, drop them immediately into the water in which they are to be cooked. When jelly alone is to be made of the whole quince, rub off down, wash, and then cut it in thin slices, skin, core and all. Cores in any case should always be inspected, and if not perfectly healthy rejected. The fruit covered with water is best if moderately cooked.

Quince Marmalade.

There is more to quince marmalade making than the simplicity of the recipes suggests. It is just the cooked and sieved pulp and sugar presumably and one-third sweet apple may be used, but, O, the differences in quince marmalades!

found because, as the old writer says, the Portugal is a "shy bearer," although "for marmalade and baking it is much esteemed, as its flesh turns a fine purple or deep crimson when cooked."

Quince Preserves.

Four quarts of quince pared, cored, and quartered; two quarts of sugar, one quart of water. Cook the fruit first in the water, then skim it out and drain and with the water and sugar make a sirup. If there is not a quart of liquid, dilute to that amount, stir sugar in it until it is dissolved, and boil with skimming for fifteen or twenty minutes. Put cooked quince in sirup and cook for about half an hour. It is best to divide the sirup and put half of the cooked quinces in half of the sirup and so cook in two batches. Seal in running over full sterilized cans, or less and process in boiling water ten or fifteen minutes as a sealing precaution.

Quince Jelly.

In making quince preserves or conserves, we have to rub the skin clean before washing the fruit, and when this is pared off, it and all clean cor and all imperfect fruit may be used for jelly, or we may use the wate in which the quince is cooked ins for other purposes, perhaps finished in a sirup of sugar and plain water. Since the water may not be sufficiently acid to make good jelly, no matter how obtained, apples are often combined with quinces in jelly making.

In preparing definitely for a jellying juice, add a quart of water to every two quarts of fruit or fruit and cores and parings, put on fire and cook gently for two hours or until fruit is soft, if whole fruit is used. Strain the whole, measure the juice, and try a little with less than measure for measure of sugar to determine how much is needed. If the fruit was too ripe, it would not be acid enough for good jelly, but crab apple juice might be added. A corcky fruit makes poor jelly, but when with good material it is one of the handsomest jellies made, worth the trouble of cooking it all in small quantities of as small as one glass at a time. Stir and dissolve the sugar in the juice before placing it on the fire, then boil up and skim and lower fire. Ten minutes is about all that is needed for the cooking in small quantities, while in large quantities the time may be prolonged. A small quantity of the juice will often jell when the same juice might not when cooked long in large quantities. Remember how suitable it is for a bridal party, and do your best. Pour it into glasses that are not only hot but dry—heat in oven to sterilize. A few drops of unsterile water in a glass may make jelly inferior.

MOLES AND WARTS

by Antoinette Donnelly

Let the "Beauty-Spots" Alone Unless the Doctor Advises Their Removal

IF you have a mole on the neck you'll have money by the peck. If you have a mole near the bottom of the nostril you will be very lucky. On the eyebrow, early and happy marriage.

If you are superstitious the above may help you to let the mole lie unmolested. Physicians warn us to look upon every little mole of dark brown color as a potential trouble maker. The less it is disturbed the less likely to be heard from.

Almost every human being can brag of one mole, at least, worn concealed or openly. The shades vary from a pale yellow to a jet black. The danger, it appears, ranges in seriousness as the color deepens.

So long as they have no disfiguring effect you are warned to leave them alone. In fact, there are individuals to whom they give a slight distinguishing mark, and if placed at the correct angle upon the cheek they may serve as decoratively as a beauty patch, if you can get yourself into that frame of mind.

Most Date from Birth.

With rare exceptions, moles are wished upon us at birth. Occasionally they make their appearance later. They have no useful purpose so far discovered. Nor are they particularly destructive unless you irritate them or try to eject them from your premises without skilled medical aid.

In ancient days birthmarks were looked upon as imprints of an evil spirit or a good fairy. Vile concoctions were prepared by the magii to dispel the evil consequences. To astrologers of the middle ages is credited the dubious discovery that moles and blemishes were due to a supernatural action of the moon and stars upon the skin. Character reading, according to the position of the mole upon the face or body, was born of that superstitious age.

Some women still favor the theory that birthmarks are due to emotional impressions, fright, worry, anxiety, or some queer quirk of mind during pregnancy. These theories are simply laughed at by the physician. However, scientists have not proved exactly why and how they occur.

They offer certain explanations. One is that "in the complex process of growth and development of the skin of the embryo a certain group of cells become snared off from the rest, continue to grow, and produce these blemishes." Others believe that injuries to the fetus as it grows in the womb are responsible. How to prevent them has not been discovered.

Moles, once present, usually remain stationary and increase in size only if irritated.

Origin of Color Disputed.

Every pigmented mole, yellow, brown, or black, represents an increased amount of pigment called melanin in that particular spot. Melanin it is that gives color to the hair, the choiroid coat of the eye, and the deeper layers of the skin. The skin of the Negro contains excessive amounts of this pigment.

"The exact origin of melanin," says Dr. Norman Tobias, skin specialist, "is a disputed question. Its composition is complex, and among other things it consists of carbon, hydrogen, oxygen, and sulphur. These ingredients in proper combination and under the right conditions are very explosive. The fact is, therefore, that every pigmented mole represents a potential powder plant. A stimulus in the form of local injury or irritation is the torch that blows up the works and as a result cancerous growths called melonomas are produced. These tumors have a tendency to spread to all parts of the body and to produce death."

However, one need not worry unduly about cancerous growths, since Dr. Tobias agrees that if all pigmented moles were cancerous the race would have been wiped out long ago.

Only a small percentage of them become malignant or cancerous. Nevertheless, in the skin specialist's opinion all pigmented growths should be watched, especially by those past middle age.

The dangerous moles are the jet black ones. They should be protected against irritation by corsets, garters, collars, shoes, and other garments.

Signs of Danger.

The signs to warn of danger in a pigmented mole are: A gradual increase in the size of the growth; a deepening or spreading of the color; beginning ulceration; pain or soreness in the mole. The occurrence of any of these signs demands a visit to the physician.

"Even then," says Dr. Tobias, "it may be too late, as, in rare instances, the cancer may spread before any marked change is apparent to the naked eye."

I get a great many inquiries from readers asking about the advisability of having moles removed by electrolysis.

Only after consultation with a skilled and scientific medical practitioner is it advisable. Within my perhonal experience there is one outstanding instance of a young woman having a mole removed from her forehead in a beauty parlor. The girl was forced to cut bangs to hide the scar left after the operation. She was forced eventually to go to a physician and a long treatment was necessary to restore the condition of her skin.

Dr. Tobias, and every other medical man of standing with whose work I am familiar, warns against the removal of moles by any but the most skilled of the profession. Their dictum is either to leave it alone or let it be treated radically. A phydician is the only judge to decide the form of treatment.

Warts Not Dangerous.

Warts, on the other hand, are neither birthmarks nor are they, except in the rarest instances, apt to develop into dangerous growths. Unless situated in locations where they are exposed to injury, they give no trouble. They are probably caused by a micro-organism of low virulence which invades the skin. The bacteria are very mildly contagious, but are spread from one part of the body to another by the individual.

Because of the pecular spontaneous healing characteristic of innumerable cases there are any number of superstitious methods of treatment for them. Destroying them with strong mineral acids or other strong acids is not recommended because of the painful and troublesome accidents that frequently ensue. Outside of spontaneous healing, X-ray is about the only method of treatment to be depended upon. X-ray treatment should be given only by a thoroughly experienced operator.

Beauty Answers

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Hair on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or fat busted? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you, and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

JANE: THE LUMP BETWEEN your shoulders may be caused by a faulty sitting posture. Learn to sit and walk erect. Here are two good exercises: Lie on your back on the floor, arms stretched down and close to the sides, feet and body stretched to the fullest length. Now try to raise you head with no help from arms or feet, so chin will rest on the chest. Do not strain by too many repetitions at first. Then flop over, and raise your head back as far as you can, still without assistance from the hands and arms. You will feel the pull on the back muscles, but it will rid you of that lump. Do this morning and night, beginning with five times each, gradually increasing the number of times. When you can do this, try raising to a sitting position reaching forward with hands until you touch the toes.

MRS. S. E.: IT IS A DIFFICULT thing to restore busts which have become flabby through nursing. It requires daily attention and few women will give up the time to it. Bathe the busts daily with cold water and wear a brassiere which properly supports them. The tissues being thus supported the circulation improves and the structures become healthier. Massaging them with a fattening cream will help.

ROSE S.: I'LL GIVE YOU A FORMula for a nail varnish which will help you break yourself of the habit of biting your nails. It is: Alcohol, 1¼ ounces; chinoidin, ¼ ounce; gum mastic, ¼ ounce; gum myrrh, 1½ ounce. Mix the ingredients and let stand forty-eight hours, shaking the bottle frequently. Apply with camel's hair brush. In addition to this you must exercise will power to break yourself of this unbecoming habit.

MRS. J. S.: HENNA IS THE ONLY thing that will give the hair that reddish tint. I am not in favor of it, particularly when one attempts to apply it herself. If you insist upon having it done, go to a reputable hair store and have it applied by an expert operator. It is next to impossible for any one to apply it evenly to her own hair and when hair is streaked it is anything but beautiful to behold.

MRS. T. M. J.: IT IS VERY IMportant to keep the child's first teeth clean, for if they are not cared for they decay and become infected, affecting the general health of the child. If any of the first teeth are lost before the proper time, the jaws do not develop properly, causing irregularities in the second teeth.

AGNES: NAIL BITING IS AN UNpleasant habit Agnes, and the nails are most unsightly, indeed. It will require a great deal of will power to overcome it, but if you make up your mind to do so, you can. For my pamphlet on the care of the nails, which covers nail biting, send along a stamped, addressed envelope.

Make Your Good Clothes Last Longer

Take out the spots

Do your pretty clothes wear out too fast? Of course they do. You like pretty things, and naturally you wear out your prettiest clothes first.

But here is a way to make them last longer.... Take out the spots which make a dress look old. It is easy to remove them with Energine—the perfect dry cleaner. Why, you will be surprised how easily and quickly Energine makes things look like new.

Wouldn't it be wonderful if you could make your old things fresh and new again? Try it. You can get a can of Energine from your druggist—35c. It will clean almost anything.

Milk of Magnesia and Mineral Oil Now Combined

It has always been necessary to prescribe milk of magnesia and mineral oil separately, even though it has been generally recognized that, to be most effective, they should work together.

Haley's Magnesia-Oil is a highly successful combination of both. It is harmless, causes no griping or nausea, and may be safely taken in large doses. Very palatable—no oily taste. Can be mixed with milk and given children without their knowledge.

The oil carries the magnesia straight to the lower bowel, the seat of most so-called stomach trouble. Both oil and magnesia work together. Their individual effectiveness is immeasurably increased and the result is much quicker and more positive action.

Get a bottle of Haley's Magnesia-Oil today. Most druggists sell it. If yours can't supply you we will mail postpaid on receipt of price. Trial size, 35c; family size, $1. The Haley M-O Company, Indianapolis, Ind.

HAVE COLOR IN CHEEKS

Be Better Looking—Take Olive Tablets

If your skin is yellow—complexion pallid—tongue coated—appetite poor—you have a bad taste in your mouth—a lazy, no-good feeling—you should take Olive Tablets.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—a substitute for calomel—were prepared by Dr. Edwards after 17 years of study.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil. You will know them by their olive color.

To have a clear, pink skin, bright eyes, no pimples, a feeling of buoyancy like childhood days, you must get at the cause.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets act on the liver and bowels like calomel—yet have no dangerous after effects.

They start the bile and overcome constipation. Take one or two nightly and note the pleasing results. Millions of boxes are sold annually at 15c and 30c.

Dr. Edwards' OLIVE Tablets

To Keep Straightest, Unruliest Hair in Curl

The straightest, contrariest hair can be kept in curl for days and days by a very simple method. One need only get a few ounces of plain liquid Silmerine from the druggist and apply a little to the hair before doing it up. The result will be quite remarkable. A soft, rich looking gloss will show. The hair will be delightfully wavy, fluffy and glossy, without being in the least greasy, gummy or streaked.

The Silmerine is best put on with a clean tooth brush, drawing this through the hair from crown to tip. The application seems to gradually improve the texture and growth of the hair.

THE ADVENTURES OF FUZZY WUZZY

SOUND ASLEEP.

By Raymond Kelly.

"NOW," said Grumpo, the mechanical frog, when Fuzzy Wuzzy and Hawk Feather had the raft safely tied to the island, "I am going to take another nap and then hunt up our crew. Have you a piece of string, Hawk Feather?"

"Yes," answered the little Indian, taking one from his medicine bag.

"Then," Grumpo went on, "you may tie me to the raft so that I shan't sonambulate. That's such a long word that I don't know what it means, or whether it's really a word at all, but I like it and, as I'm the only self-winding frog there is, I can make up all the words I wish."

"It's a great convenience," said Fuzzy Wuzzy, "and makes you a most valuable frog. Therefore, Hawk Feather and I will stand guard while you sleep. We couldn't afford to lose you." So he helped Hawk Feather fasten the string to Grumpo's handle, and in exactly eight and one-half seconds less time than it took you to find your other stocking this morning, Grumpo was fast asleep.

Then Fuzzy Wuzzy and Hawk Feather sat down back to back on the raft and folded their hands and paws to stand guard. But waiting in the autumn sunshine while some one else takes a nap is slow work; so it's no particular wonder that Fuzzy and Hawk Feather after a little began to nod. From nodding they passed to dozing, and when one once dozes, sleep is not far away. So our two little friends forgot all about standing guard and went to sleep.

While they slept the sun went down and the moon rose high up over the tree tops, while the raft floated gently down stream, for the rope that held it to the shore of the island had become untied. But the Moon Lady spoke to the South Wind, telling her to blow gently, for Fuzzy Wuzzy was her friend, and all who were with him came under her protection also. So South Wind obeyed the Moon Lady and forbade her rough brothers, East Wind and North Wind, to blow at all. And she sang a soft lullaby that kept the three on the raft from waking, while the Dream Fairies sang with her, and the raft floated on all through that night and the next day and for nine nights more, until it had passed all the way down the river and far out upon the wide ocean.

At last on the morning of the tenth day Fuzzy Wuzzy, Hawk Feather, and Grumpo, the mechanical frog, waked up far out of sight of land. But they were not alone, for while they slept the fairies had brought them a crew for the raft, ten in all, and dressed each one exactly like all nine of the others.

So if you're not more than twelve years old I want you to write me a letter and send it to the office of this paper telling me what you guess the members of that crew looked like and what they wore. And don't forget to tell also what book for boys or girls you want to own, for the ten boys and ten girls whose letters are the neatest are going to receive the books they choose. Just use your imagination and make up a crew for that raft.

LOVE LETTERS

The Tribune will pay $1 for every love letter published. So, if you can write a good one, or if you have one in your private or family possession you would like to enter the contest, send it to Love Letter Editor, The Tribune, Chicago. As no letters will be returned, send copies of the ones you wish to keep.

The One Thing Wanting.

DEARLY BELOVED: The delight of being able to write to you without fear and without constraint! If it were possible to step from the dreary oppression of the northern midnight into the full blaze of the southern noon the transition would not be greater than is the sense of rest and relief that has come to me after the weary days which are over.

I never knew one person could mean so much to another as you do to me; that any one could be as happy as I am now. Perhaps I'm too happy. I want you—always. You have been the one thing wanting my whole life long. Every one has a partner soul somewhere. Does this seem fanciful to you, dear? It would comfort me, if ever we were separated, to know that you think as I do. I cannot tell you how it makes my heart sink just to look upon that word "separate," although I know it does not mean anything that is possible in our case. What could take me from you now?

You are my world. I have heard it said lately that you are fickle, but those who say that do not understand you. You are true, dear. How I laugh, now, at my fears—or, rather, how I bless them. If I had never known the horror of doubt, how could I know what certainty is? And I did doubt you. I can acknowledge that now. I thought your absence and silence intentional slights. And now all that bitter past enhances the present.

I wonder where you are today. I should not like to think that you have an existence of which I can know nothing . . . a life through which I cannot follow you even in imagination. Sometimes you come to me—then how happy I am. But when you are not here the days drag; I am never quite happy, never at peace, except when I'm with you. I love you.

GETTING SKINNIER EVERY DAY

Something Must Be Done and Done Darn Quick, Too

Tens of thousands of thin, rundown men—yes, and women, too—are getting discouraged—are giving up all hope of ever being able to take on flesh and look healthy and strong.

All such people can stop worrying and start to smile right now for McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets, which any druggist will tell you all about, is putting flesh on hosts of skinny folks every day.

One woman, tired, weak and discouraged, put on 15 pounds in five weeks and feels fine.

We all know that Cod Liver Oil is full of flesh producing vitamins, but many people can't take it because of its horrible smell and fishy taste, and because it often upsets the stomach.

McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets are as easy to take as candy, and if any thin person don't gain at least 5 pounds in 30 days your druggist will give you your money back—and only 60 cents for 60 tablets. Ask Buck & Rayner, Public Drug Co., Walgreen Co., MacLean Drug, Owl Drug Company, Boston Store or any live pharmacist anywhere.

"Get McCoy's, the original and genuine Cod Liver Oil Tablet."

Bright Sayings of Children

The Tribune will pay $1 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Doe, The Tribune, Chicago.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

Mother had some late lettuce growing in the garden, and in order to protect it had placed a glass frame over it.

Soon after she found it broken and little footprints in the frosty grass nearby told that Ruth had been the culprit.

When asked why she had stepped on the glass, she replied, "I only skated on it once." E. S. T.

Denny and his twin sister, Eileen, returned from their first day at school. Denny was discouraged.

"Mama," he declared, "there is no use of my going to school any more. Eileen knows more than both of us put together." G. F. P.

Jennie's mother had gone away the other day, and left the child in the care of her aunt. After a clash of wills, Jennie was put into a room to remain a specific time.

"And if you stir out of this room before I allow you to, I'll spank you," warned her aunt.

"Well, Aunt Emma," remonstrated the little miss, "you kin shut me up an' I'll stay shut, but my mamma 'tends to all the spankin that's done in this house." A. H.

Virgie wanted to whisper something into mother's ear, but she could not hope to reach that high, so she said, "Mamma, pull down your ears. I want to tell you something." C. R.

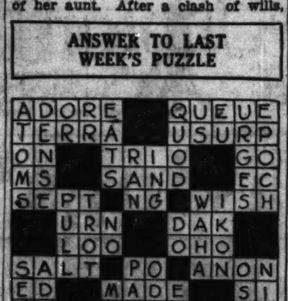
Beauty

A Gleamy Mass of Hair

35c "Danderine" does Wonders for Any Girl's Hair

Girls! Try this! When combing and dressing your hair, just moisten your hair-brush with a little "Danderine" and brush it through your hair. The effect is startling! You can do your hair up immediately and it will appear twice as thick and heavy—a mass of gleamy hair, sparkling with life and possessing that incomparable softness, freshness and luxuriance.

While beautifying the hair "Danderine" is also toning and stimulating each single hair to grow thick, long and strong. Hair stops falling out and dandruff disappears. Get a bottle of "Danderine" at any drug or toilet counter and just see how healthy and youthful your hair appears after this delightful, refreshing dressing.



Accept only "Phillips," the original Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years. Protect your doctor and yourself by avoiding imitations of the genuine "Phillips."

25-cent bottles, also 50-cent bottles, contain directions—any drug store.

Cuticura Clears The Skin Of Blemishes

Dentists' Prescription Whitens Dark Teeth Instantly—At Home

Now smokers and others whose teeth are dull, spotty, yellowish and stained can quickly make their teeth flashing white and lustrous right at home, and for a small cost. This is through a prescription of two prominent dentists which works in a new and entirely safe way. Consists of a mild harmless liquid and special paste. Just apply few drops of liquid to teeth. This softens stains. Then use paste. This gently removes softened stains. Dark, discolored, yellowish teeth become beautifully white and clear—often in a few minutes. Results of first application will very likely amaze you. This prescription is sold under the name Bleachodent Combination. No effect on enamel. Safe to use. Get Bleachodent Combination today at all dealers, such as: Wolf Drug Co., Inc., Public Drug Co., Buck & Rayner, Economical Drug Co., Walgreen & Co. and leading druggists wherever this paper is read.

Simple Application That Dissolves Blackheads

No more squeezing and pinching to get rid of those unsightly blemishes, blackheads. There is one simple, safe and sure way to get them out and that is to dissolve them. Get about two ounces of Calonite powder from your druggist—sprinkle a little on a hot, wet cloth—rub briskly over the blackheads for a few seconds—wash the parts and every blackhead will be gone.

Pinching and squeezing out blackheads make large pores and you cannot get all of the blackheads out this way—while this simple application of Calonite powder and water dissolves every particle of them and leaves the skin and pores in their natural condition.

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

A PRINTED crêpe would make up beautifully in one of these tunics, wearing it over a black satin skirt. The long tie, and the edges of the neck, sleeves and pocket could be of the satin. And the result should be a smart little dress entailing a minimum of labor.

This tunic is cut in two pieces—front and back—and the sleeves which may be finished long or short.

The round neck line is prettily cut and across the back there is a small collar. Meeting this at the shoulder seams are the tie ends. Slight fullness is let into the front at each side at about the depth of a shallow yoke and this will be a becoming feature to many.

For a young and slender figure crêpes de Chine in a color matching the skirt, or contrasting, as one chooses, would be good for this tunic blouse, and instead of cutting it the full length, a plaited flounce could be set on across the front—starting at a low hip line, and meeting the plain back of the tunic. A narrow trimming band would look well to outline the neck across the front, setting it on at the top of the flounce and letting it extend on across the back, and finishing the tunic with a strip of the banding down the middle of the front from the band that goes around the neck to the band that finishes the top of the flounce. This makes a dressy looking garments, and the pocket should be omitted.

Pattern No. 2051 is for a pretty apron. It is cut in one piece, and the bottom of the waist in the back extends out a little at each side and finishes in a rounding edge. A buttonhole is worked in each edge, and these ends button on each side of the front. The apron is slashed each side of the front at the waist line, and this fullness is disposed of in the same manner as is done on the one piece dresses. A large patch pocket on the right side of the skirt part adds to its convenience.

The lovely cool days that we are having make one think with interest of fall and winter clothes, and pattern No. 1957 is an unusually pretty design for an afternoon frock. Crêpe marocain would make up beautifully, or satin may be your choice. Then, too, there is velvet, faille, and bengaline. The materials are so varied and many that it has to simmer down to just the best choice for the occasions on which the dress is to be worn.

One color and material will make the more dignified looking gown; but two colors could be used effectively to make a smart looking dress.

The back of the dress is in one piece. It is slashed in at a low waist line, and the lower edges gathered and joined to the upper. The panel front is also in one piece, and at a low waist line there is a short extension to which the belt that goes across the back is joined. The belt is joined to the right extension and fastened to the left one.

Then there are the side fronts of the upper part and the plaited sections for the skirt. The edges of the front panel are turned in and the side front set in place, basted down, and the seams finished on the wrong side.

There are five backward turning plaits to be laid in the skirt. This work should be done on a large table where there is ample room. Lay each plait from top to bottom, and see that each fold is as flat and smooth on the under side as on the upper side. Directions on the pattern envelope tell exactly how to put every piece of the pattern together, and there will not be any trouble in making, if time is given to go carefully. The sleeves are pretty and dressy—one piece and flaring—with the little plaited inset in each one. The closing is on the left shoulder and at the left side of the front.

What You Should Know about a baby's care

Illness is usually due to constipation. Quickly give half a teaspoonful of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

THE young mother should watch which foods the baby relishes most, which foods and their quantity cause distress, and act accordingly.

The good health of a baby is largely a matter of intelligent attention to diet. Nevertheless, in spite of your efforts you will sometimes notice belching, flatulence, wind and symptoms of colicky pain.

Give half a teaspoonful of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and thereafter vary the offending food. Syrup Pespin is a laxative admirably suited to infants and children, as it is mild and wholly free from opiates and narcotics.

If you delay in giving it you will soon find the baby suffering from constipation, and that may lead to more serious illness. Half a teaspoonful promptly given will avoid trouble.

Many thousands of mothers have never given their babies any other medicine but Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and they have successfully raised large and sturdy families. The formula is not a secret, being a combination of Egyptian senna with pepsin, and agreeable aromatics. The ingredients are stated on the package. Mrs. Dewey Walker, Elida, N. M., and Mrs. B. Higginbotham, Otter Creek, Fla., are among the many who are firm believers that Syrup Pepsin has kept their families and themselves in good health.

No family with young children can afford to be without such a household medicine. It is effective, beneficial and safe regardless of your age and has been considered so for over thirty years. In consequence it is today the largest selling liquid laxative in the world, over 10 million bottles being sold annually.

You will find that Syrup Pepsin quickly brings relief in the severest chronic constipation, in biliousness, lack of appetite, sleeplessness, headache, cankers, bad breath, and to stop a cold or fever.

Every druggist sells it, and the cost on the average is less than a cent a dose. It is guaranteed to be effective in these symptoms or your money will be refunded.

Free Sample Bottle Coupon

There are people who very rightly prefer to try a thing before they buy it. Let them clip this coupon, pin their name and address to it, and send it to the Pepsin Syrup Co., 518 Washington Street, Monticello, Illinois, and a free sample bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will be sent them postpaid by mail. Do not inclose postage. It is free.

Hair Like a Halo

Let me show you how I got it

By Edna Wallace Hopper

My hair fairly glitters with life and with luster. The thousands who see me daily on the stage wonder at its radiance.

That glint is new. A few months ago it was lacking. It is due entirely to a new-type shampoo.

Every creator of a new beauty help sends it at once to me. For millions of women follow my advice.

Last spring a famous chemist sent me this shampoo. He had spent years in perfecting it.

He said it gave hair new life and luxuriance. That products of fruit gave much help to the hair. And that two secret ingredients gave the hair glint and glow.

I tried it, and the quick results amazed me. My hair gained a multiplied beauty. That radiance people marvel at is one of the effects.

Then I ordered a thousand bottles and supplied them to other people. From everywhere came like reports and urgent calls for more.

I have searched 40 years for beauty helps which I supply to women. Some bring marvelous results. But women never flocked to any as they do to this shampoo.

Now the creator of that shampoo is making it for me. I call it Edna Wallace Hopper's Fruity Shampoo. Druggists and toilet counters everywhere supply it.

I want you to see what it does. It will be a revelation. Mail this coupon to my office for a sample free.

Here Is How To Be Beautiful

A Host of Girls With Muddy, Oily, Pimply Complexions Are Wondering How They May Gain the Beauty that Comes With a Perfect Skin.

Try This Way FREE

The marcel wave, the adorable new hats, the wonderful creations in dress and furs that promise to make this the greatest year in history, will be utterly distracting to the girl with a muddy, oily, pimply complexion.

No amount of rouge, powder and make-up will more than momentarily cover up these imperfections. This you know from time tried experience. And the violence of a single dance has utterly spoiled the entire evening.

Beauty must have a foundation of skin texture. Get this foundation and you may heighten it with cosmetics to your heart's content. But first get the foundation with

STUART'S CALCIUM WAFERS

These wonder workers have an influence considered by science as absolutely necessary to feed the skin and enable it to take on that wonderful peachy bloom.

The action is little short of marvelous and you will be overjoyed to see pimples, blackheads, blotches, rash, the muddy, oily, sallow appearance, just simply transform into the loveliest, softest and most delicate skin you ever beheld.

The times decree that a muddy, pimply complexion is inexcusable. Roughness, redness and rash are not to be tolerated. You have tried every kind of make-up known without the desired result. Now try Stuart's Calcium Wafers.

WHITE LIES OR FACT? by Doris Blake

Is It Better to Try Curing Family Ills by Direct Attack, or to Sugar Coat the Bitter Truth? Or Maybe You'd Like a Lie Detector

HOW would you like to have a little Lie Detector in your home? No, thanks? You'd rather have a washing machine? So would we all!

In California 'tis rumored a lie detector has been invented which has all the terrors of the famous inquisition devices and then some. Imagine what would happen to poor old dad, who sneaked away for a game with the boys, after phoning the old bromide about having to work tonight. Imagine mother with the lie detector in action just after she has covered up that new dress purchase by dropping the first hundred dollars off its actual cost!

You could imagine the most dire consequences with so infernal a machine in the house! One shudders to think what would happen to our individual pride were the truth to be told of what is actually thought of us.

As the old inventor of a hoax machine in one of our current funny shows on Broadway says in answer to congratulations on the fortune ahead of him: "On the contrary, my lie detector is worthless. Every home should be without one."

Uncovering the Falsehood.

It is tried out in a highly amusing scene in the show. A skeletonized doll reacts immediately to lies uttered in its presence with a wild gesticulating of arms and legs.

The wife comes in after a supposed shopping tour, actually a luncheon engagement with another man. Her husband suspects her and sees in the old professor's invention an answer to his doubts one way or the other. He inquires gently about where she had luncheon. She answers, at her club. The doll begins to dance. The husband asks her if she is sure. She replies emphatically that she was at her club. The doll dances madly. When he presses her again with: "Were you alone?" and she says: "Yes, dear," the doll jazzes violently. Then the husband accuses her directly of lying. She, infuriated, inquires who he is to complain about a few white lies.

He answers, "I never told a lie in my life," upon which the doll blows up in one loud explosion. Thus peace, we assume, is reëstablished.

Yet, in all seriousness, this California lie detector, called an emotiograph by its young inventor, is being used in Los Angeles police circles to detect the guilty and protect the innocent.

5,000 Successes Claimed.

For three years experiments have been under way, and it is claimed by its sponsors that more than 5,000 cases have been tested without a single failure.

The lie detector is constructed somewhat after the principle of a machine for taking blood pressure tests. It registers the heart beats. Its theory is that if the person who answers the questions has a clear conscience and sticks to the truth his heart beats easily and his breath comes regularly. If the victim registers fear or shame, or even embarrassment, the heart skips and the breath fluctuates, and if, as a result, he lies, a pen attached jazzes like the dancing doll, a red light flashes, and the onlooker knows the victim is lying.

It is claimed the criminal records of California contain evidence that the machine has value. When the pen begins to dance confusion confronts the victim and confession follows.

Once When It Worked.

Frederick L. Collins, in a current publication, is responsible for this story of the lie detector's work. There was a thievery epidemic which swept a sorority at a certain university, in which many students were involved. At the suggestion of the house manager, a popular girl, the girls gave themselves a word association test with which they had become familiar in their psychological studies. The test implicated a girl who had never been very popular with her mates, and pressure was used to gain her resignation from the sorority. She appealed to her parents, who in turn appealed to the university authorities. The latter called on Leonarde Keeler, inventor of the machine.

The accused girl stood the test admirably. So did the other girls, until at last they came to the pretty little house manager. She broke badly under the questioning, and finally confessed.

One cannot advocate lying as a commendable quality. But what a hideous world we'd live in if the plain unvarnished truth were delivered daily, hourly, either by or to us, particularly by those with whom he have most intimate daily contact.

You have no doubt heard the story of the hostess who went in for original ideas in entertainment. She planned a most appetizing luncheon and invited her twelve best friends to share it. She suggested a game of Truth. Each was to tell exactly what she thought of the other guest, and to answer every question put to her without a single softening adornment. The result was the hostess ate her luncheon alone. Every guest had stamped out an injured person within twenty minutes after the proposal of the game.

Truth Versus Fact.

Some one has said that more homes are saved by the small white lie than by truth presented in bald form. Whether we openly admit it or not, I venture we all have a leaning toward the person who feeds us anything but the naked truth about ourselves. As a man once said to me: "When someone begins 'if you want to know the honest truth about yourself' I stop him. If I thought other people knew it as well as I do I couldn't go on living."

That's the way I feel about it. The darkest moments in life come with the suspicion that some one else has found us out for the weak and faltering poor bits of human clay we are. So long as we can feel that those nearest us believe we are the person we want to be, all's nearer right with the world.

ANSWERS TO LOVE PROBLEMS

Have you a perplexing love affair on which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care The Tribune, Chicago. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped, addressed envelope.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

Quite All Right.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 17. I have known a fellow two years my senior for a number of years. He loves me and until lately I have loved him, but somehow in the last few months I've discovered I really don't love him. He believes I still love him. I go out with other fellows, but is it right for me to continue to go with him under the circumstances? BLUE EYES."

Blue Eyes, as the young man is just one of your many friends, I feel you have as much right to accept his invitations as those coming from any other boy. Of course, dear, it would not be right if you favor him; rather give him the impression that he is one of many.

Step Aside for Sister.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a young girl and considered rather good looking. I met a fellow about a month ago who is two years my senior. I like this fellow very much, but he does not seem to care for me. When he comes down to my house he pays all his attention to my sister, who also likes him. Now do you think I should give him up or continue our friendship? I know I will be lonesome without him. NORMA."

Norma, if you think he cares more for your sister than he does for you, the graceful thing for you to do is to step aside in her favor. He will appreciate your doing so, I am sure. And dont' forget, dear, there are lots more where he came from.

By All Means.

"Dear Miss Blake: I would like you to decide a problem for me. I am in love with a girl of 16. About two months ago she went away with a vaudeville act and I did not get to see her, as she had to go suddenly. I am bashful and I want to write to her. Should I call on her mother and ask for her address, or do you think she should write me? GORDON."

Yes, Gordon, I feel sure she will be glad to receive a letter from you, as mail is never so welcome as when we are a long way from home and feeling, perhaps, a bit lonesome. Her mother will be glad to furnish her address. Corresponding with her may help you to overcome your bashfulness and you will be more at ease with her when she returns because of it.

He Wasn't Serious.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a good looking girl of 18 and in love with a young man seven years my senior. Three weeks ago I was on my vacation and I met this young man, whom I love dearly. He gave me his name and address. He called me on the phone and promised he would come around to my home and take me out with him, but he disappointed me, so I have not heard from him since. How can I try to win this young man's friendship, as I love him dearly? "BLUE EYES."

Blue Eyes, to him it was just another summer flirtation, and you have allowed yourself to take it more seriously than he did. I wouldn't try to do another thing about it. Just strike him off your list of friends and forget that you ever saw him, dear.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

PARIS APPROVES THE ADAPTABLE DRESS.

By Bettina Bedwell.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS.—(Special Correspondence.)—An American society woman breezed in from Le Toquet this morning, ensconced herself and her twenty trunks at the Hotel Meurice, and straightway ordered a taxi to take her to the Champs Elysees, the new Rue de la Paix, where she selects most of her clothes.

"I shall buy a number of the adaptable dresses," said she, "which do so much to make the problem of dressing simple."

She showed me several of these versatile examples of the couturiers' inventiveness, which she asserted had saved the ennui of innumerable changes during the seven weeks she spent at Le Toquet and Deauville.

"These dresses," she added, "should be called one of the great scientific inventions for labor saving, along with such useful things as automatic wringers and moving stairways. When I am tired I get into one of my adaptable frocks like this one (pointing to a plaid mousseline from Jean Patou) and I can get harmoniously by from afternoon until bedtime at three in the morning without another change."

I believe the dearest creations of the great Paris couturiers are these adaptable frocks, which may be worn in the afternoon, and by the simple loosening of a button or hook are converted into evening frocks, or the morning frock that is also to all intents and purposes a coat. They are pre-eminently practical, and save space as decoratively as the disappearing bed or others of our solutions to the question of congestion. Now that fashion has definitely decided that sleeveless frocks for afternoon and long sleeved frocks for dinner are epatant, the creation of the changeable dress is distinctly simpler, for it was by their sleeves (or sleevelessness) that we might know them. The same line of reasoning applies to the coat and the robe manteau, where lines are so similar that not even a pearl expert could tell the difference.

Our first illustration shows one of those afternoon-dinner-evening affairs that our American woman selected for her social winter. She chose black velvet, which is as frequent in Paris as the August and September rains, having no precedent in prominence since some time 'way back in '49 or thereabouts. Velvet is a fabric that never stands a chance to become the material of hoi poili, and therefore the elegant woman can indulge in as many costumes made of it as she desires, without fear of meeting a replica of herself forty-seven times in a few hours on any city boulevard. It is inherently aristocratic and reasonably durable. Our model follows the slim line silhouette, broken in a smart autumn manner by the rows of deep scallops at the bottom, extending to the hips.

Mrs. John Wanamaker wore such a scalloped

Black velvet, sleeveless, and following the slim line silhouette. | A coat dress with diagonal flounce and scarf collar. | Black and white combined with silver embroidery for an "in-between." | Paris makes mosaics of different furs for winter frocks.

skirt recently—one of the first I have seen—and it has since become a decorative feature of autumn gowns and even coats on occasion.

The sleeveless deep yoke effect of the dress is another item for mention in connection with coming styles. Bare arms will make us feel superior to winter frosts, and the deep yoke is both new and superlatively smart. It belongs chiefly to daytime, and its use on this frock is unique, aiding its graceful transition from day to lighting up time. A narrow gold ribbon, heavily incrusted with embroidery, accentuates the deep V neck and finishes in short tasseled ends. For afternoon the gown is worn sans jewelry, and at dinner time the wrist-to-elbow bracelet vogue changes the aspect successfully. Pearls, of course, are worn about the neck, and with such a gown they are short strands of too large to be true stones, showing a bit of chain between each one.

Our second offering reveals the couturier's idea of adapting the indoor to the outdoor morning costume. The material is wool velours Leda, the color rust brown. The line of the silhouette departs from that rigid narrow one which is well nigh habitual and breaks into a series of graceful ripples which increase in depth with the diagonal circular flounce to the left hip. This flounce is trimmed across the front with a deep band of fox. The fastening occurs under the right arm, with a series of bone buttons that extends from the armhole to the hip, where the flounce begins.

The scarf is attached across the back of the neck, which is oval, and the two ends may hang loose, as the artist has arranged them, or may, as you have guessed, be thrown over the shoulders.

Our third model is what the Paris couturiers call a little dress, and on such gowns they spend the greater part of their talent for clothes. The life of these little dresses can be much longer than that of the more formal and decided toilettes, and they have the gift of adaptability to the greatest degree. Naturally, it is black, and just as naturally it is made of crepe de chine, the color and material irradicably connected in the Parisian mind with what is ultimately desirable in a dress for many occasions. The trimming consists of surpliced bands of white crepe de chine, arranged in the manner of the military decoration bands of army men, being slung from shoulder to hip. They continue down the left side of the skirt and are united to the black of the dress by steel and silver embroidery. The skirt is balanced on the right side by an abbreviated panel of black lined with silver and banded on the inner edge by white crepe.

The fourth offering comes out for several of the new features that Paris is offering for winter, in addition to being a successful in-between frock. First of all there is the mosaic of fur, which forms the girdle and the bands on the long, loose sleeves. Small pieces of ermine, seal, and leopard are sewed together into a perfect pattern to form these bands, which in turn constitute the chief trimming of the dress. It is made of black crepe marocain, and the skirt displays the second autumn feature in its spiral tiers, which begin in back on the right side and end in back at the hem on the left side. That is one of the winter ways of breaking the narrow silhouette without destroying it altogether.

Paris fashion makers are expending a lot of their talent on this breaking of the line, but in most cases they take good care not to disturb the slender effect, for the reason that the woman will have none of such rebellion.

Lastly, I want you to consider the contrasting sleeves, which are made of a melange of black and silver, producing a rich and rather somber effect. They are long and loose, coming well out to the knuckles and flaring gently from the armhole, with a more decided widening from the elbow. Contrasting sleeves, and particularly sleeves made of some material with metal threads in it, are a good means of freshening up one of your last season's frocks which needs the stimulus of a new detail to live through the autumn.

BY A. T. GALLICO.

NEW YORK. — [Special Correspondence.] — If you should wake up some bright morning and find that over night your wardrobe had been completely wiped out, and that you had to go out and replace everything from shoes to hats, so that you would have a complete wardrobe, which would take care of you for all occasions within the life of an average man, what would you include? This question of the complete wardrobe for an average man has been asked of us several times recently. Therefore, we will give our idea of what this wardrobe should contain to cover all requirements.

Naturally, everything need not be new. We hope no one is really going to arise some morning and find nothing to put on. But every one likes to add and replace various articles of apparel from time to time. This is what we suggest for the average man, for fall and winter:

Take first suits: A man needs at least two business suits. Both, or more, need not be new this season. But to have more than one suit is absolutely necessary in order always to make a good appearance, so that one suit may be freshly pressed, ready in the closet when a man wants a change. In cut these suits might be both single breasted, or one single and the other double breasted. The color depends upon what colors the man favors. Two attractive suits, which would give variety in color schemes, would be one of dark blue, always a good staple garment, and the other a medium gray with light gray or white stripe. Or one might have a brown suit and a gray suit, or a brown and a blue.

In suggesting the rest of the clothes and accessories for this complete wardrobe, we are going to assume that the two business suits forming the foundation of the wardrobe are the dark blue and medium gray mentioned above. Some other day we'll take into consideration the case of the man who owns a team of suits which are brown and gray, or brown and blue, and will make suggestions as to a successful array of haberdashery and so forth which will go well with such suits. Today, for the sake of simplicity, we'll stick to the dark blue and the gray suit with light gray stripes.

This is more or less of an easy problem, as blue and gray suits take much of a similar treatment. What looks well with a blue suit will go equally well with a gray suit, and vice versa. Therefore, doubling up in the haberdashery is possible. For instance, in headgear a gray hat will go with either suit. Or one of those bluish gray hats, that are so popular this season, will also harmonize with both suits. For the complete wardrobe we suggest that there be included one of these blue gray hats, or a medium gray hat, for every day wear, and a black soft hat or a derby for evening wear with dinner coat. If you like a derby, you'll want one for street wear anyway as a change from the soft hat. The average man does not need a top hat, as he will not have much occasion to wear full dress or cutaway.

In top coats and overcoats, the man with the dark blue and the gray suits will need one gray or blue top coat, and one gray or blue or black overcoat. If he wants these coats for all round service, he should not get them too light. A dark blue winter overcoat is smart and an excellent combination with either of the suits mentioned. A medium gray top coat, plain, or of some mixture or plaid design, would lend itself to attractive color schemes.

With shoes one should not stint oneself any more than is absolutely necessary, for shoes should be kept in constant repair. If this is done, and if they are polished regularly, they will have a far longer life than if they are knocked about and one pair made to do all the work. We recommend for this especial wardrobe at least one pair of tan and one pair of black oxfords, or high shoes, as you choose. The oxfords are more in favor with the younger men. One should also have a pair of evening dress shoes of patent leather, if one has a dinner coat, which is also part of the complete wardrobe for the average man. These days no man can get along without a dinner coat if he moves about at all in any social life. A dinner coat is never out of place at the theater, or at a dinner party, or small dance.

In the shirt line there should be at least a couple of dress shirts to wear with the above mentioned indispensable dinner coat. At this season of the year the stiff bosomed shirts are more correct than the plaited bosom shirts. For wear with business suits an assortment of the fashionable self-collared and colored shirts is recommended, with three or four plain white ones. With the blue and the gray suits, shirts of blue and white stripes, gray or blue solid color, or shirts of lavender in solid color or striped pattern may be used. If one had, for instance, three blue shirts, one gray, one black and white striped, one brown and white striped (for wear with the blue suit, not the gray), one lavender, one green, and four white shirts, making up an even dozen, that should be enough to make the rounds each week with variety, and leave no worry about getting the laundry back in time.

Enough ties so that almost a daily change is possible should be provided, basing the selection upon color schemes with the suits and shirts already suggested.

WHAT THE AVERAGE MAN NEEDS IN HIS FALL AND WINTER WARDROBE

Women the World Over

Women Democrats in Maine have contributed prize cooking recipes for the "State of Maine Cook Book," which will be sold to housewives to swell the party's campaign fund.

Miss Dorothy Allison, recently appointed a structural draftsman in the Philadelphia department of city transit, is the first member of her sex ever to receive such an appointment.

Mrs. A. G. Meredith, daughter of the late Daniel O'Day, Standard Oil millionaire, herself immensely wealthy and acquainted with half of the courts of Europe, has taken up cooking as a hobby.

Mrs. Henrietta King, whose Texas ranch of more than 1,000,000 acres is conceded to be the largest in the United States, recently celebrated her 93d birthday.

The recent appointment of Mrs. Catherine Cowan as mayor of Wilmington, N. C., gives her the honor of being the first woman mayor in North Carolina.

Ends Stubborn Coughs in a Hurry

For real effectiveness, this old home-made remedy has no equal. Easily and cheaply prepared.

You'll never know how quickly a bad cough can be conquered, until you try this famous home-made remedy. The prompt relief is almost magical. It is easily prepared, and there is nothing better for coughs.

Into a pint bottle, put 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. Or use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it saves about two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough preparations, and gives you a more positive, effective remedy. It keeps perfectly, and tastes pleasant—children like it.

You can feel this take hold instantly, soothing and healing the membranes in all the air passages. It promptly loosens a dry, tight cough, and soon you will notice the phlegm thin out and disappear. A day's use will usually break up an ordinary throat or chest cold, and it is also splendid for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness, and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, the most reliable remedy for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

9 Outstanding Maytag Features

1—Washes faster. The Gyrafoam Principle creates a more highly energized, turbulent and continuously effective water action. No idle water.

2—Washes cleaner. The Gyrafoam Principle mixes the soap evenly through the water, and forces the super-cleaning, soapier washing solution through the meshes of the clothes. No idle suds.

3—Largest hourly capacity in world—50 lbs. ordinary family wash per hour.

4—Most compact washer made—takes floor space only 25 inches square.

5—Cast aluminum tub—can't warp, rust, rot, swell, split nor corrode.

6—Easily adjusted to your height, and height of tubs.

7—Clothes can be put in or taken out while washer is running.

8—Tub cleans itself in 30 seconds.

9—Metal swinging wringer. Low. Swings into 7 positions. Adjusts itself automatically for handkerchiefs or blankets. Automatic drainboard. Instant tension-release. All parts enclosed.

9 Reasons for World Leadership

For homes without electricity the Maytag Gyrafoam is available with Multi-Motor* attachment.

*The Famous Maytag Gasoline Motor.

Takes LESS Room Does TWICE the Work

25 inches of floor space is all that's needed for the Maytag! Fits snugly in a corner—more compact than you thought a washer could be.

Still, it washes 50 lbs. of dry clothes an hour—just twice as much as ordinary washers. You know what THAT means to YOU on washday.

Delicate silks—fine linens—heavy blankets—crusty, greasy overalls, all spick-span-clean! You know too, how hard it is to clean wristbands, collars and cuffs—yet the Maytag washes them immaculately without a bit of hand rubbing.

The secret lies in the exclusive Gyrafoam principle. Imagine a napkin in a pan of rapidly boiling water—tumbled about every which way. Multiply that water tempest many, many times and you have the Gyrafoam in action.

Now you must try this washer right in your home where you can see how carefully, thoroughly and quickly it will dispose of your wash.

So—do this before next washday. Call the nearest dealer. Have him bring a Maytag to your home. There is no obligation. If the washer doesn't sell itself—don't keep it! That is the Maytag way—the way Maytag has attained world leadership.

Lowell	Goodwin & Jansen

Try this: Don't discard spring and summer garments unless they are worn out! Pick out your favorite sweaters, jackets, scarves, hosiery, skirts, etc. Tint them a lovely delicate new shade. Or dye them in one of the many attractive rich colors suitable to autumn wear—or merely refresh their original colors. Putnam Fadeless Dyes do all this.

Get the right dye, or your clothes suffer—It must be a fadeless, "one-package" dye. What is a "one-package" dye? It colors goods in ONE operation. Without a "one-package" dye you must buy an extra package and repeat the whole operation simply to color the cotton threads in a wool or silk garment. Don't do it! Use the guaranteed fadeless "one-package" dyes—Putnam Fadeless Dyes. You can tint without boiling.

See color card of all fashionable colors and tints at your druggist's. Ask him for instruction sheet on the new art of "Tied Dyeing" or write direct to

A FACE BRICK RESIDENCE.

BRICK is chosen not alone for permanence, but for a minimum upkeep and minimum depreciation. This last item is perhaps the most important, as depreciation itself is a vital factor in the value of a house. Bricks are made of a material that can withstand, without any visible effects, the rigors of changeable weather. Neither fire nor water affects the sturdiness of a brick building, any more than does a sudden change of temperature. It is because of these undeniable qualities of brick that the government allows only 2 per cent depreciation per year to be shown in income tax returns. Besides, there is no painting to be done, except the woodwork, and no repairs to be made. Thus, in addition to the small depreciation of a brick house, there is a markedly low maintenance cost.

When face brick is used on all sides of the residence it not only increases the durability, but adds greatly to the attractiveness of the building. It permits a variety of color combinations and textures that will be both beautiful and lasting. No wonder, then, that face brick has found such popular favor in recent years. In recognition of this well deserved popularity we are illustrating today a face brick residence.

This home, designed by Architect George W. Repp of Chicago, is particularly adapted for a fairly large lot in a town of about 20,000 to 50,000 inhabitants. It seems strange how tastes differ in small towns and metropolitan cities, but after analyzing conditions a plausible reason presents itself to justify this difference.

In a small community, where normal conditions are usually calm and streets are quiet, the houses are generally of a plain character, to fit in with the general aspect. Designs are substantial, so that they will look just as good twenty years later as they do today. On the other hand, in bustling cities, where things are all excitement and the mind is crowded with an ever increasing train of events, a profound craving for originality continually evidences itself, not only in buildings but in dress, entertainment, preparation of food, and many other instances. It quite naturally follows that there is a considerable demand for uniqueness in the design of homes that is in marked contrast to the demand in smaller towns. Thus our mode of living more than anything else guides our preferences in selecting a pleasing design.

Perhaps the most outstanding feature of this home is its roominess. The spacious living room, with sun porch, a large dining room and kitchen, not to mention a good sized breakfast room, make up the first floor. On the second floor are three very large bedrooms and a sleeping porch.

There is a small corner porch, the steps and floor of which are entirely of face brick, presenting a somewhat rustic appearance. The entrance doorway leads into a vestibule, which in turn communicates with the stair hall. A large opening admits to the living room and a door to the dining room. With this arrangement there need be no disturbance in the rest of the house if some inopportune caller arrives.

The fireplace is in a recess made by the vestibule wall. A seat and small bookcase are provided on each side of the hearth, making this a comfortable little nook in which to spend a few hours reading. An opening with glass panels on each side leads to the sun porch, which is about half as large as the living room.

Between the living room and dining room there is a double French door that might be attractively paneled with mitre-cut plate glass. The dining room is as large as can possibly be desired. It is well lighted by a double casement window. Adjoining the dining room is a breakfast room which gives promise of being most delightful. The bay on one side and the china cabinets on the other give this room an octagonal shape. Windows are arranged so that a view is afforded in three different directions.

The kitchen, too, is large and well equipped. The sink has a double drain board and is situated directly beneath the window. A chimney is provided in case a coal or wood range is desired, which also acts as a vent, if the gas range is used. There is no pantry, but two large, built-in cases furnish ample shelf space. The refrigerator is in a small vestibule, off the rear porch. One feature of particular convenience is the coat closet, and lavatory and toilet, adjacent to the rear hall. There is, also, an inclosed stairway to the basement, which is accessible from the outside as well.

On the second floor attention is immediately drawn to the immense front bedroom. It has practically the same area as the living room. Of particular interest is the fireplace, smaller of course, than the one on the first floor, but just as efficient. Adjoining this bedroom is a dressing room, which may be equipped as an additional bathroom. In all of the bedrooms there is ample closet space. Chests of drawers and shelves are built in, with ready cut lumber, purchased at a saving, direct from the mill. In the hallway is a large linen closet. The sleeping porch, too, is another feature that makes this house popular with its tenants.

There are a few points in the construction of the building that are of particular interest. The architect, in recognition of the high quality of the exterior, with its low rate of depreciation and upkeep, determined to make the interior just as permanent and durable. It would be inconsistent to make one construction inferior to the other. He therefore specified that metal lath be used as a plaster base in the stairhall and on the ceilings of the most prominent rooms. This is done to prevent the plaster from cracking, a condition which so annoyingly disfigures a room, and which is easily avoided by this means. The steel lath reinforces the plaster, so that it may withstand the pressure and strains caused by the moving of heavy furniture or slamming doors, without showing any visible effects. This same lath should be applied around the stairs, as a protection against fire, thus making a safe passage for anyone happening to be upstairs in the event of fire. Such precautions against fire and cracks may be continued throughout the house, at the discretion of the builder.

An interesting topic is the attached garage. Its convenience can be appreciated at all times, but even more so during inclement weather. The garage is entered through a door off the rear porch, and the automobile may be driven directly up to the front door step, thus assuring complete shelter all the way. For attached garages, the Hoover dwelling house code suggests the ceiling be protected against fire in the same manner as the stairway was protected, which was explained in the preceding paragraph.

The color scheme is left to the judgment of the builder. There are so many varying shades and textures of face brick that even the most discriminating person is bound to find one among them that will satisfy in every respect.

When the First Gray Hair Shows —Use Sage Tea

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients, at very little cost. Everybody uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as is does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger.

A FRIEND IN NEED by Sally Joy Brown

I want to be the medium through which the friend in need and the friend to need may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy, and you would gladly give it if you knew how to go about it. Write to me and I shall be happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

WHAT TIMELY HELP DOES.

WOULD you like to see what the gifts we are giving through this column really accomplish for many of the families receiving them?

Then you will be interested in this case:

Several weeks ago the husband and father came home from seven weeks of sickness in the county hospital, to try to get another start. But his clothes were so shabby he could not get a job in any kind of work he knew, and he had no money with which to buy new ones. Worse than that, his wife was expecting a baby within two months—and they were about to be evicted from the furnished room they had been occupying. Both were in despair, when we heard of their plight through a neighbor, and published a request for help.

That was their situation several weeks ago. The following letter tells how their prospects changed, and how the change was brought about:

"Dear Sally Joy Brown: It is hard to come down to earth, and that is why I haven't written before this to thank you and all the others. But don't think we're not grateful, when I truly think my life was saved.

"The first we knew about it was when we had word from you that some one had offered us a room for a week or two until we got straightened around. My husband and I didn't quite know what to make of it—but we knew we weren't going to be in the street, and that was wonderful. Then late that afternoon a man called and left a fine blue suit; in fact, a complete outfit, hat, shoes, and all, for my husband—and it put new courage into both of us, for we felt that it would be much easier for him to get work looking presentable. He didn't get work the next day, but he did by the end of the week, and then how happy we were! It was like being saved when you were drowning!

"Now we have a room of our own that we can pay for. My husband is making enough to pay for food and rent, with a little more, and we'll make it go farther soon, because we've been given some furniture and we can take an unfurnished room, which will be cheaper. And I have received a lot of clothes for the little one, and we are just bursting with happiness.

"You'll hear more from us soon, because we're going to be able soon to help somebody in the same wonderful way we have been helped—and we won't lose a minute letting you know when that time comes! B. N."

Doesn't that letter tell its own story? And simple gifts did it all—gifts of outgrown clothing, furniture that wasn't needed, and the like. Weren't they worth while, when they did so much, and wouldn't you be glad to do the same for some of those in need?

Needs an Overcoat.

"Has some reader of your column a medium weight winter overcoat in fair condition to give? I am a tubercular patient and am greatly in need of a coat, size 42, and as I have no money coming in I have nothing to spend on clothes. I would also appreciate books. M. H. H."

When we pass by these big hospitals of ours we sometimes have fleeting, wondering thoughts concerning the inmates and what they do all day long. They are pretty lonesome—most of them—for the things of the outside world, you may be sure

On Orphans' Behalf.

"We are running a day nursery and would greatly appreciate the donation of a phonograph, if there is one somewhere no longer in use. The music would afford a great deal of pleasure to the children, and we have wanted one for some time, but have not had money to spend in that way. We should also be glad to receive any contribution of records. M. S."

Any gift to this institution will be enjoyed not by one but by many children, and the tots do love music. These little ones are without mothers in the day time, and are of necessity missing the individual attention that only a parent can give. "Old King Cole," "Peter, Peter, Pumpkin Eater," and a great many of the other Mother Goose favorites have been adapted to music and would delight these children.

"THE old order changeth!"

Perhaps the triangle drama is not destined to be eternal, after all, for at the Chicago this week we are offered something new in the way of movie diversions: a human quadrangle. Instead of the hoary combination of a lady and two men, this play presents a lady with three admirers to spoil her peace of mind.

If movies were as wise as the subtitles try to make them, the male fan would long ago have lost every shred of curiosity about the vagaries of the opposite sex. Almost every picture puts us wise to some startling feminine secret, thus robbing the fair sex of the charm of mystery which is rightfully theirs. The pearl of wisdom which the opening subtitle of this film casts to us is that "In every woman's life there are three men—the man she could have married, the man she should have married, and the man she did marry." After thus casually intimating that the first plunge into holy matrimony is likely to be disastrous, the plot begins to unwind itself.

MARC MAC DERMOTT
His performance your reason for seeing this film.

One Complication After Another.

Sally Lansdale, the heroine, is urged by her worldly wise mamma to wed Count Coti Desanges a middle aged Frenchman whose fortune enables him to breed the swiftest race horses on the continent. Sally, however, fancies a rival of Coti's, Charles Carleton, who persuades her to elope and sail at once for America. In their hurry to catch the boat they are forced to omit the formality of being united by a clergyman, so they decide to have the knot tied on their arrival in New York.

The first night out on the ocean liner Coti overtakes them and tells Sally that her husband-to-be already has one wife. In order to save her from the ensuing scandal and because he really loves her, Coti marries the girl immediately and then leaves her in her stateroom, after assuring her that she may start divorce proceedings just as soon as they reach New York.

Her First and Only Love.

The next morning Sally learns that one of the passengers on board is Julian Greer, who, it seems, was her first and only love. Julian's efforts to converse with Sally cause him to fall into the angry sea. Coti plunges in, and is successful in rescuing the young man, but he himself gets hit by the life boat, with the result that he is paralyzed and can never move again. Sally and Julian stick with him, performing enough of self-sacrifice to justify their happy marriage after his death and to bring this complicated romance to a sane ending.

CLIMATE RUDE TO SPANISH GRANDEES

By Grace Kingsley.

LOS ANGELES, Cal.—[Special Correspondence.]—Their graces, the duke and duchess of Alba; the duke and duchess of Penaranda, not to mention the marquis of Coquilla, have been insulted. And the chamber of commerce boys are in tears. For the boasted southern California climate behaved so rudely while they were here that—well—they might easily have been beaned by falling trees or drowned. And just as Mary and Doug had outdone themselves, too, to show up so-called sunny Spain.

You see, Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks had chartered a yacht and built a luxurious camp on Catalina island, thirty miles off the Los Angeles coast, erecting gay colored tents, building a special landing, and what not. But no sooner had the party arrived than that awful windstorm arose, blew tents over on the noble visitors, and threatened them with falling eucalyptus trees. They couldn't fish, much less swim. But Doug did brave the fifty mile gale and find a little cove where they all went in bathing safely, but—ugh! it was cold!

"We went over for a good time, and here we had a regular motion picture time!" wailed Mary.

The party had left the yacht at Avalon, several miles away, and had gone to the camp in a smaller sailboat. With this they were forced to return to Avalon, the gale keeping up and the rolling of the seas so terrific that the sailboat threatened to capsize. However, it made the trip in safety, but the visitors and their hosts were forced to go home on the large boat Catalina, and even over this the seas dashed madly.

Visitors Head for Chicago.

But their graces, being Spanish, expressed themselves politely as thoroughly delighted, and behaved like the thoroughbreds they are, smiling sweetly and saying they had heard there really was a wild and woolly west but didn't know it involved the climate.

The visitors are now leaving the west for Chicago. A portion of the party left yesterday for San Francisco and will go thence to the Windy city. The others went to the Grand canyon and will join the remainder of the party in that city.

What do you think those Spanish grandees did? Chewed gum! Yes, ma'am!

Whether out of compliment to Mr. Wrigley, who owns Catalina island, or not is not known. Anyhow, they did. And they said they loved it. But wouldn't it be awful if it became a Spanish fad? Imagine the romantic, dashing Spanish lover, instead of smoking a cigaret, snapping a wad of chewing gum!

Work Comes First; Romance Must Wait.

How art does interfere with romance, to be sure!

Kenneth Harlan and Marie Provost were married on Tuesday. They can't go to Honolulu, where the ukuleles sing to their mates, but must be content to look at spots in California they oft have visited before. Of course, the honeymoon lens will be on, so the scenery will doubtless look prettier.

Betty Compson and James Cruze were also married on Tuesday night at Betty's home in Flint Ridge, a suburb of Los Angeles.

Eddie Lowe and Lilyan Tashman expect to be married early next year. At present they are working together in their first picture.

"It is funny to look at the rushes and see myself embrac-

Makers of Music Advance in Force

By Edward Moore.

THE person who contemplates the musical situation hereabouts today, or, for that matter, almost any time this season, may well be pardoned if he wishes that, in Mrs. Malaprop's priceless phrase, he were, like Cerberus, three gentlemen at once. For on the left he is confronted by Geraldine Farrar and her "Carmen" company; on the right by Paul Whiteman and his orchestra; on the center by Tito Schipa and his tenor voice; here and there and everywhere by several more music makers.

Strategic positions having been previously prepared, the advance will take place at once.

Miss Farrar is to appear at the Auditorium in what her manager calls a modernized version of the Bizet opera. Just what can be done to "Carmen" to modernize it is not so apparent in advance, but it seems that she uses a company of principals, an orchestra, ballet, scenery, and no chorus.

TITO SCHIPA, in concert recital at the Auditorium tonight. [Lumiere Photo.]

Apparently the process of modernization becomes to a certain extent a process of abbreviation. The principals, in addition to Geraldine herself, are Emma Noe, Neira Riegger, Giuseppe Lombardo, Luigi Pasinati, and Joseph Royer. The conductor is Carlo Peroni.

Program a History of Jazz.

Then comes Mr. Whiteman, who is in a fair way to fame and fortune by having taken the muse of jazz by the scruff of her unkempt neck, washing her face, scrubbing her fingers, and teaching her table manners. At present she would seem to be a favored figure in our best society, musical and otherwise. Every one is crowding for an introduction, for she has a pretty, if not always delicate, wit.

Just before his death Victor Herbert composed a suite of four brief serenades for the Whiteman orchestra. They will be on this afternoon's program. Deems Taylor and John Powell are reported to be preparing scores. Ernest Schelling has taken for his autumn task the construction of a piece for Ross Gorman, a member of the orchestra who plays an incredible number of instruments—fifteen, if my memory is correct. The manager of Guy Maier and Lee Pattison is approached with the suggestion that they appear with the orchestra, and responds that, of course, they will not; they, when the matter is put up to them personally, amend the statement by saying that if the time can be arranged they will be delighted to do just that. And so it goes.

Mr. Whiteman's program is practically a compendious history of jazz, beginning with the time when one-steps were noisy and discordant, carrying through the period when manners began to improve and scoring become more clever, borrowing themes here and there, adapting other tunes to dance rhythms, and ending with a piece whose assault has disturbed the fortresses of the conventions about as much as any, the "Rhapsody in Blue." This is a piece for piano and orchestra in which the gauds and ribbons of jazz have been affixed to the winter garment of an extended orchestral form.

The Whiteman orchestra numbers twenty-five men, and they play at one time and another seventy instruments. They range in versatility all the way from Mr. Gorman, who plays nearly everything that can be blown into, down to the mere tyros, the amateurs of jazz, who are conversant with only three or four instruments apiece. Three pianos are only one incident in the traveling equipment of the organization.

If you care to be educated in the musical customs of the

WEEK'S PLAYS ARE A DEPRESSING LOT

By Burns Mantle

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—The newer drama has been particularly rough on its participants. In one play, "The Red Falcon," a convent is besieged by a band of marauders led by the flashy cutthroat who plays the titular rôle. Here the mother superior is made victim of his desires as the price of immunity from attack for the other sisters.

In "The Fake" a gentleman of England, seeing a sort of younger sister by adoption being mistreated by her husband, who is a drug addict and brutal, calmly puts poison in that gentleman's drink and escapes the consequences of his crime by fashioning a perfect alibi.

In "The Crime in the Whistler Room" a young girl picked up by an honest spinster who would send her to Vassar is so burdened by the atmosphere of respectability into which she is thrust that she is led to give up all her chances of a better life and higher education, and runs away with the worthless young radical who is the father of her child, though he refuses to acknowledge it.

In "The Saint" a Texas cowboy, bent on taking orders at a Franciscan seminary near the border, runs away with a tough girl of a traveling tent show. She loves him for a time, but soon tires of his still evident saintliness and ditches him for a flashier knife thrower. Whereupon the cowboy, contemplating murder, changes his mind and goes back to the range to commune with the cows, a much sadder and wiser man.

Only one of the week's grist of plays, and they continue to come in at the rate of five and six a week, boasts any humor. That is a Devonshire comedy called "The Farmer's Wife," which the Coburns, Mr. and Mrs., have imported from London.

By the Author of "Spring Cleaning."

Of the depressing samples I extracted entertainment from but one. "The Fake" at least has story value. Written by the Frederick Lonsdale whose "Spring Cleaning" you may remember, it is at least an interesting query play, the query being: When, and under what circumstances, is murder justifiable, if ever?

In this instance you have no sympathy at all with the drug addict who is put out of the way. Being of the nobility, his marriage to the sweet heroine was arranged by her father, who was socially ambitious. Father is the fake of the title. And even after he knows his daughter is miserably abused he tries to get her to put up with her misery for the sake of the family name.

Seeing that nothing can be done about it, Geoffrey Sands, being a perfect and gallant gentleman, invites the offending husband, Sir Gerald Pillick, on a pleasure hunting expedition to the shores of St. Margaret's bay. Once there, Geoffrey tells Pillick what he thinks of him, and suggests that if he would kindly walk off the cliffs and dash out his worthless brains he would have achieved at least one honorable act in a rotten life.

Sir Gerald, however, is not sufficiently noble for that sacrifice. So Geoffrey is forced to resort to murder. He drops the poison in Sir Gerald's drink, after having tricked him into admitting to a chambermaid that he is seriously considering self-destruction. Then he calmly implants the fingerprints of the dead man on the poison case and calls the coroner.

The unhappy wife is greatly cheered by this being made a widow, and is practically affianced to the juvenile of the cast as the curtain falls. "The Fake" is well played, particularly by Godfrey Tearle, a half brother of Conway Tearle of the cinemas, who has appeared in America but once before

Juliets and Follies, Potters and Willies

By Frederick Donaghey.

HAD I been asked three or four years ago to name fifteen actresses in the English-speaking theater who might be regarded as possible Juliets, I should have put Miss Jane Cowl at the foot of the list: that is, if she had occurred to me with regard for the part. I am unable to say who the fourteen others might have been; I wasn't asked, and, so, I didn't give a thought to Miss Cowl or to anybody else. I've been going through a minor lifetime with no better Juliet in my experience than Miss Marlowe; and she, at her best, lacked some of the attributes, although she possessed more than any other actress I've yet seen in what is actually one of the great rôles of drama. . . . The point of which preamble is that Miss Cowl appears to have persuaded a great many literate persons that she is about right when she acts Juliet. She will be new to me in the rôle tomorrow night; and that is new enough, although she has been active therein through many performances. . . .

CHARLES KING
He's among the somebodies in the seventeenth Ziegfeld Follies.

Apart from her venture with it, the tragedy has defied successful revival (save in repertoire) in recent years. . . . Charles Frohman went to a great deal of labor in behalf of Miss Maude Adams as Juliet, studding her support with de-facto stars, and projecting a réclame that was costly and comprehensive beyond anything else in kind I recall; and Miss Adams was a woeful error in the part. Later, a like enterprise was undertaken for Miss Eleanor Robson; and the results, too, were like. My recollection is that Miss Robson's company was better and, perhaps, more costly than Miss Adams': the latter had Mr. Faversham as Romeo and Mr. Hackett as Mercutio; while Miss Robson's players in the respective parts were Kyrle Bellew and the talented Eben Plympton. . . . Miss Barrymore took up Juliet about the time Miss Cowl first acted the rôle, and is said by those who saw her in it to have been most injudicious in having done so.

Refashioning the Seventeenth Follies.

I am informed by disinterested gossips who saw the entertainment last week in Detroit that Mr. Ziegfeld has made a good chore of pouring the 1924 vintage called "Keen Kool!" into the old bottle which was last year's Follies in New-York. That was the issue for whose premiere he imposed a toll of twenty-two dollars a seat, and gave to those of his patrons with quantitative minds their money's worth by keeping them in the theater until after two o'clock in the morning. . . . The trouble with the 1923 (or seventeenth) Follies in its Manhattan aspect was that it was subnormal in the item of laughter;—and that is the trouble with more than nine in every eleven of the so-called revues staged in this country. . . .

Travelers returned within the last two or three days from the workshop of the Ten-Millionth Ford say that most of the contents of "Keep Kool!" fit nicely into Mr. Urban's lovely frames, and that Mr. Ziegfeld, when hard-pressed to compile a roster of performers for touring, was shrewd and sensible in buying and dismantling the smaller entertainment in order to become possessed of its assets for the Follies.

Second thoughts on last week's new plays do not carry far beyond what was set down in the next-morning reports. . . . "The Potters" takes its due place among recent surveys of what Henry James and the Manhattan critics are in agreement in calling the American Scene. It is in

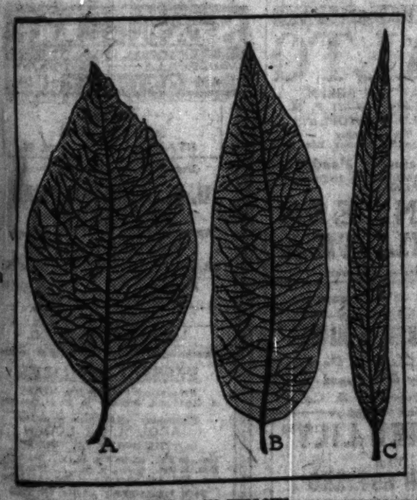
THE OUTLINE OF SCIENCE

EDITED BY Professor J. ARTHUR THOMSON

A PLAIN STORY SIMPLY TOLD . . . . . XLIV.—AS REGARDS HEREDITY



HEREDITY IN WILLOWS.
[After Wiesner.]
A, a broad-leaved variety, the one parent.
C, a narrow-leaved variety, the other parent.
B, the hybrid offspring, intermediate between the two. This has an appearance of blending, but it may be a case of imperfect dominance, as in the Andalusian fowls. Or it may be that the shape of the leaf depends upon a number of Mendelian unit characters which are not linked together, but produce an appearance of blending by their fortuitous distribution in the offspring. If some come from the one parent and some from the other they may neutralize one another, with an apparent "blend" as the result.

DARWIN was one of the first to show that the mysterious problems of heredity could be attacked scientifically, and his cousin, Sir Francis Galton, went much farther. But it is unfortunate that neither of them knew anything about the Abbé Mendel, who published papers in 1865 which have revolutionized the whole subject. His work remained practically unknown till 1900.

There are three fundamental ideas in Mendelism. The first is the idea of "unit-characters," and this requires a little patience. By an inheritance is meant what the living creature is or has to start with, when it is represented by a fertilised egg cell. Now, it has been discovered that an inheritance is, in part, built up of numerous more or less clear cut, crisply defined, nonblending characters which are continued in some of the descendants as definite wholes, neither merging nor dividing. We may think of the color of the eye, the quality of the hair, the shape of the nose. Strictly speaking, what lies in the inheritance is not the character as seen in the adult, but a germinal representative (technically called a "factor" or "gene") of the character. The full grown character, say the shape of the nose, is, as it were, a product of the germinal representative and the surrounding influences which operate during development. It is also necessary to understand that an adult character, like the quality of the hair, may be represented in the germ cell by several factors. Moreover, one germinal factor—for example, the initiative for developing dark pigment—may influence several characters in the adult.

If a man has his fingers all thumbs—that is, with two joints instead of three—this peculiarity (called "brachydactylism") is sure to be continued in a certain proportion of his descendants; and we call it a "unit-character." The persistence of the Hapsburg lip in the royal houses of Austria and Spain is a good instance of how a unit-character comes to stay for many generations. Night blindness, or the inability to see in dim light, has been traced through a lineage since near the beginning of the seventeenth century—another illustration of the persistence of a unit-character. We do not precisely know what the germinal factors of the unit-characters are like, but in some cases it is known that they lie in linear order in the nuclear rods or chromosomes. In some instances (though it is impossible in a few words to explain how) we know what region of the chromosome the factor occupies. But the most important point is that the unit-characters (or their factors) behave as if they were definite entities, like the radicals in chemistry, which can be shuffled about and distributed to the offspring in some degree independent of one another. Thus in the lineage of the night blind it was not every individual that showed the peculiarity, but only a certain proportion in each generation.

In his masterly book on Mendelism Prof. R. C. Punnett refers to a unit-character as follows: "Unit-characters are represented by definite factors in the gamete [or germ cell], which, in the process of heredity, behave as indivisible entities, and are distributed according to a definite scheme. The factor for this or that unit-character is either present in the gamete or it is not present. It must be there in its entirety or be completely absent."

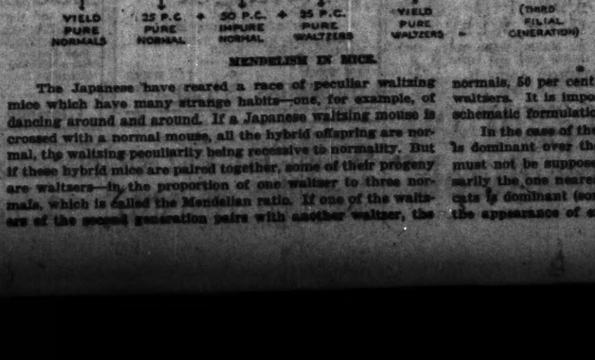
Dominant and Recessive Characters.

THE second fundamental idea in Mendelism is that of dominance. When Mendel crossed a pure bred tall pea with a pure bred dwarf pea the offspring were all tall. So he called the quality of tallness dominant to the recessive quality of dwarfness, which the hybrid offspring kept, as it were, up their sleeve. The dwarfness is not expressed in the hybrid peas, but it must be part of the inheritance, for it reappears in a quarter of the progeny of the hybrids if these are inbred or allowed to self-fertilise.



MENDELISM IN MICE.

The Japanese have reared a race of peculiar waltzing mice which have many strange habits—one, for example, of dancing around and around. If a Japanese waltzing mouse is crossed with a normal mouse, all the hybrid offspring are normal, the waltzing peculiarity being recessive to normality. But if these hybrid mice are paired together, some of their progeny are waltzers—in the proportion of one waltzer to three normals, which is called the Mendelian ratio. If one of the waltzers of the second generation pairs with another waltzer, the progeny are all waltzers, which shows that the factor for normal locomotion has disappeared from the inheritance along this line.

It is a curious fact that one of these second generation waltzers might be conscientiously sold in the market as a pure waltzer, although its grandparents likewise. To return to the beginning, if a waltzing mouse is crossed with a normal mouse, all the offspring will be normal. Normality is dominant; waltzing is recessive. If these normal hybrids pair, their offspring will be 25 per cent pure waltzers and 75 per cent apparently normal mice. But of the 75 per cent apparently normal a third will be pure normals, yielding nothing but normals when bred with others like themselves. But the other two-thirds, though apparently normal, have, like their immediate parents, the waltzing character in their sleeves, for when they are paired together they yield 25 per cent pure normals, 50 per cent apparent normals, and 25 per cent pure waltzers. It is impossible to keep this in mind without some schematic formulation such as the above.

MENDELIAN INHERITANCE IN WHEAT.—A, Stand-up wheat, with no beard, the one parent. B, Bearded wheat, the other parent. C, The hybrid offspring, with no beard. This shows that the beardless condition is dominant and the bearded condition recessive. (After E. H. Rifen.)

In the case of the mice the character of normal locomotion is dominant over the recessive character of waltzing, but it must not be supposed that the dominant character is necessarily the one nearest the normal type. Thus a short tail in cats is dominant (somewhat imperfectly) to the ordinary tail; the appearance of extra toes in poultry is dominant to the presence of the normal four toes; hornlessness in cattle is dominant to the presence of horns.

Among the many characters which are now known to exhibit Mendelian inheritance, the following may be cited, the dominant condition being named first in each case: Normal hair and long Angora hair in rabbits and guinea pigs; kinky hair and straight hair in man; crest and no crest in poultry; bandless shell in the wood snail and banded shell; yellow cotyledons in peas and green ones; round seeds in peas and wrinkled forms; absence of awn in wheat and its presence; susceptibility to rust in wheat and immunity to this disease; two-rowed ears of barley and six-rowed ears; markedly toothed margin in nettle leaves and a slightly toothed margin. Why one character should be dominant and another recessive is not known; a positive feature, like a banded shell in the snail, may be recessive; and a negative feature, like hornlessness in cattle, may be dominant.

It should be noted that in many cases of Mendelian inheritance the dominance in the offspring is not complete; thus, if black Andalusian fowls be crossed with white ones, the progeny are "blue" Andalusians—a sort of diluted black. These "blue" Andalusians do not breed true; when paired together they yield 50 per cent blacks, and 25 per cent peculiar whites splashed with gray.

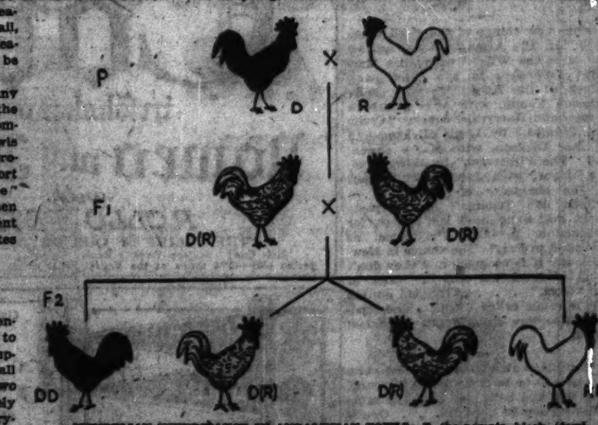
Results of Interbreeding.

THE third fundamental idea in Mendelism is perhaps more difficult to grasp than the others. Mendel supposed that the hybrid between the tall pea and the dwarf pea produced two kinds of germ cells in approximately equal numbers—one contingent carrying the factor for tallness and the other contengent carrying the factor for dwarfness. In other words, each germ cell is "pure" with respect to the factor of any particular unit-character. Supposed a long-haired rabbit crossed by a short-haired rabbit; the offspring will be all short-haired. But out of eight ova produced by a female hybrid offspring, four will have the factor for long hair and four the factor for short hair. Similarly, out of eight sperm cells produced by a male hybrid offspring, four will have the factor for long hair and four the factor for short hair. Suppose these hybrids interbreed and the fertilisation of the ova by the spermatozoa is fortuitous; then two egg cells with the short hair factor will be fertilised by two sperm cells with the short hair factor, yielding two quite pure short-haired offspring; two egg cells with the long hair factor will be fertilised by two sperm cells with the long hair factor, yielding two quite pure long-haired offspring; two egg cells with the short hair factor will be fertilised by two sperm cells with the long hair factor, yielding two impure short-haired offspring like the hybrid parents; and, finally, two egg cells with the long hair factor will be fertilised by two sperm cells with the short hair factor, yielding other two impure short-haired offspring like the hybrid parents. So the result must be two pure short-haired offspring, plus four impure short-haired offspring, plus two pure long-haired offspring. If the impure short-haired rabbits are interbred, their offspring (the third filial generation) will show the same ratio, 1:2:1, more and more exactly the larger the numbers dealt with.



MENDELIAN INHERITANCE IN ANDALUSIAN FOWLS.—P, the parents, black (dominant) and white (recessive). F1, the hybrid generation, "blue" Andalusians, illustrating imperfect dominance. F2, the second filial generation: 25 per cent pure blacks ("extracted pure dominants"), DD; 50 per cent "blues" (impure dominants), D (R); and 25 per cent whites (extracted recessives), with occasional black spots (RR). (After Bartlebire.)

Germinal Continuity.

ONE of the great post-Darwinian advances is the recognition of the fact of germinal continuity—made clear by Galton and Weismann. While most of the material of the fertilized ovum is used to build up the body of the offspring, undergoing in a puzzling way differentiation into nerve and muscle, blood and bone, a residue is kept intact and unspecialized to form the beginning of the reproductive organs of the offspring, whence will be launched in due course another organism on a similar voyage of life. The reproductive cells of any organism are the outcome of embryonic cells which did not share in the upbuilding of that organism, but continued the germinal tradition unaltered. This is suggested clearly in a diagram slightly modified from one devised by Prof. E. B. Wilson. Thus the parent is rather the trustee of the germ plasm than the producer of the child. In a new sense the child is a chip of the old block. The old question was: Does the hen make the egg, or the egg the hen? The modern answer is that the fertilised egg makes the hen and the eggs thereof. The fact of germinal continuity explains the inertia of the main mass of the inheritance, which is carried on with little change from generation to generation. Similar material to start with; similar conditions in which to develop; therefore, like tends to beget like. As Prof. Bergson puts it, "life is like a current passing from germ to germ through the medium of a developed organism."

Juliets and Follies, Potters and Willies

By Frederick Donaghey.

possession of some of the photographic and phonographic qualities of that list of pieces topped by "The First Year." Mr. Potter's life is full and it is amusing as life goes in the plays and in existence; and what takes place these nights on the stage of the Great Northern is essential drama to so many persons that I shall be puzzled if the play fail to catch the general fancy. . . . Reading Mr. McEvoy's dialogues when they were Sunday stuff of THE TRIBUNE, I had taken the idea that Mamie Potter had a bit more of class than she betrays in the play, and that the Potters, as a unit, were not so gauche and indelicate as their behavior at breakfast in the first scene would indicate. But, then, this is the business of Mr. McEvoy and his public; and, after all, the play ran for months in New York, which knows all about class and table conduct.

The especial qualities of "Expressing Willie" that have kept it in profitable exhibition in New York since mid-April elude me. It is, perhaps, as good a comedy as the critics there say it is; and most of them say that there isn't any better comedy. As I am unable to believe that I am wrong about it, they must be: that seems to me to be the simplest explanation. . . . I can without difficulty think of the piece as better entertainment if acted with more skill and resource than are put into it by the actors sent to the Princess by the Equity Players,—although, for the matter of that, the New York cast, while containing some well-knowns, is starless. . . .

There is chatter that somebody will be brought on to take over Miss Julia Hoyt's rôle of the rube pianist, and that Miss Hoyt will be moved into the part of the perfumed slicker-lady who goes to Willie's bedroom to entrap him. . . . That might help: something would depend on the new actress. And, if the aim of the Equity Players be to better the performance here, I suggest that they start by sending along a stage director.

THIS-AND-THAT

The Equity Players are said to be getting ready to put on Lord Dunsany's "If."—in New York, of course. The play was staged in London at least three years ago, and was successful, from all accounts; and it was published in this country more than two years ago. . . . It is so good a comedy in kind that the delay in producing it here is inexplicable. One explanation, that an actor for the principal part is hard to find, is absurd; for the rôle was played in the London performances by Henry Ainley, who is not among the world's good actors.

Miss Florence Reed is to get a chance in New York tomorrow night in "Ashes," the play by Reginald Goode she recently tried out in Minneapolis, where it was said to be great stuff. . . . And Robert Loraine and Miss Katherine Cornell will be seen there vis-à-vis Tuesday night, in "Tiger-Cats," which has been a talked-about play in Paris and London. The author is Mrs. Karen Bramson, a Dane.

Madame Simone, using Rostand's "L'Aiglon" as her first play, also starts tomorrow night in New York. Her plan is to change the bill Monday for an engagement of six weeks, so that she will have given six plays, one of which will be Sardou's "Madame Sans-Gêne." . . . It was in 1900 that Miss Maude Adams acted in an English version of "L'Aiglon," and in that year that Bernhardt and Coquelin, as co-stars, also acted it in this country in the original text. The title-part was among the best of Bernhardt's later-day conveyances. . . . As to "Madame Sans-Gêne," three decades have passed since Miss Katherine Kidder (now Mrs. Louis K. Anspacher) bought the American rights of the comedy and toured in it. It was an item in the répertoire of Irving and Terry in 1901-02, when they made their last visit to Chicago as co-stars.

Of five plays made known in New York last week, Molnar's "The Guardsman" would appear to be most successful. It is built on the old, old notion of a jealous husband's disguising himself and making love to his wife to test her fidelity. The reviewers say that Alfred Lunt and his wife, known to the public as Miss Lynn Fontanne, are capital in the principal rôles.

Other new things of the week there were "In His Arms," by the author of "Meet the Wife!" with Miss Margaret Lawrence in the chief part; "Cock of the Roost," by Mrs. Rida Johnson Young, with Miss Elisabeth Risdon and Harry Davenport; "Clubs Are Trumps," by Leslie Hickson and W. Lee Dickson, with Harry Green; and "The Firebrand," by Edwin Justus Mayer, with Joseph Schildkraut in the character of Cellini. . . . "Clubs Are Trumps" is the piece about golf announced last season for production in the Playhouse as "Around in Par." The critics in New York say it is no good; and they don't seem to think too well of "Cock of the Roost." . . . A second edition of the revue called "Artists and Models" also was brought out there last week.

Two plays about Benjamin Franklin are said to be in preparation for early showing; and both now have the same title—"Poor Richard." . . . One is by Philip Barry, author of "You and I," shown a year ago in the Playhouse with H. B. Warner in the principal part. . . . The other, which has been previously mentioned in this department of THE TRIBUNE, is by Louis Evan Shipman, and is talked of as something wherein Maclyn Arbuckle may perform.

To Chicago Folks:

"For a solid year I have been fretting and stewing around New York, trying to bring the first company of The Potters to my home town—to Chicago. It was pleasant enough, of course, that New York wouldn't let The Potters get away, but all the time I kept you in mind.

"And now The Potters are here at the Great Northern, and I want to thank you for the downright glorious reception you gave it the opening night and for the way you have been flocking to it ever since. I felt that you knew that I had written The Potters for you, and I had done just that—honestly! I wanted to entertain you, to make you laugh a little if I could and cry a little if I had to, and to send you back home with a warm, comfortable feeling around the heart.

"Well, you've been fine to me but you haven't been the only ones. The critics (I am one author who can honestly say: God bless 'em)—well, here are a few of the nice things they said about:

"THE POTTERS"

Mr. Stevens, Herald-Examiner: There is the heart-beat of life in it. I wouldn't sell your pleasure in seeing it for five dollars. A corking comedy, matchless, mirthful and moving.

Mr. Hall, Journal: Each of the twelve scenes is a bit of life viewed at a comic angle. Donald Meek plays Pa Potter with faultless life-likeness.

Mr. Collins, Post: The perfect American comedy. So real that the actors seem to be living rather than acting. A perfect performance.

Miss Cassidy, Journal of Comm.: A hilarious success.

Mr. McQuigg, American: A play of a thousand American homes. A kick in it every minute.

Mr. Donaghey, Tribune: Good fun. A human, merry play. I expect that it will be popular in Chicago. A good show.

Miss Leslie, News: Sensational laughs. Capital entertainment. A ribald laughing hit. Go and see it.

It's been worth the year's wait to be greeted like this and I am humbly and deeply grateful. Sincerely, J. P. McEVOY.

Odds-and-Ends of Stage-News

The Paris papers are raving again over Balieff and the Chauve-Souris. The program is described as new save for the Parade of the Wooden Soldiers, which serves the enterprise as "Casey at the Bat" serves De Wolf Hopper. . . . Mr. Gest is bringing the Chauve-Souris back to this country about the end of the year.

Miss Barrymore is to have her New-York ordeal as Paula Tanqueray next week. . . . Miss Billie Burke is said by the Baltimore reviewers to have a bang-up show in "Annie Dear," which is the most recent title of the made-over "Good Gracious, Annabelle!" She, too, goes into New-York next week.

Raymond Hitchcock, who hasn't clicked as sharply as of old in his job as compère of Hassard Short's Revue, is to go into a comedy called either "The Big Sap" or "Eighteen-Per": the owners aren't certain which title they'll use.

Weber and Fields are together again, for some weeks of the two-a-day. . . . And Willie and Eugene Howard also are taking money in the varieties, the while somebody finds something for them to do in New-York's Winter Garden.

Miss Charlotte Walker is to have the principal part in an imported comedy named "Comédienne." . . . "School Belles," the tuned-up version of the comedy called "The Charm-School," has been toured a bit, and then sent to the garage.

Miss Edna Hibbard, who has acted in Chicago unimportantly in two or three unimportant plays, is named as the principal performer in "A Lady of the Evening," by Milton Gropper, part-author of "New Toys." . . . Mr. Belasco numbers the play among his enterprises of the season.

William Courtney is to be with Miss Lenore Ulric in "The Harem," by Vajda, who wrote "Grounds for Divorce" and "Fata Morgana." . . . In a play called "March On!" by Howard Irving Young, the principal character is Napoleon reincarnated, the period being today.

Henry Hull, who hasn't been getting ahead in recent seasons, is to make a new effort in "The Prisoner," by Dana Burnett, who has written some neat storiettes for the magazines.

Gregory Kelly is rehearsing in a piece by Max Marcin named "Badges," wherein he will play a detective who has learned the business by correspondence. . . . Frank Craven, eager to produce plays, starts with one of his own, "New Brooms," which was called "Fool's Hill" when he recently tried it out in Milwaukee. He is not to act in it.

"High Tide" is now the name of a play which was called "The Clam-Digger" when tried out in California some time ago. . . . Cosmo Hamilton's "Parasites," in which Miss Francine Larrimore is to act, is a play of his formerly known as "Society."

"The latest Chicago success is 'White Cargo'—a subsidiary company; since the original troupe still holds the boards of Daly's Theater."—George S. Kaufman in today's New-York Times. . . . You'd best take a look at the original cast down there, George: its important members are acting here in the Cort. That is, members of what you call the original cast. The first actor of the grouchy Witzel was A. C. Anson; and the original Tondeleyo was Miss Annette Margules, who gave up the part months and months ago.

Miss Adèle Astaire and her brother, Fred, are returning to the United States to take part in something called "Black-Eyed Susan." . . . They have been playing in England in an American piece, called "For Goodness Sake!" on this side and "Stop Flirting!" over there.

The critics in New-York called "The Easy Mark," one of the season's new plays, a joke; but its producers don't think so, and are keeping it in view with the usual philosophy—"Well, now, there was the case of 'Abie's Irish Rose'!" F. D.

Princeton-Watson:

"Quick, Jack give me my smelling salts."

"Good heavens, Polly; what's happened?"

"I think I'm going to die."

"Die! You can't die here; we just cleaned up this stage and we don't want any more dirt around."

"O, this is terrible—where shall I die?"

"Go to New York with a nickel and you'll starve to death."

"O, I'm so nervous."

"What's all this trouble about?"

"I was followed all the way to the theater by a man."

"Followed? By a man?"

"Yes."

"No man would ever follow you. He must have been a simp."

"I suppose my pretty face and form attracted his attention and so he followed me."

"Are you positive the man was following you?"

"O, absolutely so. I'm sure he was following me, because he kept looking around and looking around to see if I was coming."

Gordon and Young:

"So you think you are an artist by drawing that picture of a locomotive? But if you want to see wonderful paintings you ought to see the ones Rubens did."

"Why, what can he do?"

"It is said of him that he could change a laughing face into a sad one by a single stroke."

"Gee, that's nothing wonderful. My school teacher could do that, too."

"Did your school teacher ever teach you the upkeeping of the human body?"

"Sure, I know everything in that line."

"Well, then, see if you can tell me what three foods are required to keep the body in health?"

"Breakfast, dinner, and supper, of course."

"You seem to be quite clever. Now tell me, if your father can do a piece of work in seven days, and your Uncle Jim can do it in nine days, how long would it take both of them to do it?"

"They would never get done."

"Don't talk foolish. Why wouldn't they ever get through?"

"'Cause they would sit down and talk about the different fishes they used to catch."

IN SHAKSPERE AND THE FOLLIES

MISS JANE COWL MISS LINA BASQUETTE

MISS COWL comes for her belated appearance in Chicago as Juliet—a rôle wherein she is become a celebrity since her previous engagement in the neighborhood. As a somebody of the stage in the estimation of theater-goers in this city, she dates back to 1910, when she acted in the late Charles Klein's "The Gamblers." She has been through long engagements since then in "Lilac Time" and "Smilin' Through," respectively. . . . It is possible that, while in Chicago, she will act in "Pelléas and Mélisande," "Antony and Cleopatra," and in Hans Müller's "The Flame," which she has renamed "The Depths."

Miss Basquette is a dancer in the 1924 version of the Ziegfeld Follies of 1925,—the seventeenth issue of the noted annual to be sent to Chicago. . . . The picture provides a good reason for assuming that she belongs in the Ziegfeld Follies, whether or not she dances well.

Week's Plays Are a Depressing Lot

By Burns Mantle

and then in a quick failure called "Carnival." Frieda Inescort is the heroine and Orlando Daly her miserable father.

Jekyll-Hyde in Tone.

There are a number of good acting scenes in "The Red Falcon." The threatened sacking of the convent occurs at the rise of the curtain. The town has been burned, and the bandits are coming. The nuns, fearing the worst, are hysterical and prayerful. The mother superior is the only determined one among them. The Red Falcon is dashing and handsome but a brute at heart. Recognizing her as a sweetheart who would have less to do with him than he demanded when they were both young, he proposes that she spend the night in his camp as the price of saving her charges, and she agrees.

Twenty-eight years later she is the Countessa Felicia and the mother of a son born of that unholy bargain. The boy is a gentle young priest, but burns with passion and a lust for banditry on occasion, whenever the blood of his [to him unknown] father surges within him. He is such a personality as was Dr. Jekyll turned to Hyde, and when he is shown the regalia his bandit father wore, he himself turns bandit and leads a peasant mob on a pillaging tour of the neighboring granaries.

Then he is the priest again, with no memory of his wicked deeds. Again, knowing that he loves the beautiful Clarina, he struggles to remain the priest and marry her to his best friend. But suffering a turn for the worst at the wedding, he suddenly strangles his friend and kisses Clarina full upon the mouth.

Afterward, realizing his weakness must be curbed, he joins the Trappist monks, and forswears the world and human speech for all time, leaving Clarina and his distraught mother to mourn his passing.

McKay Morris, Ethel Barrymore's leading man last season, plays the lead. He is a good actor, but a little over sweet as the gentle priest. A sort of Dr. Jekyll and Mrs. Hyde, some have called him. Thais Lawton is the mother superior, Carlotta Monterey the Clarina, and Albert Bruning a plotting uncle of the young priest.

Two Provincetown Plays.

"The Crime in the Whistler Room" and "The Saint" are both produced by the Provincetown Players. Neither is destined for much popularity, once the subscription list is exhausted.

Of the two, "The Crime" is the more interesting. Written by Edmund Wilson of the New Republic staff, it is a news story treated largely as an editorial. Which is a fault with the intellectual playwright.

The heroine appears to be the victim of a too intimate kindliness on the part of well meaning social workers. It was not respectability that beat her, but rather its more unbending austerities. She had her aspirations, but not the character to realize them. And when she discovered that she was going to have a baby she ran to hide herself among her own class.

"Why worry?" demands the young radical who is the cause of her misfortune; "Why worry? God's dead!"

But she does worry, and the body of the play is taken up with a nightmare which helps her make up her mind to shift for herself. Mary Blair, who was the heroine in "All God's Chillun Got Wings," plays the girl.

"The Saint" was written by Stark Young, also recently of the New Republic but now the dramatic critic of the New York Times. It is dull, tragic, and uninteresting as entertainment. Even the players are unable to inject much life into it.

Leo Carillo, late of the varieties and later of "Lombardi, Ltd." and "Cuneel Blake," plays the Texas cowboy who tries to be a priest, runs away with an actress, becomes a trouper, gives a fine imitation of Charlie Chaplin, and then retires to the range when his sweetheart finds him too saintly to satisfy her demands of a lover. His is a dull performance in the colorless part.

Full of Good Lines.

"The Farmer's Wife" is a character comedy full of good lines spoken by such a parade of funny people in funny clothes as often goes to make up the English farce. The story is of a lonely widower who decides to remarry. With a shopping list of the village eligibles he goes a-wooing. Three comic proposals, with the old gentleman having his pride crushed at each of them, follow. Then he returns home to discover that his real choice is the modest housekeeper who has been with him all the time. She is his bluebird, and promises him happiness. Character, dialect, and dialogue are good, but there is not much fun in character comedy when the characters are unfamiliar.

The Actor Influence.

For the moment at least the ayes have it. The ayes in this instance represent those who insist that it is the actor who makes the play rather than the play the actor.

Eleven years ago in New York there was produced in one of the side street theaters a comedy written originally by Franz Molnar of "The Swan," "Liliom," etc. Called then "Where Ignorance Is Bliss," it was played by William Courtleigh and Rita Jovilet, Mr. Courtleigh having been thrust into the part at the last moment.

The play then proved an amusing but tenuous entertainment and was withdrawn shortly afterward. Monday night of this week it was revived at the Garrick theater by the Theater guild under the title of "The Guardsman," and at the moment is being credited with being the first light comedy success of the year.

And here is where the actor influence enters: The parts are now played by Lynn Fontanne and Alfred Lunt.

These two have acquired a considerable popularity in this capital, and deserved it because of their developing gifts. They picked up "The Guardsman" Monday night and made of it a joyous entertainment.

Conflicting Emotions.

The two parts are those of a jealous actor and his temperamental wife. For six months they have been married and fairly happy. Now they are snapping at each other and he is beginning to notice an ominous restlessness on her part. It is spring, and she has taken to playing Chopin in the shadows.

To test further his suspicions the actor has been sending flowers to his wife and inclosing the card of a Russian guardsman, an attaché, presumably, of the embassy. He also has written her ardent but polite notes, suggesting a meeting. And she, believing her husband is to play three nights in a nearby town, has asked the guardsman to call.

The husband disappears and shortly reappears as the gorgeous Russian. His masquerade is perfect. It is his own supreme test of his art. Either he is a great actor or he isn't. But he is sorely troubled. If he successfully fools his wife and she yields to his pleading he will be a happy actor but a distressed husband. If she repulses him when he is at his best as a lover, while he will be duly grateful as a husband, he will feel that he has failed ignominiously as an actor.

The farce proceeds to the point of the wife's yielding. Then the actor grandly casts off the disguise and boldly accuses her of her impending unfaithfulness. She only laughs at him. She had, she swears, known all the time. She was only helping play out the comedy. And nobody will ever know whether she did or not.

The performances of Mr. Lunt and Miss Fontanne, who are married off stage as well as on, are distinguished by a finesse that is seldom encountered in character comedy portrayals these days, and the play unquestionably gains much through them. Helen Westley is again happily cast as a professional stage mamma, and Dudley Diggs has a bit.

Health Restored By Radium

The wonderful curative power of Radium has been known for years. However, the benefits of this precious health giving substance have in the past been only within the means of persons of wealth.

Since the invention of Degnen's Radio-Active Solar Pad, any man or woman, poor or rich, can afford this treatment which offers so much relief from suffering and disease.

Degnen's Radio-Active Solar Pad is worn next to the body day and night. It pours a constant stream of radio-activ energy into the system while you work, play or sleep, helping to build up weakened nerves and restore to a strong, healthy condition. It creates a vigorous circulation of blood, thus removing congestion, which is the real cause of most diseases.

To prove just what this remarkable treatment can do for you we will send our appliance on trial with the understanding that we will not charge you a cent if it fails to give satisfactory results. This offer is open to any person who has pain of any kind, nerve weakness, high blood pressure, stomach, kidney or liver complaint, bladder trouble, or disease of the lungs or heart.

No matter what your ailment or how long you have had it, we will gladly let you try the appliance at our risk. Write today for free literature giving complete information. Radium Appliance Co., 1407 Bradbury Bldg., Los Angeles, Calif.

New Playbills

What Is Due in the Chicago Theaters as Far Ahead as the Managers Know or Care to Tell About.

OPENING TOMORROW NIGHT:

Miss Jane Cowl as Juliet in the Garrick.—Belated engagement of an actress who has long been popular in Chicago, and is now an eminence by reason of her success elsewhere in a revival of "Romeo and Juliet." . . . The Romeo of the proceedings is Rollo Peters, who is the designer of the costumes and settings, also; and the cast includes Miss Jessie Ralph, as the nurse; Louis Hector, as Tybalt; John Crawley, as Friar Lawrence; and Charles Brokaw, as Mercutio.

The Ziegfeld Follies in the Illinois.—The seventeenth issue of this periodical to reach the Chicago stage. However, it retains from the New-York run [it dates 1922 back there] little more than the mise-en-scène prepared by Josef Urban: the skits, sketches, and some of the maneuvers are from a revue called "Keep Kool!" which ran last Summer in Manhattan. . . . Miss Hazel Dawn, Charles King, Miss Nan Halperin, Johnny Dooley, Miss Lina Basquette, Bert and Betty Wheeler, Miss Edna Leedom, and Lou Hascall are among the performers.

NEXT SUNDAY NIGHT:

"Strange Bedfellows" in the Playhouse.—A comedy by Barry Conners, author of "Applesauce," that last night ended a run of eighteen weeks in New-York. . . . William Courtleigh and Miss Ann Morrison head the cast to be seen in Chicago.

MR. NEWMAN'S THIRD TRAVEL-TALK:

Continuing in Orchestra Hall his new series of Travel-talks called "The Road to Mandalay," H. M. Newman will be heard Wednesday night on "Ceylon and Singapore," illustrated with both "stills and motion-pictures. . . . Extra lectures are announced for November 3 and 9, at 3:30 o'clock.

Undated bookings for Chicago theaters include "Cobra," "The Goose Hangs High," "Cheaper to Marry," "Across the Street," and Miss Jane Cowl in "Rain." . . . Also, it is expected that a second cast will be put together for Chicago performances of "What Price Glory!": that play is still the outstanding success among the new plays of the season in New-York.

Lucky Mr. Lonsdale.

Frederick Lonsdale, with three plays running in this country, is gone back to London to complete a fourth for staging here: it is called "On Approval." . . . The plays on view are "The Fake," newly done in New-York; "Spring Cleaning," known in Chicago; and "Aren't We All?" wherein Cyril Maude is expected to act in the Blackstone after the run of "The Swan."

As to Mr. Maude, he celebrated his fortieth anniversary on the stage last Monday in Boston, where he is acting in Lonsdale's comedy. He started as an actor in this country—out in Denver with the late Daniel Bandmann, a German tragedian, whose dialect was a comic liability of his performances. . . . Returning to London, he rose steadily in importance, and at length became an actor-manager.

Adding an Angle to the Triangle the picture. As the gallant, world weary, thoroughbred Coti he stands out in gentlemanly relief against the other hectic characters of a jazz age. He makes a ridiculous rôle almost sublime, and makes it worth your while to sit through an otherwise worthless movie.

Voice of the Fan

Blaming the Director.

Dear Miss Tinfe: If the casting of Colleen Moore as Salina in Edna Ferber's "So Big" is causing as much discussion everywhere as it is around this little old neck of the woods, it must be by way of becoming a national topic.

Not that we love Colleen less, but we love Salina more. We think Miss Moore, in her line, unexcelled, but can you, by the wildest stretch of your fancy, picture her doing that classic, beauty loving, soul starved Salina? It isn't Miss Moore's fault, certainly; nature simply hasn't given her what it takes to play Salina. It's the dumb director who cast her for it that I'm raving at.

Why, the first thing the audience would do if ever they saw Colleen sitting on top of the vegetable wagon in the old battered hat and coarse dress would probably be to shriek with laughter; and God knows Salina is no comedy character.

I do wish you'd tell us what you yourself think; I don't believe the one who cast her can possibly have read the book. If Colleen Moore gets away with Salina De Jong and makes her convincing, I'll not only consider her one of the greatest living actresses, but I'll never crack a smile if I read that Ethel Barrymore has decided to play Topsy. JAZBO.

Yes—Write Again!

Dear Miss Tinfe: I have just read an article by one who signs herself Eighteen, and condemns "The Female." In my opinion the plot was real, the acting vivid, and Miss Compson and the supporting cast well selected and finished.

I think Eighteen is really writing against the star. And another thing that shows Eighteen is wrong is her wish to mask her identity with a false name.

I have my list of stars and favorites, the same as every one. Some actors' mannerisms I dislike, so I avoid seeing them. Some fans like Conway Tearle. I do not like him, but I do not condemn him as Eighteen does Miss Compson. I avoid seeing him.

Thousands of fans—I'm not exaggerating — avoid costume plays. And many do not get enough of them. Eighteen, I sympathize with you. Let's hope you never see "The Female" or Betty Compson again.

Good-by and good luck. Please invite me to write again. I write a great deal, but I do not talk much.

F. G. P.

KICK KORNER

Its Object; Objection.

Claude Caused This.

Dear Miss Nangle: I cannot refrain from commenting on the remarks made by the person who signed himself Claude De Barry in last Sunday's paper on the movie page. The movie people do make mistakes in casting sometimes, but I would hate to have him make selections of any pictures I intended to see. Imagine anyone wanting Enid Bennett for the princess in "Monsieur Beaucaire!" She is almost enough to spoil any picture for me. She is so sickly sweet and she can't act. Bebe Daniels at least put some pep into the part and made it seem human.

I wonder where Claude De Barry got his information that Valentino was a stable boy. I have read many things about him and never read that. Even if he were, what is Raymond Novarro but a common Mexican Indian? Most of the movie people had humble origins, but that is nothing against them if they behave themselves and can act. I guess Mr. De Barry would find that there was a little more to acting in the movies than he thinks, if he should try it. The last director in the world can't make a stick act, and we have plenty of samples both of good actors and sticks in the movies.

The part of Monsieur Beaucaire called for someone with charm and grace of manner and who could fill that bill so well as Valentino? Navarro is a nice enough boy, but not especially graceful and I couldn't even imagine him in the part of Monsieur Beaucaire. So far as looks goes, neither one of them fitted the description in the book, as Beaucaire was supposed to have yellow hair falling to his shoulders, and a mustache, which he later shaved off to disguise himself. However, that is a mere detail as we usually think of Frenchmen as being brunette and the main thing was to get someone with charm. The critics were unanimous in their praise of "Monsieur Beaucaire" and of Valentino's work in the picture—a most unusual thing for critics—and I imagine they know quite as much—and probably a great deal more—about acting than Mr. De Barry. YOU'LL NEVER THINK IT COST $2,000,000

Because you will be completely lost in its story, completely wrapped up in the fast-whirling adventure and breathless love tale, you will never realize how stupendous are the settings, how immense the crowds, how expensive the stars.
That's the kind of wonder picture you'll see in Cosmopolitan spent $2,000,000 to make this a great story-picture. It didn't spend $2,000,000 to make you gasp at mere show and splendor. It took $2,000,000 to make Charles Major's story gasp and thrill you.

Mr. Sousa's Birthday.

When Lieut. John Philip Sousa brings his well known band to the Auditorium on Nov. 2, he will be 70 years young. It is a not unimportant milestone in an important and interesting career, and America's best beloved bandmaster says that the other day he signed a contract to work twenty years more. After that he may consent to loaf for a year or so. When a man has been in harness all his life it is sometimes advisable to take a little relaxation.

One of the items in Mr. Sousa's birthday celebration here is the not entirely unexpected announcement that two new marches will be on his program. One is the "Ancient and Honorable Artillery," which belongs to Boston; the other is "Marquette University." In token of the latter, you may, if you wish, address the composer as Dr. Sousa.

Those who used to attend operettas a generation or so ago will get a chance to become reminiscent over another feature of the program. It is called "El Capitan and His Friends," and consists of three sets of excerpts from "El Capitan," "The Charlatan," and "The Bride-Elect." Those whose memories do not extend that far will find comfort and cheer in a work called "Music of the Minute," which, they say, is exactly what its title indicates it to be.

Here and There in Music.

Among other events of the week two benefit concerts are to be recorded. Both will take place at Orchestra hall. The first, tomorrow night, will be the first Chicago appearance of Allen McQuhae, Irish tenor. He is to appear under the auspices of the Women's Catholic Order of Foresters of St. Vincent's parish, and the proceeds will be donated to a fund for endowing a chair of home economics at De Paul university. Associated with him on the program will be S. Victor Tufigno, violinist and composer, of the De Paul faculty.

On the night following Ossip Gabrilowitsch, pianist, of Detroit and Anna Burmeister, soprano, of Chicago will appear in joint recital. Here the Alpha Gamma Delta sorority of Northwestern university has charge, and the net intake will be divided between furnishing a dormitory building to be erected on the new woman's campus at Northwestern and assisting the summer camp for poor children which is located near Jackson, Mich.

Four young pianists, Joseph Brinkman, Margaret Farr, Mabel Lyons, and Lillian Magnuson, are looking forward with a certain degree of apprehension to the night of Nov. 19. On that evening they will compete in Orchestra hall for the privilege of appearing as soloist with the Chicago Symphony orchestra in a pair of its concerts. They have already stood first and second in the two contests that have been held by the Society of American Musicians. They will play Liszt's "Hungarian Fantasie," and Mr. Stock and the orchestra will accompany them.

They are saying that news from Mary Garden is not entirely optimistic. Her expected appearances in "The Miracle" were canceled some time ago; it now appears she is canceling some concerts that were booked before the opera season. No word has been received from the opera company regarding her performances here.

The Art institute in its first pair of concerts this afternoon at Fullerton hall will include the largo e mesto movement from Beethoven's sonata, opus 10, No. 3. This will be played in memory of the late Charles L. Hutchinson.

Nicola Berardinelli, a newcoming conductor, will direct an orchestra of forty pieces at the Blackstone theater this afternoon. The soloists will be Elena Aloha, Spanish dramatic soprano, just back from a tour of Europe, and Vittorio Arimondi, basso, and a former member of the Chicago Opera company.

Isador Berger's violin program at Kimball hall this afternoon will include a sonata for piano and violin on Indian themes, the work of Henry Schoenfeld. Another interesting number will be an early concerto by Mozart, in which Mr. Berger will be assisted by the Chicago Civic String quartet.

Wherein the press agent gets rid of a few inhibitions:

"If you pine for the romance of the 'old days,' don't fail to hear Glen Ellison, baritone, and Alta Hill, pianist, on Oct. 23 at 4 o'clock at Lyon & Healy hall. One song will be enough to bring up a picture of the wild adventures of the fierce, black haired Duncans or the gentler pursuits of the Sandy MacGregors. For there is a true Scotch burr on Glen Ellison's tongue that will make even a good American song smell of heather."

The Chicago Artists' association will hold its first concert of the season on Tuesday afternoon at Fine Arts Recital hall. The participants will be Mae Doelling Schmidt, pianist; Fern Van Bramer, harpist; Alice Brown Stout, soprano; Rollin Pease, bass-baritone, and two guest artists, George G. Soeller, flutist, and Mrs. Agnes G. Soeller, soprano.

"Spike" Hamilton, founder and leader of the famous Barbary Coast orchestra at Dartmouth college, is to make his professional debut in Chicago. When the Opera club, 18 West Walton place, holds a reunion of its founder members to celebrate its tenth year in Chicago, in conjunction with its formal opening on Oct. 31, Spike Hamilton will lead a dance orchestra of his own selection. Members of the club who have passed the summer in Europe have imported their own music for the occasion, the newest tango and darkey dances which are to be the rage with dance devotees this winter, which have not yet made their appearance in the east because the music could not be obtained through the regular channels.

Miss Kinsolving sends word of the annual season of five musical mornings bearing her name at the Blackstone hotel. The first will be on Nov. 11, a joint recital by Claudia Muzio, soprano of the Chicago Civic Opera, and Jerome Swinford, baritone. Following at intervals of two weeks will be other joint recitals by Albert Spalding, violinist, and Dusolina Giannini, soprano; Reinald Werrenrath, baritone, and Renée Chemet, violinist; Maria Ivogun, soprano, and Jean Gerardy, cellist, and Elena Gerhardt, soprano, and Rudolph Ganz, pianist.

In addition to the musical mornings Miss Kinsolving will present the London String quartet, the New York String quartet, the Chicago String quartet in a series of ten morning concerts at the Fortnightly and ten Sunday afternoons at the Cordon, Ruth St. Denis, Ted Shawn, and the Denishawn Dancers, the Marmeins—Miriam, Irene, and Phyllis—in their original drama dances, Thomas Wilfred and the clavilux, Tony Sarg's marionettes, Jean Gros' marionette players, Frances Nash, Monica Graham Stults and Walter Allen Stults, Iliff Garrison, Mary Agnes Doyle, Lillian Rehberg, Katharine Foss, Stanislawa Josefowicz, Frederic Freemantel, Leola Turner, and Dvora Dienstova.

The first of the season's recitals on the organ of St. Luke's church, Evanston, will be given on Tuesday evening by Herbert E. Hyde, dean of the American Guild of Organists. He will be assisted by Henry M. Hobart, tenor. Mr. Hyde, who is also superintendent of the Civic Music association, relays the information that the association will donate opera tickets this winter will donate opera tickets this winter to needy and deserving music students. Applications for this benefaction are to be made in writing at his office, 637 Fine Arts building.

A MODERN CARMEN

GERALDINE FARRAR.
[White Photo.]

She has played and sung the same part of "Carmen" many times with the two major opera companies of this country; she is now appearing in what is known as a revised and modernized version of the rôle. She and her company will be at the Auditorium this afternoon.

Climate Rude to Spanish Grandees

By Grace Kingsley.

ing Lilyan," declared Eddie the other night at a dinner party. "I just wondered whether my genuine emotion would spoil my technique—but I'm pleased to find the scenes look just all right!"

It is six years now since Eddie first caught sight of Lilyan in the Follies. And after that, you know, she saw him in "The Walk Offs," asked Walter Catlett to introduce them, and as Walter was Eddie's bosom friend, he readily did so.

Says So Himself.

Virginia Warwick and Jimmie Adams, of the Christie forces, had better luck. They were wed last week. But at that they have waited five years. Not on account of picture work, though, but because Virginia's parents didn't think she was old enough to get married.

The course of true love ran along as smoothly as silk for these two except one time a few weeks ago when Jimmie picked up a paper and saw that a certain Virginia Warwick had eloped with another fellow. His fingers trembled so he could hardly hold the telephone, but he did manage to ring up Virginia, and she trilled him a merry ha ha.

"She's a lovely girl," somebody congratulated Jimmie the other day.

"Of course, she ought to be," retorted Jimmie, "I practically brought her up myself."

Mostly the Engaged.

And while we are on this sweetness and light stuff it would never do to omit an account of Mrs. Pearl Canfield's party given to a number of picture stars. Mrs. Canfield is a sister of Mrs. Antonio Moreno, you see, and knows everybody her sister knows. The party was a regular fiancée affair with a number of engaged people present. Shirley Mason and Harlan Fengler, the auto racer; Marie Prevost and Kenneth Harlan, Sylvia Breamer and her doctor were all there. So were Jackie Saunders and Orville Caldwell, the latter the handsome leading man of "The Miracle" in New York. But, of course, they had just met. Besides, Mr. Caldwell is a married man, and as Coco justly remarks in "The Mikado," "Married men never flirt."

Shirley Mason looked lovely in white satin and black lace; Miss Prevost wore black velvet with white trimmings; Jackie Saunders wore watermelon pink charmeuse trimmed with the same colored ostrich, while Sylvia Breamer was fetching in white velvet trimmed with fox.

It is too bad to introduce a minor note into such a sweet report, but the fact remains that Mae Murray lives at the Ambassador while Robert Leonard, her husband, occupies in lonely state the beautiful home in Beverly Hills which the pair recently built. Also, Mr. Leonard steps out early and often to cafés and is always merrily dancing. And, of course, he isn't dancing alone.

Now They Don't Speak.

Likewise it is noted that it is all off between George O'Brien and the beautiful and clever Dorothy Mackaill. The pair was at the Montmartre café the other day for lunch—but not together. In fact, they didn't speak. Dorothy was with a girl friend and George was with an unknown young woman.

During the making of "The Man Who Came Back" they fell violently in love and were supposed to wed but they didn't—and now it is certainly cold.

IN RECITAL

ANNA BURMEISTER.
[Beldier Photo.]

Miss Burmeister, a soprano of Chicago with both voice and talent, will appear in joint recital with Ossip Gabrilowitsch, the pianist, at Orchestra hall on Tuesday night. The event is under the auspices of the Alpha Gamma Delta sorority.

Careless of Him.

A farm laborer went to a village shoe store and bought a pair of shoes. The next day the shoeman met him and asked him if the shoes were comfortable.

"O, yes," the man replied, "they're quite comfortable."

"Well, if that's so," the shoeman said, "why in the world do you shuffle along so slowly?"

"O," the man answered, resignedly, "that's because you forgot to cut the string that ties them together."

All the Details.

There had been complaints of overcrowding at Mudcombe, so an official of the local council was sent to make inquiries. Approaching one dwelling, he knocked sharply, and the door was opened by the daughter of the house.

"How many people live here?" he asked.

"Nobody lives here," answered the girl. "We're only staying for a short time."

"But how many are here?" persisted the man.

"I'm here. Father's gone for a walk, and mother is——"

"Stop! Stop!" exclaimed the official, impatiently. "I want to know how many inmates are in this house. How many slept here last night?"

"Well, you see," was the reply, "I had toothache dreadful, my little brother had an earache, and we both cried so much that nobody slept a wink."

The inspector said he would call again. N. M.

Logical.

Early in the morning a rather unsteady gentleman was poking around in the road near a lamp post with his cane, as if he had lost something.

A policeman approached him and inquired if he had lost something.

"Yesh—ten dollarsh," he replied.

"No, on the other shide."

"Why are you looking here for it?"

"Lightsh better." W. J. M.

Carlsbad Sprudel Salt

The natural remedy for

STOMACH TROUBLE

Drs. Jaworsky and Laube, stomach specialists, highly recommend a teaspoonful of the natural Carlsbad Sprudel Salt dissolved in 3 glasses of warm water before breakfast and 1 glass at night. This will correct loss of appetite and "acid stomach" and greatly relieve the dull pains and sense of overfulness.

A PARTNER OF SUNLIGHT

Cod-liver oil has aptly been called the partner of sunlight. Both out of Nature's storehouse of energy are of supreme importance to a child with rickets.

Scott's Emulsion

and sunlight have been used for decades to give strength to weak-bones. A little of Scott's Emulsion with each feeding does wonders for a malnourished child or adult.

Keep your boy or girl out in the sunlight and give them Scott's Emulsion everyday—regularly!

TRY SULPHUR ON AN ECZEMA SKIN

Costs Little and Overcomes Trouble Almost Over Night

Any breaking out of the skin, even fiery, itching eczema, can be quickly overcome by applying Mentho-Sulphur, declares a noted skin specialist. Because of its germ destroying properties, this sulphur preparation instantly brings ease from skin irritation, soothes and heals the eczema right up and leaves the skin clear and smooth. It seldom fails to relieve the torment without delay. Sufferers from skin trouble should obtain a small jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur from any good druggist and use it like cold cream.

The Nemolastik Reducing Corset Has What All Other Para Gum Rubber Corsets Lack

Third Floor—Dearborn Street

The Nemolastik rubber reducing corset possesses that something all other rubber reducing corsets lack, which is The Porosette Process. The new and exclusive Nemolastik process that absorbs perspiration and is also extremely durable, covered as usual with the fine Italian silk coating that makes it a dainty garment as well. The greatest step forward in rubber reducing garments is found in these new Nemolastik-Porosette lined garments.

Porosette, an exclusive fabric, soft yet firm, adds mightily to the durability and figure controlling features. Porosette brings the much-wanted feature of absorbing perspiration. No irritating perspiration is allowed to remain on the skin.

Nemolastik reducing garments remold the figure—absorb perspiration and reduce. Made in a variety of models for all figures. Front lace—back lace. No cause to fear any ill effects when you reduce with this corset—it is entirely safe. The pure gum rubber, which composes the corset, provides a constant gentle massage which causes excess flesh to disappear. Indestructible seams, a new method of boning, non-breakable front, and hose supporters that can't rip off are a few more of the many merits of the New Nemo Corset at..... 12.75

RADIOCAST BAND SOON TO BE ALL OF 200 TO 546

Ships to Give Up 300 Meter Wave.

New York, Oct. 18.—[Special.]—Increased wave length band for broadcasting stations will soon be put into effect by the department of commerce. During the last year over 530 radiocasts have been using wave lengths from 223 meters to 546 meters. The new band, extending from 205 to 546 meters, will provide new channels in the ether and is expected to relieve congestion, especially as broadcasting stations are most numerous.

Listeners will have less trouble with spark interference from ships when the new plan is put into effect, as it has been recommended that the 300 meter wave lengths, heretofore used for telegraphic code signals in marine communications be given to broadcasting. The 450 meter wave length formerly used by ships was assigned to broadcasting last year.

Spark to Bother Less.

Most of the spark interference broadcast listeners pick up is on the 600 meter wave length. To minimize this it has been recommended that 600 meters be limited to distress signals and the general calling wave of marine communication.

This provides five channels instead of two as used at the present time.

New classifications will be as follows: Class 1 (now class "B"), 252.8 to 545 meters; class 2 (now "A"), 214 to 275.5 meters; class 3 (now "C"), 205 to 211 meters.

126 Class 1 Possibilities.

Not more than two class 1 stations will be licensed on a given wave length under the new arrangement. This will make it so no station be required to divided more than half the time. Since in the plan proposed there are sixty-three class 1 channels, there will be thus a maximum possibility of 126 class 1 stations.

Amateurs to Keep Bands.

Amateurs will retain the wave bands previously assigned by the department of commerce, with slight changes. They were assigned 150 to 200 meters; 75 to 86.6; 37.5 to 32.8; 18.7 to 21.2; 4.6 to 5.3. These allocations were made for CW and ICW and telephone operation only.

Six Radiocasts Get Class "A" Licenses; KNX Is Transferred

Washington, D. C., Oct. 18.—[Special.]—Following is the weekly list of new class A broadcast stations:

Call Sig.	Location.	Wave length [meters].	Power [watts].
WBBB	New Orleans, La.	252	50
WEBE	Nashville, Tenn.	563	50
WEBY	Roslyndale, Mass.	226	10
WHA	Madison, Wis.	275	500
WJJD	Mooseheart, Ill.	278	500
WWAE	Joliet, Ill.	242	500

A limited class B license has been issued to the Los Angeles Evening Express for KNX, 337 meters, 500 watts. KNX formerly was a class C station, operating on 360 meters.

Forty-five years ago, on the night of Oct. 21, 1879, the world's first successful incandescent lamp was set aglow. Thomas H. Edison had produced a light which was to revolutionize lighting. Commemorating this achievement, Tuesday, Oct. 21, will be Edison night on the radio. Radio stations in twelve cities, from Boston in the east to Oakland on the Pacific coast, will broadcast music and speeches by leading figures in the public utility field. Broadcasting will be done by WEEI, Boston; WGY, Schenectady; WJZ, New York; WFI, Philadelphia; WRC, Washington; WSB, Atlanta; WTAM, Cleveland; WMAQ, Chicago; KSD, St. Louis; KLZ, Denver; WFAA, Dallas; KGO, Oakland.

All the thrills of sixteen fire companies speeding to an imaginary burning building, together with the official commands and sounds incident to a big fire, were broadcast by WDAF at Kansas City, Mo., the night of the opening of Fire Prevention week.

The entire equipment of the Kansas City (Kan.) fire department was used in staging a performance especially for the radio audience. Special microphones were placed in the fire headquarters and wires carried the demonstration to WDAF's transmitter.

When the microphone was opened Chief McNarrey was heard discussing the fire hazards with the owner of a building he had just inspected, when a fire started in an adjoining building. Then the radio audience heard the sirens and gongs of the approaching fire engines, the shrieks of women in the upper windows, the shouting of the firemen, the crashing of the walls and the swishing of the water from the hose.

MAXIM'S PLEA FOR 'HAM'

HIRAM PERCY MAXIM.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 18.—[Special.] — Nothing has tended more toward bringing the licensed amateur before the public in his true light than the address of Hiram Percy Maxim before the third annual radio conference. Mr. Maxim's plea for fair allocation of wave lengths to the youthful experimenters of the nation was, in part, as follows:

"I have the honor and the great responsibility of speaking for the organized radio amateurs of the United States, and I believe I am justified in stating that I also come before you as the representative of the radio amateurs of the world. I speak for the 17,000 members of the American Radio Relay league, located in every state of our union, including all of our insular possessions, besides the amateurs of most of the countries of the civilized world, who look to us Americans to preserve and protect amateur radio.

"I wonder how many of the members of this conference realize that the amateur has had twenty years of radio experience.

"It probably surprises a great many of you here to know that the amateur has sat at radio conferences similar to this one, here in Washington, as long ago as twelve years. When the law of 1912 was being formulated, we were here and our attitude was precisely what it is today. We asked for a little place for ourselves where we could work and study and experiment in two-way radio telegraphic communication.

"In 1912 we were given what was considered the worthless wavelengths. At that time it was conceded that from 200 meters down was a band that was of no value, and so it was given to the amateur. Restrictions in the way of power, decrement and wave purity were put on top of this, even. It was thought at the time that we might be able to communicate across the street or halfway down a city block.

"The amateur took these worthless wavelengths and not only developed them so that he was able to communicate outside of his city block but outside of his city, outside of his state, outside of his country, and finally outside of the hemisphere in which he lived. Is he not worthy of really serious consideration when he is able to do these things? He actually accomplished transcontinental and transocean communication of these 'worthless' wavelengths. To do these things required the most amazing examples of technical ingenuity that can be imagined. It required efficiencies in transmitting and receiving apparatus never before attained.

"I will not take the time to cite wherein these abilities of the amateur were of great national service. Any body who reads the newspapers knows what amateur radio did in meeting the crisis when the world war broke out in the way of furnishing thousands of skilled radio operators almost over night; and what he did before the war and since the war in the way of emergency assistance in cases of flood and storm.

"In the fall of 1923 the amateurs began getting down below 200 meters. Immediately two-way private citizen transoceanic communication was established. Young Americans began establishing friendships in the air with young Frenchmen, young Englishmen, young Hollanders, and presently young Argentines and young New Zealanders. An international brotherhood developed immediately, that possessed a spirit that was positively inspiring. Meetings were finally arranged in Paris and in London, and I had the honor to represent the American amateur. The preliminaries of an International Amateur Radio union were settled upon, and as the president of the American amateur organization, the leader, I was honored by the presidency of the organization committee of the International Amateur Radio union. An international congress, at which amateurs from most of the civilized countries of the world will be present, will be held in Paris next March. I was told on many occasions when I was in Europe that this international amateur fraternity was the most practical scheme for promoting world understanding that had yet been suggested.

"Those of you who are informed on foreign matters will be surprised to know that the laws in several countries in various parts of the world have actually been modified to give their amateurs the privileges and freedom which are enjoyed in the United States.

"If you gentlemen in this conference were to recommend restrictions to amateur activities which would kill the interest of these young Americans, do you not see that it would be nothing short of a catastrophe?

"In late July of this year the department of commerce, after a thorough study of the matter, gave us amateurs the use of certain small bands of short waves in addition to our previous allocation of 150 to 200 meters, the additional bands being 75 to 80 meters, 40 to 43 meters, 20 to 22 meters, and 4 to 5 meters. Fired by earlier amateur demonstrations of what could be done with the higher frequencies, this new assignment immediately gave new impetus to amateur activity, and thousands of American amateur stations were changed over to operate on the new waves. This is new territory, of unplumbed possibilities, and a great and far-reaching advancement of the radio art is rapidly gathering headway as these thousands of experimenters take up and solve the problems they encounter on these short waves. Already we have demonstrated hitherto unheard of transmission efficiencies in miles per watt of input power, we have devised new and unique arrangements of apparatus for generating these high frequencies and for receiving them, and one has only to consider the numbers in this vast army of radio amateurs to realize unmistakably that a sure advance to the art of communication will be the only result. I think there is no other manner in the world by which the possibilities of these high frequencies can so quickly be ascertained and developed as by permitting the amateur to continue to experiment in a few of them. Already he has used them in linking this continent with South America, Europe, Africa, and Australia. Already he has demonstrated sufficient possibilities so that alarming rumors are flying about to the effect that an effort must be made to deprive him of their use in order that he may not be the first to find out about them.

"Fortunately in these shorter wave bands there is an enormous cyclage, sufficient, I dare say, for all the legitimate needs, and so enormous that the present allocations to the amateur are but a ridiculously small part of the whole.

"We are not unaware of the belief of some other radio service that they should have all the short waves or of their belief that the demonstrated possibilities of these waves indicate that the amateur has been given too much. But I submit that there is plenty of room there for all contemplated services, and I repeat my statement that the allocations now enjoyed by the amateur are of very modest proportions, and, furthermore, these short waves seem peculiarly suited to telegraphic purposes, and not particularly well to other purposes.

"We amateurs ask for no additional wave bands beyond those which have already been given us. All we desire is to be permitted to continue the use of the bands we now occupy, to continue to produce contributions to radio science, and to continue to perfect large numbers of young men in radio telegraphic communication."

COMPOSERS GET NEW COURT BLOW ON COPYRIGHTS

New York, Oct. 17.—[Special.]—The American Society of Authors, Composers, and Publishers has been defeated again in a court fight to compel payment of fees for broadcasting of copyright music under its control.

In the suit of the society brought in the name of Jerome H. Remick & Co., to enjoin the General Electric company from radiocasting orchestral selections under copyright, United States Judge Knox, Southern district of New York, rendered the following decision:

"By means of the radio art he (the broadcaster) simply makes a given performance available to a great number of persons who, but for his efforts, would not hear it. So far as practical results are concerned, the broadcaster of the authorized performance of a copyright musical selection does little more than the mechanic who rigs an amplifier or loud speaker in a large auditorium to the end that persons in remote sections of the hall may hear what transpires upon its stage or rostrum. Such broadcasting merely gives the authorized performer a larger audience and is not to be regarded as a separate and distinct performance of the copyright composition upon the part of the broadcaster."

Listener Under Severe Restriction in Esthonia

Preliminary regulations regarding broadcasting have been passed by the radio committee of Esthonia and are now subject to approval of the minister of communications, Consul Harold B. Quarton, Riga, Latvia, reports to the department of commerce.

Esthonian citizens must procure a receiving license. Antennae must not exceed fifty meters. Private broadcasting sets are forbidden and the wave [illegible]

U. S. SEES RICH RADIO FIELD IN REMOTE REGIONS

Holds America Leads in Apparatus.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The United States has a leading position in the international radio trade, according to a report issued by the department of commerce. The home market situation and research in the development of equipment for the reception of radio broadcasting have given the United States almost a preeminent position in the radio telephone field, when due consideration is given to quality, reliability and simplicity of product.

American manufacturers are undersold by German and French manufacturers in many markets, but as a rule it is found that the quality of such sets is not equal to that of our and that the price margin enjoyed by them is not commensurate with this difference of quality.

U. S. Leads in Quality.

Some business will always be done on a purely price basis, but the quality of American equipment will bring a steady and satisfactory volume of sales from practically all markets. American manufacturers are able to meet the demands of foreign buyers of radio equipment as efficiently and economically as the manufacturers of any other nation.

A potential field exists for the sale of high class radio receiving sets to people living in remote regions who are cut off from regular and frequent mail service. The interest shown by plantation owners, mine operators, and ranchers in the interior of India, Ceylon, Central America, South America, Australia, and parts of the East Indies is sufficient to indicate that the field is there.

While the potentialities of these fields cannot be developed until better broadcasting is provided at points within a distance that can be regularly and reliably covered by a good modern set, even now in Central America, northern South America, the West Indies, and many of the island groups of the South seas the high class American set will enable the isolated planter or mine operator to reach some of the more powerful American stations.

Must Go Into Fields.

It is reported that manufacturers and exporters have become so accustomed to having the merits and possibilities of radio well understood by the potential buying public, as a result of the publicity given radio, that they lose sight of the fact that people in outlying regions do not appreciate fully the possibilities of radio. To develop the use of radio in these outlying sections some method must be developed whereby effective demonstrations can be given. It should not be difficult to arrange for such demonstrations, and it is believed that they will be amply justified by the returns that will be received.

U. S. INVENTION CHANGES CODE TO PRINTED WORDS

Aviators Need Not Know Code to Send.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 18.—[Special.]" The teletype," an automatic apparatus which records incoming radio telegraph signals in print so that the messages may be read off as a newspaper, without being decoded by an operator, has just been exhibited here by government officials.

The messages are prepared at the transmitting station by punching out the signals of a paper tape which passes through an automatic transmitting machine operating the transmitter, which, in turn, broadcasts each signal representing a particular letter. At the receiving station, the siganls operate a power tube relay and then the "teletype," which prints a letter for each signal.

The aviation branch of the navy uses the teletype in place of hand radio telegraphy by mounting a keyboard in the fuselage, where the pilot can punch the keys like a typewriter to spell out his message, which appears in print on board ship or on shore below.

In this way much time in ground school training is saved, because the aviator does not have to learn code.

HOOVER LOSES CHANCE TO TEST RADIO POWERS

Washington, D. C., Oct. 18.—The case of the secretary of commerce against the Intercity Radio company, Inc., which was on the docket of the United States Supreme court, has been dismissed at the request of James M. Beck, solicitor general.

This was one of the cases in which the department of commerce hoped definitely to ascertain its powers under the old radio law. The Intercity company of New York City was charged with interfering with other radiocasting stations and as a result the secretary of commerce refused to renew the license of the firm.

Subsequently the case was taken into both the Supreme court and the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia, and both courts overruled the secretary and ordered that he issue the license. He appealed to the United States Supreme court, but in the meantime the company went out of existence.

Now Safe From

High Blood Pressure

THIS MAN WROTE IN DEC., 1922, AFTER TAKING WITTER WATER.

"I feel thirty years younger since taking the Witter Water. My blood pressure has been reduced from 200 to 136 and I am working as hard and making more money than at thirty years of age. I am seventy years old."

AUG. 23, 1924, IN REPLY TO OUR INQUIRY, HE WIRED:

"Had my blood pressure taken again and doctor found it still down. He is well satisfied." (Name and address on request.)

HIS PHYSICIAN WROTE:

"He shows marked improvement in elasticity of the arteries. His vitality, appearance and general condition wonderfully improved. There is no question but that the good results obtained were due to the action of the Witter Water Treatment."

High Blood Pressure Positively and Permanently Overcome

Nature, in her own mysterious and perfect way, has richly impregnated Witter Water with precious, health-giving mineral salts. These alkaline mineral elements in Witter Water neutralize the acid poisons in the blood which produce High Blood Pressure and other distressing and dangerous diseases due to the same cause, such as Rheumatism, Neuritis, Diabetes, Bright's Disease, Hyperacidity, Auto-intoxication and Chronic Stomach Trouble during the past fifty years and brought them renewed health and strength.

Pleasant Tasting and Harmless

Witter Water is not a table beverage or a laxative, but a pleasant-tasting, harmless, non-habit-forming spring water that comes to you hermetically sealed just as it is bottled at the spring in California.

Your Blood Pressure, if you know it .....

The Great Healthifier

Witter Water, the Great Healthifier, has relieved many thousands of weak and ailing folks of High Blood Pressure, Rheumatism, Neuritis, Diabetes, Bright's Disease, Hyperacidity, Auto-intoxication and Chronic Stomach Trouble during the past fifty years and brought them renewed health and strength.

Pleasant Tasting and Harmless

Witter Water is not a table beverage or a laxative, but a pleasant-tasting, harmless, non-habit-forming spring water that comes to you hermetically sealed just as it is bottled at the spring in California.

Re-Mineralize Yourself

If you do not gain strength, vitality and perfect health from good, wholesome food it is probably because your mineral reserve has been exhausted, which prevents the various chemical processes from taking place in your blood and alimentary canal as Nature intended.

Replace these vital minerals in your blood and you will be started on the road to perfect health.

People who have lived on denatured foods, and thus deprived themselves of the precious mineral elements so necessary to health, will find Witter Water a wonder-worker.

100% Health and Happiness

Keep your stomach, bowels and blood sweet and pure, and your blood supplied with these vital mineral elements, and you will have perfect health and strength. You will then enjoy bodily ease and comfort and the mental poise without which there is no real pleasure or happiness for you in life.

Perfect Digestion and Elimination

Witter Water sweetens, purifies and gives new tone and vitality to the entire alimentary canal, thus promoting perfect digestion and elimination.

Prevent Disease and Postpone Old Age

Witter Water will keep you young, strong and vigorous by neutralizing and helping eliminate from the blood, tissues and tissues the acid poisons and other waste products that cause disease and premature old age.

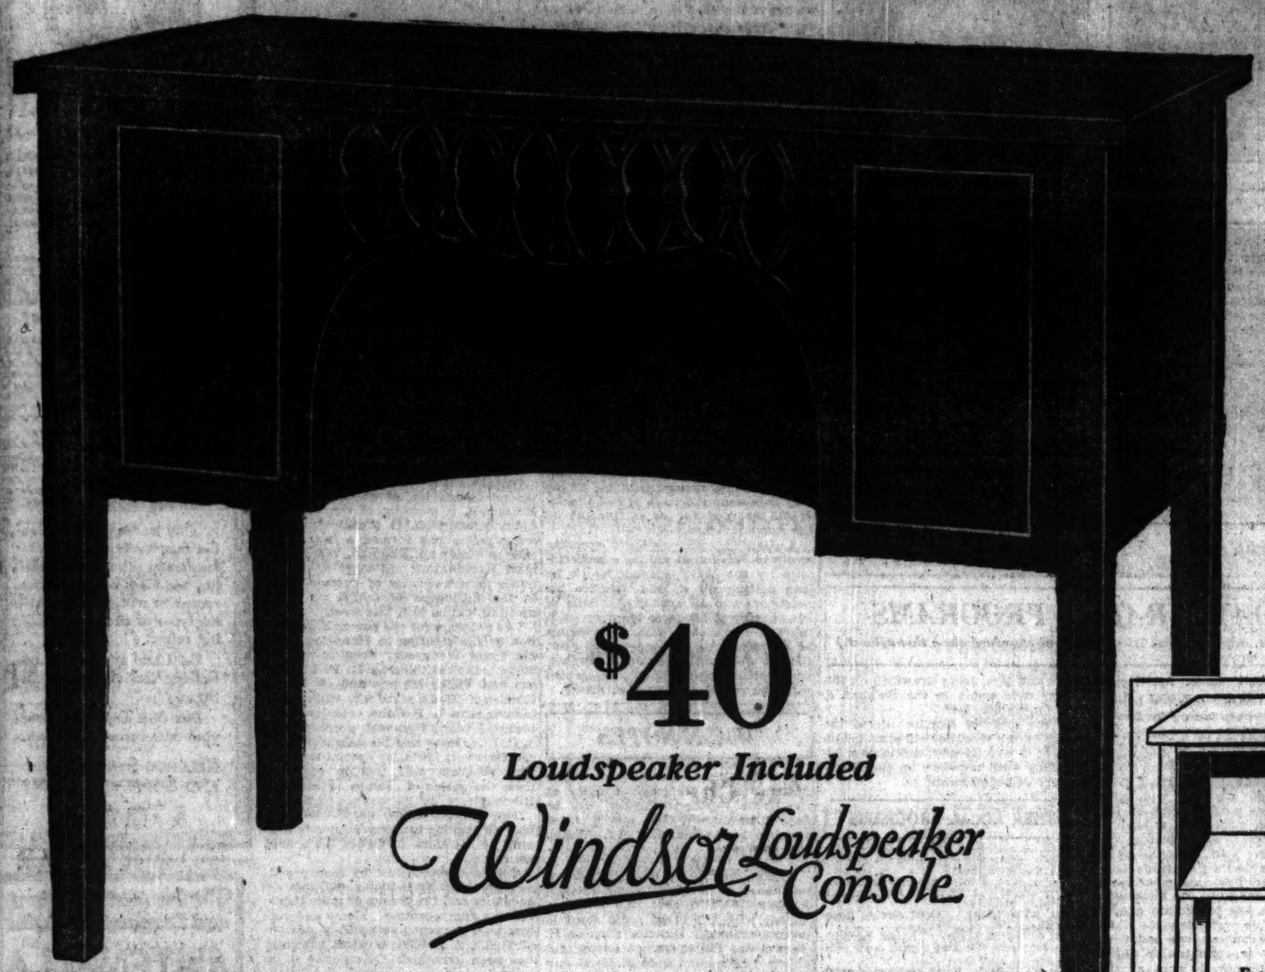
A Console of Beautiful Design for Any Radio!



$40

Loudspeaker Included

Windsor Loudspeaker Console

IT is no longer necessary to give your living room the appearance of a workshop in order to enjoy all that radio brings into the home!

Why give an otherwise artistic living room the appearance of perpetual disorder? Why let radio set at naught all efforts of careful housekeeping? And why forego the utmost in reproduction?

The horn speaker is out of date and out of place in radio for the home.

This console with its in-built loudspeaker is scientific and sightly, and replaces the old-fashioned horn.

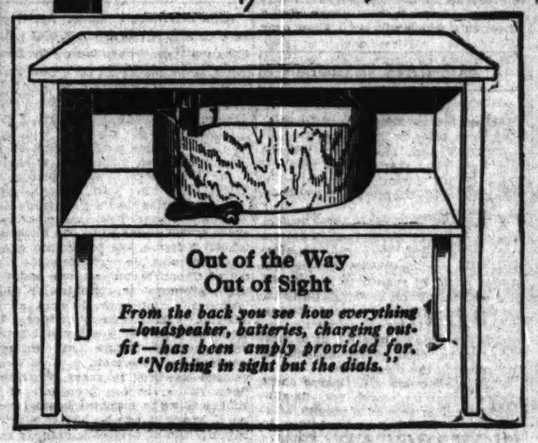
It does a better job of reproducing, for it has the best unit of all that have been tried and its soundbox is of resonant wood instead of metal, fibre or composition.

The appearance of a Windsor loudspeaker console is a delight. Its convenience is a joy. A piece of real living room furniture of pleasing lines and finish—and it accommodates all the miscellany of equipment which hitherto had no place except on table tops, shelves or floor. Ample space on top for any set, with plenty of elbow room in front. Nothing in sight but the dials. Everything else goes inside—from behind—in spaces cleverly designed to hold the largest batteries and outfit—besides the self-contained loudspeaker—all unseen and protected from dust or disturbance.

Your dealer has this console now; its beauty and utility will win you from the moment you see it.

A Marvelously Perfect Loudspeaker, In-Built Space for All the Rest of Your Equipment

This New Contribution to Radio Enjoyment Makes Unsightly Horn Speakers Obsolete. Even Headpieces Can Give No More Faithful Reproduction of Instrument or Voice

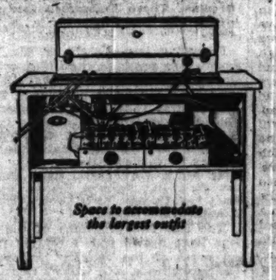


Out of the Way Out of Sight

From the back you see how everything—loudspeaker, batteries, charging outfit—has been amply provided for. "Nothing in sight but the dials."

Accommodates Any Radio Set

Look at the design of the Windsor console! The graceful exterior of this console gives no hint of its inner utility, for it is a simple and effective piece of furniture in every line. But a glance at the interior reveals a most ingenious arrangement of the in-built loudspeaker with space either side and in back. These spaces are ample for the largest A battery, and the largest wet B batteries, and the largest charging outfit.



Space to accommodate the largest outfit

There are no doors or drawers, it is all readily accessible. The unit is up under the top, out of harm's way. The illustration shows how neatly and compactly everything is stowed away—note that the outfit pictured is made up of the very largest batteries in home use.

An Artistic Addition to Living Room

And the price, forty dollars, which includes the console, loudspeaker and unit, is no more than you pay for any loudspeaker alone—of comparable tone!

It makes no difference what kind of radio outfit you have—this console was designed for your use. It is an ideal and necessary part of any radio equipment in the home. It provides for every part of it—except the unwieldy metal horn which you will wish to discard surely as you hear the tonal qualities of the speaker incorporated in the console itself.

You will also receive in this console a generous forty dollars of value as a piece of furniture. It is the product of a famous furniture factory—famous for the honest worth and inherent beauty of its furniture. The design will speak for itself. The solid construction will be apparent when you examine it. Trim and graceful as it is, you can push it around a carpeted floor when weighted down with the heaviest outfit with no wobble or waver! When tuning in, you may rest full weight on your elbows. And note: there is ample knee room so one can sit comfortable and close when operating the dials.

The console top is 38 in. long, 18 in. deep, and 29 in. high. Finished in mahogany or walnut.

Dealers are now showing Windsor loudspeaker consoles and have them for immediate delivery to your home. See if your dealer is listed below. If not, ask any store or ask us. But make it a point to see this most welcome addition to the enjoyment of radio in any home!

Long enough for any set. Elbow room in front. Knee room below

GREAT STRIDES BY RADIOCASTS DUE THIS YEAR

Higher Power Forecasts Better Programs.

BY STEPHEN GILCHRIST.
[Radio Editor.]

Recommendations of the third national radio conference, carrying out of which by the department of commerce is a foregone conclusion, are certain to result in better service and better programs by radiocasts. Increase of power will mean wider areas to be served, while adding none to the problems of interference if the advice of the bureau of standards is to be observed.

Attempts to stir up a condition of radio hysteria in the matter of reasonable power increases have brought about a great deal of misunderstanding. While danger to the local station may have resided in power of the order of fifty kilowatts employed by a coast to coast chain of stations, increases of five kilowatts, five times the present theoretical power limit of class B stations, can mean only wider areas served with greater efficiency. It will mean a wider range for crystal sets and a minimizing of radiation and atmospheric interferences, for it is an engineering fact that the greater the signal strength the less liability of interference destroying the musical value of a program.

Great Days in Store.

The writer has refused steadily to take seriously the view that any single group would be able to sway the conference to the exclusion of the other wide groups concerned with the future of radio. With the broadcast listener represented by the American Radio association, the Broadcast Listeners' association, and with independent manufacturers, groups of radiocast owners of varying types of personal interests also in attendance, the likelihood of the sessions being molded to any single group's especial aims was too remote even for consideration.

As foreseen in this column, the conference swiftly and with little friction mapped out a line of procedure that can spell only an advancement in the new science that will eclipse in this year all the strides that have been made in the last three years. There will be, before the winter is well under way, at least a million persons added to the army of listeners, compared with a year ago, and a greatly increased area served. Interference problems will be tackled more fruitfully. Transmitters generally will be more sharply tuned. And, with the general improvement in receivers—home and factory built alike—selectivity on the receiving end will have advanced tremendously over last season.

Views of United States Expert.

Covering the power question in its real lights, George K. Burgess, director of the bureau of standards, had the following to say in his address before the conference:

"Stated briefly, the great problem of radio is interference. As the uses of radio continue to increase the interference problem increases, and the more certainly must every resource of science be invoked in regulation of traffic through the ether lanes.

"No radio communication lives unto itself alone, but potentially affects all others.

"A subject of immediate interest is the question of the best power to be used by radio broadcasting stations. We face, on the one hand, the fact that the nearby local stations are the most satisfactory from the standpoint of technical quality of reception and low cost of receiving apparatus, and, on the other hand, the fact that the higher the power used at a station the greater is the territory that can be served by a single station and the more economically practicable it becomes to interconnect stations for the simultaneous broadcasting of nationally important material. A number of considerations should guide thought upon the problem thus presented. Since the most satisfactory quality of reception is obtained when the incoming signal is relatively strong, the person interested primarily in radio broadcasting as an actual service, the delivery to him of agreeable entertainment and important news and instruction is served best at the present time by the local stations.

Majority Distance Hunters.

"There is, on the other hand, a vast proportion of the people who derive their chief satisfaction from radio through the thrill of listening to broadcasting from great distances. The satisfying of this interest must and will continue, through the operation of many stations of about the power and location of present stations.

"It must be recognized, however, that all long distance radio reception is now more of a pastime than a service, since long distance reception is necessarily subject to the interruptions and disturbances from atmospheric discharges and electrical interference. There is always a certain amount of random electrical disturbance in the atmosphere, and to insure radio reception of high quality not vitiated in part by these disturbance it is necessary that the received signal have a signal intensity above a certain minimum value. It is therefore not the power of the transmitting station nor the sensitivity of the receiving set which gives the real limit to the distance of reception but rather the general level of intensity of atmospheric disturbances. All of the vast engineering and amateur effort to make more sensitive sets can henceforth be considered as being spent for the benefit of the radio listener who desires to hear distant stations rather than for the listener who desires to secure reception of high quality. The needs of the latter class are, on the other hand, vitally dependent on the general planning of the system of broadcasting stations, such planning as will be done by this conference.

Interference Factor Small.

"The reason why the local station give technically superior quality and satisfactory reception is simply because they deliver a radio wave to the receiving antenna of an intensity greater than that of the atmospheric disturbance. To deliver a signal of the same intensity to a larger number of people or a larger territory it is necessary to use higher power in the transmitting station. Carrying this thought to its limit we are led to the consideration of very high power broadcasting stations.

"There need be no fear that this will interfere seriously with the smaller stations nor displace them, provided some very simple principles are followed in their establishment. In the first place, proper frequency separation must be observed.

"If a new class of specially high powered stations is established, it should preferably be assigned frequencies at or beyond one end of the present broadcasting frequency band. In the second place, such stations should be separated from others, not only in frequency, but also geographically. It is merely necessary that the signal intensity with which the waves from such a station reach any large body of listeners shall not be materially in excess of the signal intensity from the more ordinary broadcasting stations. This will be readily attained if the broadcasting stations of specially high power are kept out of the cities. Many one kilowatt stations are now located in the midst of large cities. Supposing such a station to be three miles from the average listener in the city, the average interference in that city will be the same as caused by a ten kilowatt station located thirty miles out."

Radio Gives Women New View of Politics, Claim

Analysis of correspondence of WGY, Schenectady, reveals that the interest of women has been enlisted in politics this year as never before; that great number of women, influenced by the broadcast proceedings of two party conventions and numerous political addresses, including those of the presidential candidates, have made a choice of candidates and have been won to the importance of expressing that choice at the polls.

Mooseheart Station to Radiocast Football Game

Although WJJD will not be officially opened until Oct. 27, announcement is made that the Loyal Order of Moose station at Mooseheart, Ill., will be on the air Saturday afternoon, broadcasting the football game of Mooseheart lightweights versus the Morris, Ill., high school team. Saturday will be Jack Nelson's first schedule at the microphone of this new station, which can be tuned in on 278 meters.

The W-G-N. Album

HENRY SELINGER.
[Drake Studio Photo.]

There are those on all sides who will tell you that the finest item on the air is the dinner concert—and the luncheon concert—by the Drake concert ensemble and the Blackstone string quintet.

Well, the guiding genius of one of these orchestras, the Drake concert ensemble, is Henry Selinger, violinist and director. He is responsible for the great charm and character of the music rendered at the luncheon and dinner hours. He is a thoroughly American musician, having been born in Chicago and musically educated in these United States.

At one time he was a member of the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra, and with his own trio has played innumerable popular concert and recital engagements. He came to Chicago to join the Chicago Symphony orchestra, of which he is still first violin.

Mr. Selinger promises that all request numbers, if the requests be presented by letter, will be played by his orchestra at a date of which the listener will be notified by the director himself. Listen for his concert between 9 and 10 from W-G-N this evening!

ENGLAND OPENS ITS RADIOCAST TO POLITICIANS

Each Party Is Allowed Speech a Week.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, Oct. 16.—For the first time in the history of broadcasting in England government owned radio apparatus this week was put at the disposal of speakers in the political campaign. Prime Minister MacDonald's speech at Glasgow was the first political speech to be broadcast. The general postoffice, however, "realizing that broadcasting could bring the direct personal expositions of the leaders to the homes of millions of electors," sanctioned broadcasting one speech from each of the three party leaders once weekly.

Newspapers this week are enthusiastically reporting the hearing of President Coolidge's speech in London on the occasion of the Heinz company banquets in the British isles and in America.

C. B. Cochran, noted showman, in an article published here, characterizes broadcasting as "another opposition to the stage, and theatrical producers must deal with it as they have dealt with its predecessors, movies, phonographs, etc." By-products, he said, often make shows pay, as, for example, selling the music of a musical show and the movie rights to legitimate plays. If broadcasting charges are sufficiently high on a play it may prove also a by-product which will put a show over.

ZR-3 WAVE "RAIDED"

BY GEORGE SELDES.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BERLIN, Oct. 18.—Court proceedings have been started as a result of news lifting during transmission of dispatches from the ZR-3 when in flight to America.

A Berlin newspaper bought the exclusive rights to Dr. Eckener's stories, but it was found that the messages were common property before the stories could be rushed to the streets. The scandal of the news lifting is the greater since the government does not permit general use of receiving sets which are able to receive at a 1,810 meter wave, used by the Zeppelin in transmitting the dispatches.

The government will renew with greater vigor its search for illegally owned receiver sets as a result.

"JOY DIGGER" ON AIR OVER WEEI, BOSTON STATION

Boston, Mass., Oct. 18.—[Special.]—"Nate" Coldwell, known throughout the country as the "Joy Digger," a regular feature at W-G-N, Chicago, and a real twentieth century edition of the traveling minstrel, is in Boston. He started walking from Chicago last week and is making his headquarters at WEEI, the new Edison Light station. During the last six months he has walked in his travels more than 5,000 miles, visiting nearly every large broadcasting station in the country.

WOULD REDUCE FIRE RATES TO AERIAL OWNERS

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

THE HAGUE, Oct. 16.—Fire insurance companies have been charging extra premiums on houses equipped with aerials on the ground that this is an increased risk of lightning. Now one insurance broker is advertising that this idea is erroneous and that an aerial well earthed serves as extra lightning protection, so, instead of increasing the premium or refusing to pay damages, the insurers should allow a rebate on cases where special lightning risk is inserted in the policy.

Dutch Amateurs Join to Gain Concessions

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

THE HAGUE, Oct. 18.—The Association of Dutch Radio Friends has been formed with the object of obtaining from the government experimental sending licenses for its affiliated members throughout the country. The government intends to grant such licenses under special provisos, limiting the wave length, etc., and stipulating fixed hours for sending.

15,000 in Vienna Pay Tax Based on Income

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

VIENNA, Oct. 18.—Already Vienna possesses 15,000 radio subscribers, who have received permission to install radio sets in their homes. They pay a tax ranging from $3 to $11 annually, depending on their income.

TODAY'S RADIO PROGRAMS

(Sunday, Oct. 19.) (Central standard time throughout.)

This afternoon's Master Artist concert at W-G-N [formerly WDAP], THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, promises to set up a new standard for classical recitals in the world of radiocast. Beginning at 2:30 o'clock, Moissaye Boguslawski, the great pianist, exponent of Chopin, will give W-G-N listeners a solid hour of the immortal Polish composers' works!

Mr. Boguslawski, whose picture appears today in THE TRIBUNE roto-gravure section, has a prodigious technical equipment. The mastery of tonal color which seems to be the birthright of the Russian, has made him one of the leaders of his profession. He plays all of Chopin's compositions and with this program inaugurates W-G-N's Famous Artist hour, a part of the Master Artist concert series. The greatest artists of the day will appear during these hours at intervals throughout the season.

Although brief in years, Mr. Boguslawski's career has been one of romance. Born in humble circumstances, at 15 years of age he had to play for eight hours at a stretch daily to earn the money needed to continue his study. His story is an extraordinary one; a story of almost incredible energy, courage and patience. He has risen to the height of his profession and now, for the first time, he has consented to play for the multitudinous radio audiences.

Charles H. Gabriel, Jr., musical director of W-G-N, sets a new mark in broadcasting by presenting Mr. Boguslawski today in the following program of Chopin: Three preludes, three waltzes, Fantasie Impromptu, Scherzo, Nocturne, three études, Ballade, Berceuse, Three Ecossaises, two mazurkas and the Polonaise in A flat major.

Following immediately on Mr. Boguslawski's program the Chicago Musical college recital of artists will begin, being broadcast by W-G-N from the Central theater. The following musicians will appear:

Vera Taylor, Long Beach, Cal.; Solveig Shevelson, Oak Park, Ill.; Mamie Stillerman, Chicago; Freida Stoll, Milwaukee, Wis.; Jack Lowenthal, Evansville, Ind.; Dawn Hulbert, Oak Park, Ill.; Margaret Hearn, Chicago; Linda Sool, Chicago; Harry Corsell, Chicago; Eleanor Weaver, Hinsdale, Ill.

The last two programs of the college have drawn wide attention from all parts of the country because of their excellence, and today's recital is a varied one, instrumental and vocal, assuring further reward for the great radio audience of W-G-N.

Those who pick up W-G-N at 11:45 this morning will listen to another of the unusually well balanced programs of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Crawford on the mighty twin organ in the Balaban & Katz Chicago theater.

In the evening Martha Bjorn, the widely known soprano, will sing, beginning at 9 o'clock and continuing, alternating with numbers by the Drake concert ensemble, until 10.

OTHER LOCAL PROGRAMS

10:30 a. m., WQJ [448]. Dr. Preston Bradley's sermon and services of the People's church, Pantheon theater.

ZR-3 TRIP PROVES RADIO'S VALUE AS AVIATION ARM

Airship Never Out of Touch with Land.

New York, Oct. 18.—[Special.]—The voyage of the ZR-3 gave radio its third opportunity to demonstrate its usefulness to trans-Atlantic aviation. Hertzian wave spread high over the sea on the 1,510 meter wave length furnished bulletins for shop windows in German towns and cities relative to the big Zeppelin's progress. It was radio that relieved the anxiety in Friederichshafen with the message, "She has landed." America, too, learned by radio of the airship's approach.

As the Zeppelin passed over ships it talked with marine operators below. The ZR-3's operator, after landing at Lakehurst, told how the craft flew over a British ship and inquired the steamer's position. The reply indicated that the aircraft had drifted about sixty miles southward of the assumed course. The route was shifted.

CRY OF MURDER MAY BE SIMPLY AIRPLAY SCREAMS

A woman's scream, a cry of murder or an urgent appeal for help and police coming from an otherwise peaceful domestic circle, does not mean, any more, that murder is afoot. These may be simply the lines of some melodrama enacted for entertainment of the radio audience.

A Danville, Ill., resident recently wrote to WGY that during a performance by the WGY Players which he was getting on a loud speaker his neighbors ran all around the halls of his apartment house to his door seeking the cause of a woman's screams of murder. As he opened the door, the act was concluded and the orchestra started to play. Then the sheepish would-be rescuers silently withdrew.

W-G-N NOTES

The breakfast scene from "The Potters," J. P. McEvoy's comedy at the Great Northern theater, will be staged in the W-G-N studio some evening this week at 6 o'clock. Watch for the date!

* *

Announcer "Sen" Kaney takes his mammoth radio show to the Balaban & Katz Tivoli theater this week, to appear with the other radio stars in person. Musical Director Charles H. Gabriel Jr. will announce during the classical hours and Quin A. Ryan during the dinner concerts and late jazz hours.

* *

Next Saturday's Michigan-Wisconsin football game will be broadcast direct from the Ann Arbor field by W-G-N.

* *

Myrtle E. Stahl, formerly business manager of the old WDAP, has returned from a three months' trip abroad to join the W-G-N staff.

* *

Vernon Rickard, late soloist of the Notre Dame University Glee club, has been added to the W-G-N force of announcers and soloists. He is at the microphone during the Board of Trade broadcasting in the forenoon.

B. L. A. BRANCH TO BE FORMED AT PALMER PARK

Fans' Organizations Are Spreading in City.

Rapid spread of organization of broadcast listeners has marked the early fall in Chicago. Several of these already are in existence, and all report large increases in membership and interest, much of this being attributed to technical discussions, which are a feature of the various bodies, as well as the appearance in person of radiocast performers who are heard regularly on the air.

Prominent among the associations already in full swing are the Broadcast Listeners, with headquarters at 6240 Cottage Grove avenue, open meetings of which are held each Wednesday evening in Hamilton park fieldhouse; Chicago Radio association, open meetings of which are conducted each Thursday evening in Ogden park fieldhouse, 65th street and Racine avenue; Northwest Radio club and Hawthorne Radio club.

Oldest of these is the Broadcast Listeners' association, of which Frank H. McDonald, a member of the mayor's radio commission, is president. This organization has formed a branch to take in Roseland, Pullman, West Pullman, Kensington, and other neighborhoods in the vicinity of Palmer park, in the fieldhouse of which an open meeting will be held this week.

The program for the parent organization at the meeting in Hamilton park fieldhouse Wednesday evening will include technical talks by R. E. Thompson and Victor Malone and by M. H. Romberg. Radio stars who will appear include Sara L. McCabe, coloratura soprano; Isadora Plunkett, accompanist; J. C. Dougherty and his flagolette, and the Harmony Girls, by special request. The program will include readings from the poems of James Whitcomb Riley.

The Chicago Radio association will hold its regular meeting Thursday evening at 8 o'clock in Ogden park field house.

Topics of discussion, by men prominent in the radio industry, will include acoustics and the theory of radio transmission and reception. Home and custom built receiving sets will be demonstrated. A special musical program has been arranged. The public is invited.

EASTERN "HAM" WORKS AMATEUR AT 9,000 MILES

Hartford, Conn., Oct. 18.—H. Johnson of Short Beach, Conn., has reported to the American Radio Relay league that he had two-way communication with Iva O'Meara at Gisborne, New Zealand, a distance of 9,000 miles. Johnson operates amateur 1-SF.

The best previous record for distance reported was by W. B. Magner, San Pedro, Cal., 6,900 miles.

It's Here!
New R. F. Transformer That "Brings 'Em In"

A Radio Frequency Transformer of the aperiodic type suitable for all sets with which tuned radio frequency is desired. Also used for one stage of radio frequency amplification ahead of regenerative sets to prevent re-radiation.

Consider these points of superiority:

No dope to hold windings in place.
Soldered connections.
Mounting bracket holds coil at correct angle.
Minimum rubber used in form.
Lowest possible loss, with greatest transfer of energy.
Works with any .0005 condenser.
Secondary arranged with suitable taps for biasing features.

This transformer makes the construction of a radio frequency set an easy matter, assuring best possible reception with widely varying types of circuits, including reflex.

Built and guaranteed by Kellogg Switchboard and Supply Co.

No. 602 Transformer at your dealers for $2.35 each.

on Loud Speaker with the Stromberg-Carlson
Neutrodyne Receiver

This exceptional performance was reported by L. P. R. Bean, of Sydney, Australia, who heard Station "K G O" at Oakland, California, using his No. 1-A Neutrodyne Receiver and No. 1-A Loud Speaker.

An idea of this distance can be gained from the fact that 7400 miles is farther than from the North Pole to the Equator—more than twice across this Continent.

Distance with pleasing tone volume on the loud speaker is a real test of a radio receiver—a joy to all radio lovers.

The wonderful qualities of these receivers can only be appreciated by actually seeing and hearing them. We will gladly arrange with our dealers for a demonstration in your home if you will write or telephone.

POLICE WINK AT RADIO BOOTLEG TRADE IN JAPAN

Tokio Alone Has 10,000 Illicit Receivers.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

TOKIO, Sept. 23.—[By Mail.]—Bootlegging in radio supplies is a new industry in Tokio. Under the law there is a strict prohibition of the use by anyone of a radio receiving set, despite which prohibition there are at least 10,000 such sets in use in the city, with many enthusiastic radio fans, in some cases doubly enthusiastic because their listening-in is accompanied with the thrill of police evasion.

There are at least three stores in Tokio where radio equipment may be purchased, but this is not displayed. The police know about this, of course, because there is very little going on in Japan that the police do not know about, and they are winking at the law violation because they feel that the time has come when the authorities no longer can shut privately owned radio sets out of the country. Within a short time rules and regulations governing ownership and use of receiving sets will be modified.

Many Seek to Radiocast.

The only broadcasting done in Tokio is by a government wireless school, and this is under the guise of experimenting and testing. The programs, which are listened to by the illegal eavesdroppers, consist of crop and weather reports, with a few phonographic songs and bits of Japanese grand opera.

There are now before the department of communications almost a score of applications from prospective broadcasting companies in Tokio alone, with twenty-three others from Osaka, and the large number is one reason why no application for a license has been granted. The authorities have broadly hinted that when the would-be competitors get together and form one company in Tokio and one in Osaka their licenses will come and regulations will be issued.

It is known that the government intends to charge a license fee of one yen per year for every receiving set, while the Osaka plan of the biggest prospective broadcasting company is to supply receiving sets to customers at a rental of one yen per month, with an initial fee of two yen for installing the set. Probably whatever company is formed in Tokio will do the same.

Free Service for Papers.

The government has just begun to receive for distribution to the press in Japan what it calls a broadcast service, received by a new government receiving station near Osaka from the Bordeaux station in France, and it is expected that within a few days another service will be coming in from Nauen, Germany. This service is being distributed by the government free of charge to newspapers. As it is supplied free by the French government, and later the Nauen service from Germany will be free, the Japanese press soon will have plenty of European propaganda to select from. The American government sends out no such free service, so any American news received in Japan must be paid for. It will be possible, according to the officials of the department of communications, to arrange for the receiving in Japan of any broadcasted American service, and those interested are already negotiating for the right to pick up here the Associated Press service sent from San Francisco to Manila and Honolulu by the American naval radio system, as well as the fuller service the American navy sends out by broadcast for its ships at sea. These services are already being received in Shanghai on private receiving sets.

ON AIR TONIGHT

ROSE LUTIGER GANNON.

Sunday Evening club soloist will sing "I Will Lift Up Mine Eyes," by Bartlett, at the services this evening, to be broadcast by KYW.

French 2-Tube Set, Covering All Waves Follows ZR-3 Trip

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, Oct. 18.—A two tube radio set with crystal detector, said to be capable of tuning in on any wave length, was used by a radio company of France for listening in on the passage of the ZR-3 across the country.

Tests made during the last month are said to show it to be a complete success. The inventor has been working on the device for three years. His company declares the two tube set has an "everlasting battery," costing 60 francs ($3) to buy, with practically no upkeep for three or four months. The battery will be offered on the market separately from the two tube set as soon as the patent is through.

Employés who tested the set on the passage of the ZR-3 reported uniform success.

FARMERS BALK POWER LINE ON RADIO GROUNDS

The question of whether the erection of a power line should be permitted if it causes interference with broadcast reception was raised in Milwaukee, Wis., recently when farmers south of that city objected to a petition of the local electric light company for permission to run a high tension wire through their property. The farmers opposed the grant on the ground that the line would constitute a source of interference to the operation of their receiving sets. Two radio amateurs were called upon to give expert testimony.

UNSTEADY TUNERS.

Unsteady regenerative tuners are most annoying at all times. The cause for an unsteady tuner of the regenerative type is too large a tickler coil or too much regeneration. The remedy is obvious.

MUSSOLINI SEES VALUE OF RADIO; MAY GO ON AIR

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

ROME, Oct. 18.—Rome, which, so far as Italy's only broadcasting station, has just completed the first week of transmitting concerts. Premier Mussolini is an enthusiastic radio fan, having a fine six tube set in his house, presented by the Marconi company. Finance Minister De Steffani also is an amateur.

It was when Sig. De Steffani heard radio for the first time in his hotel in London on the occasion of the recent conference there that he gave orders to rush the bureaucratic formalities necessary for broadcasting in Italy.

An agreement is being made to broadcast Premier Mussolini's speech at the opening of the chamber of deputies on Nov. 12.

RADIO STATION TO GRACE SACRED GRAZ FORTRESS

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

VIENNA, Oct. 18.—Graz, bulwark of the west against the Turk, has consented to the erection of a radio station on the sacred fortress on the top of High mountain, from which the "defenders of civilization" sallied forth to meet the invader, on condition that the broadcasting station be a thing of beauty. The citizens had resisted all previous attempts to erect a station on this sacred ground, and only when an esthetic argument was presented was consent given.

Radio Receiving Set

—the first set to combine selectivity and tone quality with distance and volume

Hitherto in buying a radio set you have had to choose between one with high selectivity and fine tone quality and one with great distance and volume. Up to this time both groups of qualities could not be found in one set.

Now the Andrews Deresnadyne 5-tube Radio Receiving Set, using the new and exclusive principle of the Deresonated Plate Circuit, for the first time successfully combines these absolute essentials of fine Broadcast Receiving. It gives an unequalled tone quality and high selectivity with increased distance and volume.

Mr. Robert J. Casey, head of the Chicago Daily News Laboratory, says about it: "The circuit combines selectivity, range and quality in a degree that will astonish the old experimenter." Hear the Deresnadyne at your dealer's. Or write to us for a complete description.

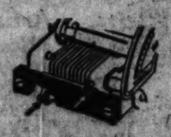
SIGNAL FEATURE No. 4

Adjustable Stator Plates



One of the most remarkable features is the adjustment of the stator plates. Oval shaped screw holes permits the entire stator plates assembly to be moved forward or backward—thus assuring at all times the proper distance and equal spacing between the Rotor and Stator plates.

SIGNAL Vernier Variable CONDENSER

Heretofore the tightening of the main bearing in a condenser threw the Rotor plates out of adjustment and the capacity of the condenser was changed. All that has been done away with in this remarkable condenser. Now you can adjust the stator plates so the spaces between them and the rotor plates are equal. Your dealer will be glad to tell you other unusual features. Illustrated descriptive folder on request. Write

SERVICE BY THE GOLDEN RULE

(A Business Editorial)

"SERVICE AND SUCCESS"

The mission of a merchant is not merely to sell goods on which there is a momentary profit. He must go further and meet a need and give genuine service.

Guided by these twin policies, service and helpfulness, he may be certain that his business will succeed, not only for a year but for a century.

If he disregards them, he is doomed to join the failures, for short-sighted policies make for short-lived careers.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

Glimpsing H. R. H. in His Whirlwind Visit to Chicago

By Mme. X.

WE, editorially speaking, took rather a lofty view of that nice, blue eyed, undersized young man with the decidedly wistful expression and utterly boyish air who stopped off to visit Chicago and its polyglot folk last Monday. We bethought us of those old ancestors of ours who had shouldered their muskets and gone out to affront and dismay his—was it great-great-great-grandfather?—and in so doing had dealt a body blow at that ancient and royal institution of which he, the young visitor, is the symbol. We rather scoffed at the idea of trying to get even a peep at him. But these sturdy, democratic sentiments melted in the pleasant and quite unexpected experience of meeting him and shaking hands with him.

It happened—just happened—on Monday afternoon at the Field museum when a half dozen, mostly chance visitors like the X family, who had forgathered at the museum, were presented to him and had the privilege of shaking that young, warm, rather moist and, I suspect, weary hand. That energetic and most inspiring of fellow mortals, Mrs. Samuel Chase, with whom the writer has seen many interesting persons and places, overcame the inertia and stolidity of this column sufficiently to induce a trip to town with the chance of a glimpse of the prince and his vigorous Chicago escort. [My, what a day they gave him! He earned every bit of his salary last Monday.]

Taking advantage of a police pass, we went to the Field museum during the hours of the royal visit that afternoon. We were seated on the bone chilling stone steps at the south end of the long and superb entrance hall of the museum when we spied, leaning against a nearby gleaming white marble pillar, one of the best known and most popular of the older leaders in Chicago's beau monde. We joined her and waited together to see what would happen. What happened was that some of the museum trustees, her husband among them, caught sight of us and took us into the office of Stanley Field, the museum president, where we adorned the wall with a half dozen others, including Mrs. Stanley Field and the two Field children, Miss Daphne and Joseph Field.

In a Lull.

Pursued to the massive and heavily paneled oaken doors by a boisterous crowd, the prince and his hosts came into the spacious tranquillity of the big and handsomely furnished room with a sort of gasp of relief. After he had caught his breath and looked about a little, the assembled and small company was brought up to him and introduced.

In a slightly solemn fashion he grasped each hand and murmured in a pleasantly modulated voice, "Happy to meet you."

The words were perfunctory, the manner was quite naturally somewhat weary, but the impression left was that of an extra nice youth with a somewhat tip-tilted nose, extremely cerulean eyes, straightest of eyebrows, short upper lip [which helps to give that extraordinarily young look for a man 29 years old], ruddy complexion, and a slim, straight, well cut figure, somewhat below normal in height. His hair grows thick about the forehead, with a little beauty peak pointing downward directly over his nose. He wore a khaki colored tweed suit and carried a gray soft felt hat. The only smile evoked in him during the hurried presentations was when the society leader above referred to said, as she was introduced, "I have a bond in common with you. Years ago, when I was a girl, I was in love with your grandfather."

"That's a pleasant bond," he responded with a nice and friendly smile.

The rush and hurry of his swift flight through Chicago was with him even in the lull of the little visit to the museum office, for he turned and asked Mr. Field, with a slightly anxious look on his face:

"What do we do now? Where do we go?" So off the party went, back to the welcoming and cheering crowds and the eager photographers.

Dinner for the Prince.

Wolcott Blair's dinner and dance, which finished up the prince's whirlwind visit to Chicago was, of course, the talk of the town. As it had been rumored that the prince preferred his dinner and dance partners young—at least under 30—the host did his best and at least deserves the credit of picking out a company in which none of the fair guests looked over 30, whatever year may be inscribed on their birth certificates.

The host's cousin, Mrs. Howard Linn, acted as hostess. There is no more chic and attractive woman in Chicago society than this youthful matron. Although her close clipped and curly hair is sprinkled with a becoming glint of silver, it seems only to intensify the sparkling brightness of her dark eyes and the childlike quality of her face. The prince sat on her right hand, and on his other side sat one of the prettiest and most popular of the young marrieds, Mrs. Courtney Letts Stillwell.

The royal guest divided his favors during the first part of the evening by dancing with almost every woman there, not long with each one, but sufficiently to provide a tradition to many a Chicago family who can henceforth use the date when mother danced with the prince as one of the milestones of life. Towards the latter part of the evening he became more pronounced in showing his appreciation of one special young matron, Mrs. Lucius P. Ordway Jr., a rather recent arrival in Chicago's gay young set. She and her husband are from St. Paul and have joined the newlywed colony in Lake Forest, where they have quickly made a place for themselves. Mrs. Ordway is especially noted for her quick repartee and amusing stories.

Hardly as Dry as Rumored.

Before the dinner at the Saddle and Cycle club about twenty of the company, including the prince, gathered at Edward T. Blair's house on the Lake Shore drive for a round of the national beverage. I am told that in the east the royal visitor did not find the country as dry as rumored. The pre-war stocks, left to themselves, grow and multiply. Fermentation continues in spite of law, and every one knows fermentation expands and increases anything. It is to be hoped that the prince found no drought in this part of the land, though we are not so near the three mile limit as are the residents on Long island. Foreigners think of us as the people whose contribution to civilization is cocktails and skyscrapers. They take to the first of these faster than to the second.

So passes into Chicago history the short stay of a nice, modest young man whose job as acting symbol of an old and somewhat moth eaten institution seems sometimes to bore and exhaust him almost to extinction, but who carries on just as energetically as he is reported to have done during the world war when he used to give the G. H. Q. high blood pressure by escaping them and getting to the front. Farewell, pleasant young man! But monarchy still seems to the writer to be a little old fashioned and out of date, and just why the Britishers continue to go on paying the bills for it is hard to understand.

Before abandoning entirely the subject of the prince, I want to emphasize the fact that he was here not entirely among strangers. Besides the young and amiable Wolcott Blair, whom he had already met, there was Henry Channón (known to his intimates as Harry Channon), who has for several years now moved in the smartest English society and knows the prince well—so well, in fact, that he (Harry Channon) wired an invitation to the prince from himself asking him to be his guest at dinner on the royal flight through the city. Mr. Channon was one of those invited to the Blair party. He is visiting his parents at the family residence on Astor street. He will return in a few weeks to his charming little house in Mayfair, London, where he gives chic little parties and successfully plays his part in the English great world.

The other Chicago acquaintance of the amiable David Windsor, Miss Winny Carpenter, is with her mother at the Winterbotham place on Lake Champlain and, although she was invited to Monday's dinner, did not feel she could leave the splendors of autumn in the Green mountains even for so important an occasion. It is something to have declined such an invitation.

What the Season Promises.

The coming social season opens with rather more brilliant and varied prospects than usual. There is to be an enormous number of debutantes, something to paralyze the dance partners who are expected to step out and give them a good time and still get down to their offices and other places of business as usual. This superabundance of buds means an extra large number of balls and receptions, as well as many lesser entertainments. But it is the annual assertion of this page that debutantes do not constitute society, or even an important part of it, except as they give promise of future leaders and active social factors.

Society, with a big S, is made up of persons of a certain number of years and experience, if a study of older and more famous communities counts

MISS ROBERTA THORNE.

During her first crowded and gay season the society debutante finds herself a busy mortal. She is depended upon to usher, sell flowers and programs, and exhibit whatever talents she may possess for the various benefits sponsored by her elders, besides attending the numerous luncheons, receptions, dinners, and dances given for her and her contemporaries.

Miss Roberta Thorne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Thorne of 1046 Lake Shore drive; the two Anderson sisters, daughters of Bishop and Mrs. Charles P. Anderson of 4512 Drexel boulevard, and Miss Mabel Holland, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney J. Holland of Highland Park, have already been enlisted to usher the Billboard ball for the benefit of the Illinois Children's Home and Aid society on Nov. 25 at the Coliseum and to perform in "Cynthia," the Service club's annual musical comedy, to be given Nov. 7 and 8 at the Eighth Street theater. Miss Thorne is to have one of the leading rôles in the latter affair, and the Misses Anderson and Miss Holland will be included in the debutante chorus.

Miss Thorne will be presented to society at a dinner and a ball to be given at the Casino next Saturday evening by her parents.

The Anderson sisters will make their bow on Thanksgiving day at a tea to be given by their parents at the Anderson residence.

Mr. and Mrs. Holland gave a tea for Miss Holland at their Highland Park residence yesterday.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

for anything. Neither in London or Paris are the leaders of the great world to be found among the younger members, although some among them are striking figures and add to its picturesque air. The tendency to place the helm in young hands in some American social communities is a proof of the somewhat immature youth of the country. But it is a passing phase, and as we grow up will disappear in favor of the leadership of those with greater and wider experience.

One of the features of the coming winter which will interest many prominent folk is the enterprise being fostered and directed by John A. Carpenter and Adolf Bolm, the Russian ballet director, to produce a combination of orchestral music and ballet which shall give us a taste of an art which the Russians have developed further than any other people. Backing the two artistic promoters of this hitherto untried adventure are Mrs. Arthur Ryerson, Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick, Mrs. John Borden, Mrs. Chauncey McCormick, Mrs. Kenneth Sawyer Goodman, Mrs. Albert Wolf, Mrs. William Monroe, Mrs. Benjamin Becker, Robert Allerton, George F. Porter, Arthur Aldis, Eames MacVeagh, Augustus Peabody, Herman Waldeck, Marquette Healy, and William H. Rehm, an august assemblage of well known leaders in the world esthetic and artistic. They are doing all that lies in their power in many directions to promote the culture with which any great prosperity must be crowned to be saved from sordid extinction.

Only Three Performances.

The promoters want it distinctly understood that this enterprise does not conflict with the interests and support of the Civic Grand Opera company any more than any musical undertaking such as the Symphony orchestra or any other individual effort to promote a love for and a knowledge of the many expressions of art and music. It will have only three performances this winter and those in charge are planning them so as not to interfere with an opera presentation. The first one will be on Thanksgiving afternoon, Nov. 27, and the second performance of the same program will take place on the following Sunday afternoon, both at the Eighth Street theater, the new name for what was formerly the Aryan Grotto. For this the famous Russian star, Karsovina has been engaged. She is one of the greatest of Russian danseuses, excelling, say those who have seen her, even the great Pavlowa. She is now married to a British diplomatist named Bruce and has left the stage, but is returning to it for this single engagement because she is so interested in establishing an enterprise like this musico-ballet experiment.

By the way, a large prize to be paid in a D. O. R. G., is here and now offered to any one who will suggest an attractive name for this new attempt at the art of expression and interpretation.

MISS LORETTA HICKEY.

Mrs. Catherine Hickey of 6312 South Park avenue announces the engagement of her daughter, Loretta, to Andrew Ruchte of Dubuque, Ia.

The first half of the programs are to be entirely devoted to small orchestra music, directed by Eric DeLamarter, the aid and coadjutor of Frederick Stock in our Symphony orchestra. The second half will consist of an interpretative ballet. The opening performances will have what Mr. Carpenter describes as a "Dégas ballet," which means one where the paintings of this great Spanish artist will be taken as the basis of the ballet and decorations. The second program, following about a month later, will bring the famous Spanish composer, De Falla, who will conduct his own ballet, "El Amor Brujo," which in English means "Love, the Conqueror."

A most interesting possibility will be later in the winter a visit from Raquel Meller, the greatest living actress, a Spaniard, who will probably dance (she is a wonderful dancer) in this extra sophisticated and up to date enterprise of Messrs. Carpenter and Bolm. Those who have seen her say she is even more enchanting and wonderful than the Italian actress, Eleonora Duse, of blessedest memory.

All of these undertakings help to educate us along artistic lines which will help to widen our capacity for enjoyment and our understanding of the ideals and aims of the leaders in this department of human culture.

On a Grand Scale.

Our grand opera promises us a fine winter's program of good artists and operas that have proved their merit by several generations of presentations. As John Carpenter himself says, the Chicago Civic opera is not a laboratory for trying out experiments in musical and operatic lines. Such should be worked out on a smaller scale in such an enterprise as he is seeking to establish. Grand opera is an imposing institution which is customarily run along well beaten paths. It upholds great traditions, and is a part of the spectacular in life which is as necessary a part of our self-expression as any other.

Grand opera can not be run on a small scale. It requires big opera houses, famous stars, splendid scenery, huge choruses, dazzling ballets, fine orchestras, glittering costumes, and a generally impressive and shining assemblage both behind and in front of the footlights to achieve its highest expression.

There is some comment among those who are interested in sustaining and promoting our Civic opera company that whereas a few years ago we had a brilliant company of French artists, including Muratore, Maguenat, Mlle. Eva Galle, and many others, today the personnel of the company is almost entirely Italian. Whether we have gained in this change is open to discussion. The great exception to this Italian cast is the promised occasional visit of that most striking of all figures on the operatic stage today, Feodor Chaliapin, who is promised as one of the features of the winter. Rosa Raisa is one of the first (if not the first) dramatic sopranos of the day and, having made her name and fame largely in the Chicago company, may be properly claimed by us as our own. Mary Garden has a quite special place in the hearts of Chicagoans. Marshall and the rest of the company promise performances of solid merit. We have a good company, but we have lost some great artists to the weakening of the organization.

Society Women in Tableaux.

That Billboard ball is going like hot cakes. Even the oldest and most seasoned campaigners in previous public entertainments concede that Mrs. Charles Barney Goodspeed, president of the board of managers, has extraordinary talents as an organizer and director of such an enterprise. She herself has secured the ten great advertising tableaux, and will be aided in their presentation by Mrs. John A. Carpenter, Mrs. John R. Winterbotham, Mrs. E. Harris Brewer, Mrs. Elliot Jenkins, and Evan Evans.

The list of firms who have engaged these tableaux are Marshall Field & Co., the Rolls-Royce company, Inc., Lyon & Healy, the Palm Olive company, the Luxor Toilet Preparations company, Holeproof Hosiery, Swift & Co., William Wrigley Jr. company, and the Commonwealth Edison company. Prominent society women will take part in these tableaux, which will be presented at intervals during the evening. There will be abundant opportunity to demonstrate the properties so advertised by the youth and beauty of our fairest belles.

The result promises to be the most brilliant of the many great balls which have been got up in the last several decades for the city's philanthropic institutions.

Signs of the Times.

Psychology is in these days becoming an increasingly important study for the thoughtful and intelligent members of society. Many of its terms have become so familiar as to have been adopted as part of the slang of the times. Such words as complex, moron, egocentric, and so on are used in every day's pithy speech. Therefore, any one who can present this comparatively new science in a manner both simple and attractive is doing a valuable work. If in addition the apostle of psychology has a charming personality, the listener and disciple finds the business of acquiring the rudiments of this science delightful and inspiring.

Such a combination exists in the person of a recent visitor to Chicago, Miss Mary Sandall, who spent last Sunday with Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman. Mrs. Coleman met Miss Sandall last summer at Santa Barbara, Cal., where the latter was one of the most sought after and popular visitors. She is alluring in appearance, being a titian haired blonde, tall, with fine features, and has a personality both strong and sweet, with a sympathetic manner. She studied with the famous Swiss psychologist, Dr. Roger Vittoz, in Lausanne, and discusses in her talks such subjects as "Habits (Our Blessing and Our Curse)," "Egotism and Its Manifestations," "The Relation of Emotion and Intellect," and "Imagination (the Destroyer and Builder)."

She is returning in December to give some of these and kindred talks in Chicago. One of them will be given to the members of the Casino, when her topic will be "On the Trail of Charm."

Returns at the Casino.

The Casino, that center of so much of the winter galeties, is giving a dinner to its members on the evening of election day, Nov. 4, when election returns will be reported by radio. The guests may sit at their bridge and mah jongg games and listen at the same time to what the voters of the country have decided to do in the way of electing officials both local and national, thus losing no time in either important pursuit. One can imagine such remarks as "I bid two no trumps, there's Coolidge still ahead," or "Pung! Good gracious, Jones is gaining!"

By the way, there is a lot of talk about scratching your ballot, many intensely partisan folk saying that such ballots are more than likely to be thrown out. Don't be misled by such talk. The Supreme court of Illinois has declared that a ballot which has a cross in one or the other of the party circles and which further down contains a cross in front of some candidate of another party is legal and must be so counted. As there are at each polling place several watchers for each party, it should be impossible for a ballot so inscribed to be thrown out.

To be perfectly safe, however, the cautious and suspicious can omit that cross in the party circle and put one in front of each and every candidate he or she wants elected. Provided that two candidates for the same office are not marked on the same ballot, such a vote is waterproof, airtight, incombustible, and cannot be thrown out. The thing to be considered, if you don't want to vote for a candidate in your party and also won't vote for his opponent in the other party, is that it has been found possible in times past for dishonest counters with the stub of a pencil concealed in the palm of the hand to mark a cross in the circle of a ballot not marked, and so produce a vote for a candidate whom you might consider undesirable. Not to be able to scratch a ballot correctly proves the voter unworthy the privilege of voting. One final suggestion: the canny use indelible pencils for these important affairs.

Women Lend Support.

The women in every community, large or small, are working at top speed these fine autumn days to promote the election of this, that, and the other candidate. Mrs. Jacob Baur's finance committee of Republican women meets every Thursday at Grayling's restaurant in the Wrigley building, where over luncheon they discuss ways and means to raise the sinews of war from a somewhat reluctant world, whose motto seems to be on such occasions, "Let George do it!"

The Independent Democratic women's committee, which was organized last spring and then passed into a summer swoon, is reviving and is holding a meeting tomorrow at the Casino at 2 o'clock, at which the elections of two Democratic candidates for governor and senator, Jones and Sprague, will be urged with especial favor.

Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank will preside, and others interested in getting it up are Mrs. A. A. Sprague, Mrs. Henry S. Robbins, Mrs. Mitchell Follansbee, Mrs. James Weber Linn, Mrs. Francis Johnson, Mrs. Edward J. Fleming, Mrs. George Bass, Mrs. William E. Dever, Mrs. George Brennan, Mrs. Murray Washburne, Miss Mary Newberry, and Miss Alice Moran. It is expected that many who, in other circumstances would not vote with the Democrats, will attend this meeting to show their support of one or the other or both of these candidates.

MRS. WALTER A. MACK.
[Lewis-Smith Photo.]

Miss Viola Merriman, daughter of D. A. Merriman of 5402 South Shore drive, became the bride of Walter A. Mack, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Mack of Springfield, Mass., on Oct. 7. The Rev. Shannon performed the ceremony at St. Thomas' church at 6 o'clock, after which a reception at the Merriman residence took place. The marriage was blessed by the pope.

An Old Fashioned Rally.

Up in Lake Forest party lines are being obliterated in certain groups in the desire to promote the election of these same two Democratic nominees. The title of the committee organizing these local voters is so portentous I don't know whether I have room for it in my column, but here's a try at it: "The Lake County Republican Sprague for Senator committee." Isn't that a mouthful? This group is also working for Judge Jones. The meeting on Tuesday evening in this fashionable north shore suburb will be held at the Young Men's club, and it promises to bring out the local lights in all walks of life. The speakers will be, first and foremost, the gallant colonel himself, then Maj. Reed Landis and Frank R. Schwengel. It will be an old fashioned political rally for Al Sprague in his home town. I presume there will be a torchlight procession and banners. I can't imagine a rally without these thrill trimmings. Among those organizing the affair are John A. Chapman, chairman; Alfred Granger, vice chairman; Mrs. A. A. Carpenter, Mrs. Clyde M. Carr, Mr. and Mrs. George Richardson, Mrs. Samuel T. Chase, Mrs. Walter Bridgman, and Henry Bunting.

It is curious to note the tense, almost ferocious feeling being developed in this campaign among those who in ordinary times are apparently fond of each other.

Said one earnest citizen and popular hostess to a supposedly dear friend, "If I'd thought you were going to vote for that man, I wouldn't have asked you to luncheon."

Said another to a man who avowed a belief in one of the presidential candidates of pronouncedly radical views, "Had I known how you felt, I would not have opened a bottle of my best Baccardi for you!"

I have been appealed to to expostulate with certain followers of this same radical element, but have so far refrained. Discussion seldom arrives anywhere. It is the still, small voice which as some mysterious fashion guides and controls us. If these seekers after light are worshiping a false dawn, they will find it out soon enough. If they are welcoming the coming sun, we shall find it out. Just how opinion, belief, principles become a part of the fiber of our beings, it takes a clever psychologist to find out, but it is certainly not by people as fallible as ourselves. There was never a truer saying than that of a man "convinced against his will is of the same opinion still."

Concert for Charity.

Meanwhile, charity and culture are pursuing their way side by side. The board of directors for the Serbian St. Sava's Home for Orphans is taking over the Alda-Metropolitan quartet concert set for Tuesday evening, Oct. 28, in Orchestra hall, when Frances Alda, soprano; Merle Alcock, contralto; Armand Tokatyan, tenor, and Lawrence Tibbett, baritone, are giving an entirely operatic concert. It is only by special arrangement with Mr. Gatti-Casazza that these stars from the Metropolitan Opera company are permitted to wander in such remote skies as ours. The St. Sava Home for Orphans is near Libertyville. Officers of its board of directors are Mrs. L. Hamilton McCormick and the Rt. Rev. Archimandrate Mardary, honorary chairmen; Mrs. E. A. Leight, president; the Mesdames Joseph Fish, E. R. Fifield, Wayne Chatfield-Taylor, and W. A. Yager, vice presidents; Mrs. John Handley, corresponding secre-

BEAUTY CULTURE IS THE BASIS OF THE BEST MONEY MAKING VOCATION FOR WOMEN TODAY!

By EMILY LLOYD
Founder of Marinello System, President National School of Cosmeticians

Largest Beauty Teaching Organization in the World With Mother School in Chicago

Do you know that a lipstick can be the key to happiness and a cleansing cream is more powerful than a typewriter?

For the last few decades, women everywhere have been turning to the business world as a source of economic independence. They have flocked into business offices, into sales rooms, into factories and markets. And they have proved to the world that they can successfully hold their own in fields that formerly had been dominated by men.

But hitherto, a business life meant for a women long drab hours in an office. It meant an occupation that at the most was not exactly interesting, and oftentimes almost unbearably monotonous. Women succeeded in business, but they were not always exactly happy about it.

Business of Beauty Fascinating

Recently a wonderful new business for women has been discovered—a Business of Happiness. It is vitally connected with such frivolously feminine articles as lipsticks and marcel irons, cleansing creams and subtle perfume. It teaches women the way to make themselves lovely, and then show them how to improve the appearance of other women.

You can learn this fascinating work in a few weeks of supervised scientific study. In all my eighteen years of experience I have seen so few failures among the women who have been earnest students that they are not worthy of mention. They are charmed by the opportunities of their business and easily learn the facts which every woman must know if she intends to escape the manmade businesses and enter into her own particular domain of happiness.

The requisite course of training is offered by the nine famous National Schools of Cosmeticians, teaching the Marinello System, known the world over for their advanced ideas and modern treatments. Pupils are prepared to take state examinations anywhere and have a thorough knowledge of the fundamentals of facial and scalp treatments, shampooing, manicuring, marcel, water and permanent waving, and hairdressing and electrolysis.

Intelligent Operators in Demand

Every graduate of the Marinello System who qualifies can find without difficulty a highly paying position. In almost any city on the map, Marinello shop owners enjoy an income of from $3,000 to $20,000 a year. Her ideas are scientifically correct, new and modern to keep pace with the changing fashions and conditions. While she is studying, she has had both practical and theoretical training, which gives her a great advantage over the shop taught operator. And, furthermore, she has been fully supplied with cosmetics, creams and lotions for her own personal use.

There are evening classes for those who can not attend in the day time. There are easy rates of payment arranged for those who feel they can not afford to go to school. We want every woman and girl to have her chance at being happy and have made every effort to help her to do so. All classes are held in the most attractive surroundings, and all instructors are highly trained and proficient in their own especial art.

Write now, or call for particulars. There are now more positions open than can be filled, and the new era of beauty culture, with its trim, white clad, perfectly groomed exponent is attractive enough to make any woman thankful that she can enter into the new "Business of Happiness."

Learn to make yourself beautiful, and then make money helping others!

WOMEN'S CLUB PAGE

Englewood Woman's Club Is Noted for Its Fine Programs

By Kate Webber.

As a result of the impetus given women's work by the board of women managers of the World's Columbian exposition in 1893 women of the south side communities organized their own small groups to carry on the enthusiasm they had received.

Of these groups the women of the Englewood community were among the first to fall in line. The Englewood Woman's club was formed in 1896 with approximately 150 members.

Now, twenty-eight years old and, contrary to all feminine tradition, rather proud of its age, through a succession of unfailingly able administrations, the club's growth to 900 members, plus a waiting list, has been limited only by the lack of an assembly hall in its locale sufficiently large to accommodate a greater number.

Naturally, when the organization was young, it had little to spend on platform talent. But even in its infant days, when its programs were in large measure home made, they were of an interesting variety and excellent quality, the membership always having been composed of a preponderance of intellectual women.

Coincident with the growth of the club its programs have become more ambitious. This year's program has been arranged with two purposes in view—to bring the club at large and the departments into more intimate association and to further a closer correlation between the club and the state federation's plan of work.

Many notable lecturers and good musicians will appear, and certain days have been dedicated to corresponding club activities. For instance, Oct. 27 will be devoted to the club bulletin and the bulletin's Main street, when an exhibit of advertising specialties will be staged, and talks relating to advertising will constitute the program.

Nov. 3 is listed as lunch room day. The 150 women who operate the lunch room at the Englewood High school will be guests. On this afternoon Mrs. O. R. Lake, a pioneer woman propagandist, a member of the woman's board of the World's fair and a popular speaker at its congresses, will talk on "Loyalties and Leaders," and Mrs. H. A. Morgan, a former president, will give a brief history of the lunch room enterprise.

The Christmas program will be presented by member talent, and will be arranged by the five department chairmen.

Other special days will include state federation day, music extension day, and a patriotic day on Feb. 23; this last to be in charge of D. A. R. and Colonial Dames members. The two outstanding events of the year—men's night and the spring luncheon—will feature exceptional programs, Whiting Williams and Demetra Vaka, Turkish author and feminist, being the respective speakers.

All five of the departments have arranged unusually fine programs, a unique feature being the presenting from each department's viewpoint of a program on one country—Brazil. The department chairmen are: Art, Mrs. Albert L. White; literature, Mrs. Walter Scott; education, Mrs. Charles F. Weir; sociology, Mrs. Foster S. Nims; music, Mrs. Willis E. Tower.

The lunchroom committee numbers 150 women who volunteer their services each week—thirty a day—to carry on the club's cafeteria in the Englewood High school, that funds may be had in plenty to foster the educational and philanthropical projects of the organization. Little children and old age, ambitious youth, disabled veterans—in fact, every form of human need—are beneficiaries of this philanthropy fund, disbursed in the approximate sum of $5,000 every year.

The club meets all day on Mondays at 6730 Wentworth avenue. The officers are: Mrs. A. R. E. Wyatt, president; Mrs. George C. Hunt, Mrs. Albert J. Fisher, Mrs. Gerald G. Barry, vice presidents; Mrs. Albert E. Beath, recording secretary; Mrs. Roy P. Rockefeller, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Charles B. Hill, treasurer. Additional directors are Mrs. Charles W. Brown, Mrs. Charles W. Leigh, and Mrs. Charles E. Shearman.

The interest of most of the women's clubs of the city will be centered tomorrow in the seventeenth annual tag day of the Chicago Children's Benefit league, of which Mrs. William C. Robinson is president. More than fifty charities will benefit directly from the occasion, there being no paid workers. Mrs. Ben E. Lawrence, first vice president, is assisting in arrangements.

Mrs. P. J. Carr is general chairman in charge of arrangements for a reception and ball to be given on Oct. 27 at the Trianon under the auspices of the Rosary College Benefactors' league. A large committee is assisting Mrs. Carr in working for the success of the affair.

Mrs. Armand Deutsch is a member of the ways and means committee of the American Association of Hospital Social Workers. A series of eight lectures is being given under the auspices of this organization in "Medicine and Industry" on Monday afternoons from 5 until 6 o'clock at 17 North State street, room 1800. Prof. Arthur J. Todd will speak on "Health and Employment" at the first lecture tomorrow.

One of the first of the south side clubs to be organized following the World's Columbian exposition was the Englewood Woman's club, which is one of the busiest and most beneficial in its influence of the city's organizations. Mrs. A. R. E. Wyant is president.

The Chicago chapter of the Alumnæ Association of Trinity College will give a bridge tea, its first affair, on Saturday at 2 o'clock at the Blackstone. The proceeds are to go toward the building and endowment fund of the college. Mrs. Arthur E. Biddle is president of the Chicago chapter.

Citizenship School to Open Tomorrow

A PRE-ELECTION school of citizenship will be opened tomorrow in room 1006 city hall under the auspices of the Woman's City club and the Illinois League of Women Voters. This will be one of the most important educational events of the year to all women interested in national and civic affairs. A five day course of intensive training in government and legislative work will be given through the medium of lectures by noted speakers, discussions, and open forums. Political problems will be considered, and at the information desk questions on local and national affairs can be asked and answered.

When Mrs. B. F. Langworthy, president of the Woman's City club, opens the first session tomorrow at 10 o'clock she will introduce Mrs. Kenneth Rich, vice president of the League of Women Voters, who will discuss "Some Features of the Election Laws of Illinois." This will be followed by a practical talk on the work of the election commission by Anthony F. Czarnecki. Mrs. Maurice H. Lieber will then speak on "Methods of Nomination" and "The Proposed Constitutional Amendment." Mrs. Florence Bennett Peterson will close the session with a talk on "Standards of Public Administration."

Two outstanding features of Tuesday's program will be a discussion by Miss Harriet E. Vittum of "Important Problems in Cook County," and a talk on "The Question of Taxation," by Prof. Ernest Harne of the University of Chicago. Wednesday and Thursday will be devoted to state and federal legislation, with lectures by representative speakers, among whom will be Prof. Leonard D. White of Northwestern university, Miss S. P. Breckinridge, Miss Julia C. Lathrop, Prof. John A. Fairlie of the University of Illinois, and others.

On Friday Charles E. Merriam will speak on "The Origin of Political Parties," and the school will close on Friday afternoon with a comparative study of the Republican, Democratic, and La Follette platforms by Miss Estelle Frances Ward, Mrs. William G. Hibbard, and Mrs. Hurlburd and a talk on "Major and Minor Political Parties in the United States," by Prof. P. O. Ray of Northwestern university.

During the entire course there will be constant opportunity for discussion and for obtaining information on questions of technicalities in citizenship and the machinery of government.

DOWNTOWN CLUBS

A business meeting of the Chicago Woman's club will be held on Wednesday at 2 o'clock. Committee reports and reports from delegates to the biennial federation, G. F. W. C., will be given, as well as reports from the state convention at Moline. The education and philosophy department will open its season tomorrow with a luncheon at 12:30 o'clock. The program will be given in brief talks. The historical research committee will give a costume luncheon for members and guests on Tuesday at 12:30 o'clock. A program of old time songs will be given. There will be a meeting of the literary study class on Tuesday morning to hear Mrs. Edwin T. Johnson speak on "Recent Biographies and Autobiographies of Statesmen." On Thursday at 12:15 o'clock Prof. Jantrow of the University of Wisconsin will address a joint meeting of the education and philosophy department and the home and public welfare department on "The Relation of the Emotions to Anti-Social Behavior." Judge Mary M. Bartelme and Harry A. Wheeler will be the speakers at a tea on Saturday at 2:30 o'clock under the auspices of the Park Ridge School for Girls committee.

At 2 o'clock tomorrow the sanitary district committee of the Woman's City club will meet, and at 6:30 the business and professional women's unit will have its fifth lesson in citizenship. Mrs. May Wood-Simons will conduct the Tuesday morning citizenship class in room 1006 City hall. At 12:30 the child welfare and public health committee will meet for luncheon. On Wednesday at 10:30 o'clock the recreation committee will meet and at 12:30 the Cook county affairs committee will have luncheon. At 2 o'clock the current book review will be held. On Thursday evening at 8 o'clock a civic meeting of the young woman's auxiliary will be held. The library committee will meet for luncheon on Friday at 12 o'clock.

The College club will give a luncheon on Tuesday at 12:30 o'clock for Lucy Fitch Perkins. At 2 o'clock Mrs. Perkins will speak concerning her writings. Mrs. Elbert Clark and Mrs. J. C. Markley will be hostesses at the Friday afternoon tea. Bridge and mah chiang will be played at the club on Saturday at 2:15 o'clock. Mrs. Homer W. Bang will be hostess.

At the second regular meeting of the Chicago Woman's Aid on Tuesday Thomas Surrette will speak on "Music and Other Arts." The regular classes will meet on the usual days.

The annual theater party of the first district, Illinois State Association of Graduate Nurses, will be held tomorrow evening at the Princess theater; Miss Nellie Crissy is president of the first district association.

The first autumn meeting of the Chicago Outdoor Art league will take place on Tuesday at 12:30 o'clock at the Chicago Woman's club, with the new president, Mrs. George E. Watson, presiding. Mrs. Alfred Cogswell Tyler, president of the Chicago Woman's club, will speak on "The Saving of the Redwoods." Other speakers include Mrs. Frederick W. Blocki, Miss Kathleen Alford, Mrs. Theron Colton, Mrs. Frederic W. Bentley, and Mrs. Linn White.

The first quarterly meeting of the Big Sisters will be held on Saturday at 2:30 o'clock in Recital hall, Fine Arts building. Bishop Edward F. Hoban will be a guest and will speak. Plans will be discussed for the third annual Armistice eve charity ball to be given on Nov. 10 at the Drake.

A luncheon will be given on Friday at 12:30 o'clock at Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co., under the auspices of the Woman's Protective association. Judge Mary Bartelme, Mrs. B. F. Langworthy, and Mrs. H. W. Hartough will speak.

The League of Cook County Women's clubs will hold its first meeting on Saturday at 10:30 o'clock in the State-Lake building. The education committee will present as speakers Mrs. Edward W. Bemis, Julius B. Smietanka, and George B. Masslich.

The Illinois Society of Occupational Therapists will meet on Friday afternoon with Dr. Mary G. Schroeder at Winfield sanitarium.

Gene Markey of THE TRIBUNE will speak at the opening meeting of the literary round table of the Chicago Culture club tomorrow at the Hotel La Salle. The civics and legislative class will meet at 1 o'clock.

Oberlin women will have a luncheon on Saturday at 12:30 o'clock at Field's. Mrs. C. B. Martin will be the guest and speaker.

The Woman's Allied Drug club will observe civic day at its meeting on Thursday at 2 o'clock at the Morrison hotel. Miss M. L. Carpenter and Nels Darling will speak, and there will be music.

Mrs. Myrtle Tanner Blackledge, Miss Katherine O'Laughlin, and Mrs. Glen E. Plumb will speak on the coming elections on Tuesday evening at the meeting of the Dental Woman's club, to be held at 6 o'clock at the Woman's City club.

The Truth About Permanent Waving

It Is Not Harmful! It Is Not Expensive! It Is Lasting!

The Lanoil Process Uses Less Heat

By this process one can have the newly grown roots of the hair waved even if they are only one inch long. The wave may be large and soft or firm and fluffy or made to curl in little puff or ring curls, or it may be dressed in crown curls or in any artistic manner of dressing to suit the taste of our client.

We also curl children's hair to hang in lovely curls which may be kept in order by combing around the finger. This is a delight to the little school girl and a joy to the mother.

Permanent Waving No Longer Expensive—the Most Experienced Wavers Charge Only $25.00

Due to the great strides that have been made in perfecting the process it has been possible to place the permanent wave within the reach of every woman who desires it. There is no discomfort, no pulling or breaking of the hair, and the result is a beautiful and lasting wave done by the best operators in America at the low price of $25.

EXPERIENCE has demonstrated that a permanent wave, done by a BURNHAM EXPERT OPERATOR, IS ABSOLUTELY HARMLESS—and that ordinarily a wave will last from four to six months depending on texture.

* * * * * * *

That both of these claims are well founded is evidenced by the fact that many of our customers have had 28 waves—one every six months for fourteen years.

We Have Just Equipped an Entirely New Department On the Third Floor of Our State Street Building Devoted Exclusively to Permanent Waving by the NESTLE LANOIL process

Some of the features are:—

The World's Best Operators, Including Mr. Heding formerly with Mr. Nestle in New York

Capacity of 100 Permanent Waves per day. Perfect Appointments. Absolute Privacy. New Prices—ranging from $25.00 down according to number of curls desired.

MRS. HARRY T. SANGER.
[Moffett Photo.]

The Chicago Culture club, under the leadership of the president, Mrs. Harry T. Sanger, has begun its season of study and charitable activities. In addition to its several departments, the club usually gives during the winter at least one affair for the benefit of small children, as well as donating to other causes.

Club Ethics

By Maude Swalm Evans.

THE members of the lunch club open forum were together for the first time after the summer vacation.

"It gives me a thrill to be back among you all again," said the committee chairman, beaming at them.

"A thrill a day keeps monotony away," contributed the rhymster.

"It's quite amazing, the number of thrills one can get out of club life," the enthusiastic member voiced. "I used to think all the thrills of life would be over for me when I was 30, and that I'd join a woman's club then, and settle down to a life of dullness, but it hasn't worked out that way at all. I've found club life just one thrill after another, from the day I joined my first little club right up to the present time."

"I had my most wonderful thrill when the club gave me the farewell dinner, just before I went to France, you know when," related the welfare worker, "but I've always been sentimental, somehow, about the thrill I got when I was new in club work and the speaker of the afternoon commended from the platform something I had done."

"My biggest thrill," reminisced the city official, "was when an organization of men invited me to address their national convention. They sent a taxi for me, and when I returned home I found awaiting me a tub full of American Beauties with their compliments. I thrill yet when I think of it."

"I have had all of the fifty-seven varieties of thrills in my club life," the ex-president vouchsafed, "but last spring, at the close of the state convention, when the whole assemblage stood up and sang 'The Tie That Binds,' I thought that, after all, the thrilliest thrill comes from just being a part of this great woman's club movement, which is, you know, of the women, for the women, and by the women."

The Chrysolite club will hold the first of a series of current events talks on Tuesday, followed by a card party in the afternoon.

Prof. Frederick S. Breed of the University of Chicago will speak on "Newer Tendencies in the Instruction of Pupils" on Wednesday afternoon before the Woodlawn Mothers' round table.

Mrs. N. F. Burns of 4329 Kimbark avenue will be hostess on Tuesday for the Chicago Literary Score.

Dr. D. J. Beeby will speak on "The Modern Point of View in the Teaching of History" tomorrow before the Washington Park Woman's club.

A discussion of the uses of silver will be held at the morning meeting of the Bryn Mawr Woman's club tomorrow. At 2 o'clock Dr. William A. Colledge will speak on "The Psychology of Personality."

The department of applied education of the Hamilton Park Woman's club will present the program on Tuesday morning, when a program on home decorations will be given. Prof. Franklin Bliss Snyder will address the afternoon session, under the auspices of the literature department.

St. Cyril's Woman's club will give a card party, the first of a series of events, on Tuesday at 1:30 o'clock in the new community auditorium, 64th street and Dante avenue. Mrs. Harold A. Wilford is chairman of arrangements.

Delegates to the biennial and state federations will submit their reports at the morning session, and Mrs. Oscar Hebel will speak on "My Impressions of Europe." Following a business session and luncheon, Judge Charles H. McKinley will speak on "The Boys' Court," and there will be music.

The Mothers' Relief association, of which Mrs. Charles Danz is president, will give a card party tomorrow afternoon at the Edgewater Beach hotel, for the benefit of the fund for caring for the poor. Mrs. Ernest Kendall and Mrs. George Neafus are in charge.

A luncheon and card party will be given tomorrow at the Rainbo Gardens by the Milton Vehon charity workers. Mrs. E. S. Meyerson is chairman.

The Woman's club of the People's church will give a program tomorrow at 2 o'clock at the Edgewater Beach hotel. Political candidates will speak.

A meeting of the literature study class of the Edgemere Woman's club will be held on Tuesday morning at the Edgewater Beach hotel. Following luncheon the home economics department will give a program, with Mrs. Annie Peaks Kenny and Charles D. Isaacson as speakers.

Miss Marie Bonde of 1429 Rosemont avenue will be hostess on Tuesday evening for a meeting of the Edgemere juniors.

WEST SIDE CLUBS

Mrs. O. R. Lake of Minooka and Miss Jessie Spafford of Rockford will be the speakers at the meeting of the Sixth district, I. F. W. C., to be held on Thursday at Western Springs. The Western Springs Woman's club, as hostess, will serve luncheon between sessions in the new school building. Mrs. Earl D. Andrews is chairman of arrangements. Mrs. J. Marc Fowler will preside.

An interesting program, celebrating Mrs. L. Conant's birthday and the thirtieth anniversary of her association with Chicago Commons, will feature the meeting on Tuesday afternoon of the Chicago Commons Woman's club.

The civics and philanthropy department of the West End Woman's club will have a luncheon on Friday at 12 o'clock. At 1 o'clock R. E. Pattison Kline will speak on "World Personalities and Their Programs." At 2:30 Mrs. J. C. Hallam will give a lecture on "The Spiritual Meaning of the Vote."

THE REAL INSIDE DOPE ON THE MOVIE STARS

Dead Director's Spirit Her Guide and Inspiration

By Julia Harpman.

THE spirit of George Loane Tucker, who died shortly after he discovered her genius, has guided Betty Compson along the bright path of movie fame. Betty has known misery as dark as the gloom of the mine 6,000 feet below the surface of the earth, where her father used to work and where he often took her when she was a child. She has felt the gnawing of hunger and the smell of the cheapest of tawdry country hotels.

But she is a brave little thing, with a stubborn chin and defiant blue eyes, and she was determined to let no force of circumstances down her. She is a miner's daughter turned violinist who, by accident, was made an actress.

Betty has been loved by many men but she is now contemplating her first marriage. She has contemplated such a step before but she faltered before she reached the altar.

The beautiful star, whose greatest fame came with her appearance as Rose in Tucker's "The Miracle Man," now lives in luxury, but she worked hard for many years to make ends meet.

Father a Miner.

She was born in Beaver, a sparsely settled town near Frisco, Utah, and most of her childhood was spent in the vicinity of the Silver King mine at Park City, in southern Utah and at the Horn silver mine, where her father worked. Slag dumps were her sand piles and she liked the spooky miner's lights that bobbed about like fireflies beneath the earth, when she was permitted to go down in the cage with the miners.

She started to school at 7. When she was 10, her parents moved to Salt Lake City. They had determined to make their daughter a violinist, so Betty started her musical studies soon after the move. Her progress was splendid and she developed really remarkable talent.

Betty's father fell ill with a malady that proved fatal. All the earnings of the family were swept away in the vain effort to save his life and it was then that Betty's musical training began to repay her for her many weary hours of practice.

She got a position that paid $15 a week with the orchestra at the Mission theater in Salt Lake City and after school each day would hasten to the theater to play.

One of the performers failed to show up one day and the manager of the theater suggested to Betty that she fill in the program by furnishing a violin number. Betty was delighted. Her act went well and she remained on the bill. She was still going to high school and all her classmates came to the theater to applaud her act.

Then she quit school to accept an offer to appear on small time around the western territory. She played all the little towns of Utah, Arizona, and Montana. Her salary was small and out of it she had to pay her living expenses, railroad fare, and furnish her own clothes.

She was only 16 and her mother refused to allow her to travel alone. But, after one tour with her mother, Betty decided that unless they both were to starve, she would have to tackle the job unchaperoned and send to her mother whatever she could save out of her salary.

* *

Without a Dime.

Mrs. Compson found work as a housekeeper at a summer resort near Salt Lake.

Then followed a dreary existence for both mother and daughter—Betty, traveling from small town to smaller village, performing before audiences composed of farmers, miners, and loafers; riding in dusty, plush day coaches that smelled of bananas; sleeping in dingy hotels that sometimes boasted of one general bath; going without food in order to buy some trinket that would brighten her old clothes.

And then—San Francisco. Stranded and penniless. Salt Lake City, where Betty's mother was working, was measured off in dollars. Sixty dollars' worth of ticket was required to reach her mother. And she didn't have a dime.

JAMES CRUZE. GEORGE LOANE TUCKER.

BETTY COMPSON.

BETTY COMPSON is the girl who rose to stardom in "The Miracle Man"; George Loane Tucker was the man who directed it. When he died, Betty said she'd lost not only her one great love, but her best friend. She was married last week to her present director, James Cruze.

Betty took the first job she could get—nursemaid to the children of a wealthy shipbuilder. The job paid $20 a month, and Betty was given her room and meals besides. In three months, she figured, she could go home. Things went well enough until the elder son of the household fell in love with her.

Betty knew she would be discharged if the youth's parents discovered his infatuation for her, and she did not wish to lose her job before she had saved the $60 needed to buy her ticket home. It was a nerve racking situation, but Betty managed to earn the money and she returned to Salt Lake City.

An agent, booking from Salt Lake, put her in a girl show that toured the northwest. Betty met a friend of Al Christie, then of the Universal Film company, but who, with his brother, later built his own studio. The man wrote to Christie himself, telling of Betty's beauty, her vivacity, and the likelihood of her making good in pictures.

He promised Betty a picture test if she would come to Universal City. Betty screened so well that she was offered immediate work at $40 a week. She wired her mother to join her in Los Angeles.

Began in Comedy.

Betty began in comedy pictures playing with Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran. Her mother developed a sort of genius at changing the same dress to look like several. There is an unwritten law that a movie actress must not wear the same dress in two different pictures. And Betty's purse was not fat enough to provide new costumes for each picture. Sometimes she rented evening dresses for $3 a day.

Christie formed his own company and Betty played in his comedies for nearly three years. She lost her job when she refused one night to make a personal appearance.

She wanted to be an emotional actress but chances were scarce. She was promised several jobs that never materialized. Promises are made in Hollywood chiefly to break. There was a long period of idleness with occasional occupation in comedies and dramas but nothing that bore fruit in a contract.

Then Betty was featured by Pathe in a serial called "The Terror of the Range." That was followed by work in "The Prodigal Liar." And then came the chance which was to bring her fame and fortune.

George Loane Tucker, who believed she could portray dramatic parts were she given the chance, cast her in the part of Rose in "The Miracle Man," a film production which made history in the moving picture world. That same picture also made stars of Lon Chaney and Thomas Meighan.

The picture was not released for some time after it was finished and during those weeks, before the film world viewed it and acclaimed Miss Compson a star, Betty almost starved. She managed to borrow money enough to eke out an existence, however, confident that she would be offered more work in dramatic pictures as soon as "The Miracle Man" was released.

His Spirit Her Guide.

Tucker had believed in Betty. He inspired her and she often has said she lost her best friend when Tucker died. He, she said, was her one great love, and, after his death, his spirit continued to guide her.

"G. L. T. (George Loane Tucker) told me not to try to be a pioneer in spiritualism," Betty told an interviewer after his death. "He didn't want me to suffer the derision that comes to the pioneer, especially the pioneer in religion. But he's glad to have me speak now.

"With G. L. T. beside me, encouraging me, I don't care what the scoffers say. It may help timid believers to express themselves."

Betty told how she had experimented, while on location, with a square of cardboard for an ouija board and how the spirit of Tucker answered her summons.

"G. L. T. was as happy to talk with me as I was with him," Betty said. "He said that even in that higher life I was still the light of the world to him. But he asked me not to tax my nervous strength by communicating frequently with those who had passed on and up, for no human system could stand it.

"I asked him if he were happy, and "Death will be wonderful," the dashing, rather imperious little star said on that occasion. "I shall be glad when the time comes to pass over—to join G. L. T. and the rest and to find out for myself what it is all about. I am so curious, and so thoroughly sure, it will be a happy transition."

Married on Wednesday.

Time has healed, in some measure, her grief for Tucker. She will never forget him, but she learned to be interested in men again, though Walter Morosco, whom she was expected to marry, proceeded to wed Corinne Griffith.

Betty was married last Wednesday to James Cruze, her present director. It was the second wedding in the film colony that day, Marie Prevost and Kenneth Harlan having put their heads into the noose a few hours earlier.

The Compson-Cruze wedding was to have taken place in the abandoned mining town that once was Frisco, Utah. Betty was born there, and the place had romantic associations, for there Mrs. Compson met and fell in love with her husband. The bride was going to be married in knickers or a riding habit. The honeymoon was to be spent in a little cottage on the ranch of a friend of Cruze's. Or so the press agents said.

But when it came right down to hardtack, the two screen luminaries were married last week right at the home of the bridegroom in a Los Angeles suburb. The bride had barely recovered from a battered nose, bruised forehead, and black eye which she received in some mysterious fashion and which tied up work on her picture, not to say her wedding, for days.

Cruze has just received his final decree of divorce from Marguerite Snow. In spite of the parting, the former husband and wife are still friendly. In fact, only a short time ago Cruze built his ex-wife a beautiful home from his enormous earnings as director of "The Covered Wagon."

It was while directing this, his greatest picture, that Cruze stumbled on the deserted town of Betty's birth, which was settled during the silver rush and abandoned long ago. He thought it would be a nice idea to charter a special train and return there for the wedding, but stern practicality changed their plans.

One Reason for Economical and Wholesome Foods

Good flour, the best eggs, sugar and the purest of other ingredients will not and cannot produce perfect and wholesome bakings if the baking powder you use is inferior.

The leavener you employ can either ruin or "make" the baking. That's the very reason most housewives use

CALUMET
THE WORLD'S GREATEST BAKING POWDER

It is by far the most economical of all leaveners because it never spoils any of the other ingredients used with it—bakings always come from the oven perfectly raised and baked.

If you are not one of the millions who use Calumet—try it. Compare the bakings made with it to those made with other brands. Learn of the satisfaction that comes from using a perfect leavener.

For economy sake—for pure foods use Calumet and take the "chances" out of bake day.

ART AND ARTISTS

Showing the Many Sides of Besnard's Creative Spirit

By Eleanor Jewett.

IN the print rooms of the Art institute there is at present a recently installed exhibition of prints by the French artist, Albert Besnard. A painting by Besnard, acquired by the institute within the last year, had already prepared us in some measure for this more extensive illustration of the kind of creative work which is distinctively his. Splendid modeling, strong contours, realism that is significant without becoming coarse, these characteristics are to be found in Besnard's prints and painting.

It is fortunate for his reputation of nonmaterialism that the collection of etchings on view is as comprehensive as it is. Practically all sides of his creative spirit are shown. There is the tenderly sentimental, for which we turn to the charming card announcing the birth of a son. A woman bends caressingly over a crib nearly buried in flowing curtains. The name "Philippe" and the date carry the story.

Again, the father is uppermost in the artist's soul when he does the portraits of two other children, the one a sturdy boy, Robert Besnard, and the other an attractive little girl, Germaine Besnard. Nor is the spirit of tenderness, which inspired these, absent from the presentation of a lonely little donkey cowering in the lea of a fishing boat: "The Little Donkey of Berck." And that same spirit hovers like a benediction over the beautiful etching of "The Sick Mother."

There are a number of splendid portraits in the exhibit. Georges Clemenceau, Auguste Rodin, the queen of Belgium, Cardinal Mercier, and Venizelos are all striking likenesses, drawn not with the intention of flattery, but as truthful representations of the several persons as they impressed the artist. Grouped with the portraits one might mention the "Head of Claire," a remarkable piece of work in which particular emphasis should be placed upon the rendering of the hair, the brows, and the eyes. It is a fine face, though perhaps brutal—or bitter. The face of a woman, it is at all events, who can stand up for herself and give as good as she gets, whether in love or war or the petty affairs of every day.

The great majority of the prints, as might be expected, deals with women. The series devoted to portraying the various phases of woman as she lives through her life is rather cynical. The truth is expressed baldly. There is the new mother, the bereaved wife, the lover, the flirt, the prostitute, the woman of fashion, the woman of the market place—scarce a type of the feminine that is not depicted. They remind one, as so many similarly inspired cartoons do, of Hogarth and his "Prodigal" series.

A number of nudes, studies of both the male and female form, the latter predominating, however, complete the collection. In these the form is invariably given as that of a strong, muscular woman, well developed and well clothed in flesh. The woman of fashion assuredly can have no place in the studios where curves are desired and ribs unhesitatingly barred. Peasant women, for the most part, Besnard's women seem to be. They are not coarse, but neither are they fine. They are healthy and vigorous and strong and vital, not beautiful except as abundant health gives them beauty.

Aside from these, a few etchings of a different type soften the group. There is the lovely "Woman with Shawl" and a "Portrait of Mlle. V."; on a further wall is "Chin in Hand" and again "La Confidence." The "Fisherwomen of Berck" is a splendid print and the several drawings of horses give another point from which to acknowledge Besnard's mastery of his medium.

All in all the print department must be congratulated on this exhibition. It is one of the most interesting that its walls have afforded us in some time.

"The Interrupted Reading," by Corot, is in the Palmer collection at the Art institute. This Corot is so unusual that, though it is one of the permanent treasures of the museum, it is worth special mention. Few people realize the French painter could paint portraits. Corot as a name is forever associated with landscapes and graceful trees from which detached slips of leaves shimmer down through the soft air. This portrait of a woman gives Corot's genius from another angle and makes us appreciate his power the more.

Word has just been received of the death of Frank Phoenix, for many years an instructor of painting at the Art institute, at his home in Glendale, Cal.

The loss of its president, Charles L. Hutchinson, by death will be felt by the Art institute for a long while. He had been president for forty-two years. Mr. Hutchinson died at the Presbyterian hospital on Tuesday afternoon, Oct. 7. He had been in delicate health for the last year, and a few weeks ago had undergone a minor operation from which he was rapidly recovering when bronchial pneumonia developed and he was unable to withstand the attack.

It was as a young man of 25 that Mr. Hutchinson first became connected with the Art institute. At a meeting in parlor O of the Palmer house, on May 13, 1879, he was one of twenty public spirited citizens who met to form an organization for the promotion of art in Chicago. George Armour was elected president, E. W. Blatchford, vice president, Lyman J. Gage, treasurer, and William M. R. French, secretary. On Aug. 1 of that year Mr. Hutchinson was made auditor, and in May, 1880, was elected a trustee. Mr. Armour served one year as president and was succeeded by Levi Z. Leiter with Mr. Hutchinson as vice president. The following year, on April 4, 1882, Mr. Hutchinson was elected president, with George E. Adams as vice president.

At that time Newton H. Carpenter was secretary and William M. R. French director. There followed for the succeeding thirty-two years the remarkable association of these three men, Mr. Hutchinson, Mr. Carpenter, and Mr. French. With others, the task of building our present Art institute to its state of still expanding excellence was carried on lovingly and eagerly by these three. The problems and needs of the institute grew with the passing years, and their powers apparently increased as each problem or need rose to be met.

Today not one of those three men lives. Mr. French died in 1914, Mr. Carpenter in 1918, and Mr. Hutchinson within the month. To their successors, Vice Presidents Martin A. Ryerson and Frank G. Logan, long associated with them in building up the museum, and to the active trustees and friends of the Art institute remains the task of carrying on the work laid aside by this trio whom death has called.

Something new in art training for children will be found in the special course of five lectures to be given in Fullerton hall of the Art institute by Dudley Crafts Watson. His subject is "Art for Children." The course is designed for the children of members of the Art institute, and it is hoped that courses such as this will lead to the addition of many new members. The lectures start on Nov. 1 and continue each Saturday during the month, at 2:30 o'clock.

Karl A. Buehr, instructor in painting at the Art institute, has been given an extra month's leave of absence. He is painting the marvelous coloring of autumn that seems to reach its most flaming perfection in the maples of New England.

Edward B. Butler is painting the fall glories of the Berkshires.

Robert B. Harshe, director of the Art institute, is in New York, where he will sit with the eastern jury for the selection of paintings to be hung in the forthcoming exhibition of American paintings and sculpture, which will open on Thursday, Oct. 30, at the Art institute. The exhibition will continue to Dec. 14.

Charles Fabens Kelley, assistant to the director, will instruct a class in lithography in the school of the Art institute on Friday afternoons. The class was filled at its first meeting on Oct. 3, so popular was its appeal even though the number of pupils accepted was limited by careful selection.

Tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in Fullerton hall Lionel Robertson will lecture on "Interior Decoration—The American-Spanish Home."

The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter published on "The Most Embarrassing Moment of My Life." Address Embarrassing Moments, The Tribune, Chicago. Write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned.

Sleeves to Blame.

A few Sundays ago, my friend, a quiet young gentleman, was staying at my home for dinner. The forenoon had been spent in an exciting game of croquet and the time had flown so quickly that we did not realise how late it was until it was within one half hour of the time when we were expected to meet some friends at a park some distance from home.

Dad and the boys rushed to the table while mother and I brought in the dinner. My friend was seated with his back directly to the door. I was wearing a dress with sleeves which tapered outward at the bottom, and not being used to the longer style of sleeves combined with my haste caused all my dismay and embarrassment. I had just removed a steaming dish of chicken gravy from the stove and was about to pass it to my friends when my sleeve caught over the carved post on the back of the chair and my arm was jerked backward with such rapidity and force that the gravy dish slipped from my hand and landed upside down on the ege of my friend's plate. Gravy flew in all directions, and to my dismay and horror my friend got the worst of it. It was on his face, hands, shirt front, and trousers.

When the scalding gravy struck him he sprang up, upsetting his chair and bumped me under the chin with the top of his head. Luckily he was not burned. Every one laughed and tried to see the funny side of it, but the day was literally spoiled for me. F. E. W.

As Luck Would Have It.

One day last week a friend of mine phoned me and advised that she had been given two tickets for a matinée for the next day. I am employed, and as it happened I was swamped with work, but the invitation looked good to me, so the next day when I came down to the office I asked my employer for the afternoon off, giving the excuse that I should like to go to the doctor to have my eyes tested.

I was granted the favor—and my friend and I attended the matinée. Imagine me when I found my employer's wife occupying the seat next to me. To make the story more interesting, I was asked the next morning how the show appealed to me.

I wonder now what would happen if I realy had to see the eye doctor.

Church Publicity Conference to Be Held on Oct. 27

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

THE sixth church publicity conference under the auspices of the Chicago Church federation will be held at the Morrison hotel on Monday, Oct. 27, and will have several new features. Awards will be given to church advertising material deemed the best by competent judges. This material is to be in the hands of the Church federation, 77 West Washington street, by tomorrow.

The conference will constitute the regular monthly union ministers' meeting and will be held from 10 a. m. to 5 p. m. From 12:15 to 2:30 the annual meeting of the federation will be held in connection with a luncheon. Carl E. Milliken, former governor of Maine and president of the Baptist Northern convention, and Maud Ballington Booth of the Volunteers of America will be speakers at the luncheon. Col. R. R. McCormick, co-editor of THE TRIBUNE, will speak at 2:45 on "Why the Newspaper Is and Why It Is Objected To." Edward R. Mahoney, city editor of the Chicago American, will speak at 4:15 on "The Relation of Pulpit to Press." J. B. Wootan, founder of the publicity department of the Presbyterian church, will speak at 10:50 a. m. on "What, When, and Where to Advertise." The Rev. J. T. Brabner Smith will give the keynote address and preside at the morning session. Homer J. Buckley, chairman of the advertising council, Chicago Association of Commerce, will preside at the afternoon session.

A glance at the regular announcements of services in Lutheran churches will reveal the presence in Chicago today of a large number of visiting ministers and laymen who are occupying Chicago pulpits, especially of the United Lutheran Church in America. Their presence is occasioned by the opening of the fourth convention of the Lutheran brotherhood tomorrow at 3 o'clock at the Edgewater Beach hotel, 5349 Sheridan road, at Balmoral avenue. The brotherhood program will be signalized by a monster banquet at the Edgewater Beach hotel tomorrow evening at which 1,500 or more are expected. The program continues through Tuesday. Dr. S. S. Waltz is the general secretary of the brotherhood. On Tuesday evening the fourth biennial convention of the United Lutheran Church in America will begin with the administration of the holy sacrament and sermon in the Wicker Park church, North Hoyne avenue and Le Moyne street.

The convention will continue with three sessions daily, 8:45 a. m., 2 p. m. and 8 p. m., at the Edgewater Beach hotel through Tuesday, Oct. 28. A banquet under the auspices of the laymen's association will be held on Wednesday evening, and an automobile ride to view Lutheran institutions will be made Saturday afternoon. The Women's Home and Foreign Missionary societies will meet at the Woodlawn Immanuel church, 64th street and Kenwood avenue, all day next Tuesday. The general synod will meet in Holy Trinity church, the United Synod south in the Rogers Park church and the general council in Unity church on Tuesday afternoon.

Dr. John A. W. Haas, who will speak this evening at 8 at the Sunday Evening club at Orchestra hall, is president of Muhlenberg college, Allentown, Pa. He will be one of the chief speakers at the national convention of the United Lutheran Church in America, which meets this week at the Edgewater Beach hotel. Dr. Haas was formerly pastor of St. Paul's church in New York, where he led in the erection of a fine building and built up a large congregation. He has lectured at Harvard university, Cambridge, and at Leipsig university, Germany. Dr. John F. Seibert, general secretary of the denomination, and John W. O'Leary will assist. Clifford W. Barnes will speak on "Pilgrim Progress" at 7 o'clock. A choir of 100 will sing.

Trinity Methodist Episcopal church, of which the Rev. A. Turley Stephenson is pastor, will dedicate today its new house of worship at Winchester avenue and 99th street. The cost of the building so far completed is $176,000. Another $100,000 will be expended later in erecting the auditorium. The new buildings, which are of gray brick and Bedford stone, afford accommodations for the Sunday school, social hall, library, study, gymnasium and kitchen.

The Rev. Mr. Stephenson is beginning the fourth year of his pastorate. He is a graduate of De Pauw university, Indiana, and Garrett Biblical institute, Evanston. Trinity church was for years the leading Methodist Episcopal church of Chicago. It is still one of the best, and its location promises further growth. Bishop Thomas Nicholson of Detroit, formerly of Chicago, will dedicate the church at the service beginning at 10:30. The Rev. P. H. Swift and the Rev. E. G. Schutz will assist. Dr. W. J. Davidson, president Illinois Wesleyan university, will speak at 5 p. m., and Dr. John Thompson at 8. Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes will be the principal speaker at the community banquet Friday evening.

Dr. Felix A. Levy will speak at 11 a. m. on the subject, "When a Man Reaches Forty," at the first Sunday morning service held on the north side in a Jewish temple. Dr. Levy is rabbi of Temple Emanuel at 701 Buckingham place, and here he will begin a series of Sunday services which, it is believed, will prove epochal. The music and ritual have been carefully planned.

The congregations of Isaiah and Israel temples will celebrate their union into one congregation this evening at 7:30 at the temple, Hyde Park boulevard and Greenwood avenue. The service will begin with a procession led by the rabbis of the new congregation, Joseph Stolz and Gerson B. Levi, followed by the officers and directors of the two congregations carrying the scrolls of the law.

Dr. W. R. Wedderspoon, pastor St. James Methodist Episcopal church, will lecture on "The Bonnie Briar Bush" this evening at 8 o'clock at the Chicago temple, Clark and Washington streets. Dr. John Thompson, the pastor, will preach at 10:45 a. m.

The Rev. Fred D. Stone will preach this morning his initial sermon as pastor of Irving Park Methodist Episcopal church, North Keeler avenue and Grace street. He succeeds Dr. A. S. Haskins, who was pastor of the Irving Park church twenty-six years. Dr. Stone was district superintendent for six years.

Bishop Shayler of Nebraska will preach today at 11 o'clock in Epiphany Episcopal church, Adams street and Ashland boulevard.

Get Your Pep Back this New and Easy Way

Dr. Gross' Cod Liver Oil Tablets are Guaranteed to Make You Feel Fine in No Time

There's no greater burden on family or friends than a person who is run-down and tired-out all the time.

And the worst of it is, in most cases it's unnecessary for anyone to feel that way. If you're below par—if you lack pep, energy and vigor, if you want to right-about-face and get a new kick out of life, just try Dr. Gross' Cod Liver Oil Tablets. Sugar-coated, easy to take as candy, these tablets will keen you up like a vacation, make you eat like a farm-hand, give you new interest in life and do it in a hurry. All druggists have Dr. Gross' Tablets. Try them, and feel like a new person—healthy, ruddy, strong! You don't risk a penny: results are guaranteed.

by December 1st to Sell Furnaces and Boilers
First, the man we want must be a sales man—one who understands the value of and ap preciates the value of advertising as a sales asset in selling the dealer. He must be able to use intelligently the proved merchandising methods and sales helps provided.
Second he must be a man who under stands or is willing to learn the fundamen tals of heating. The man we seek will not be satisfied with the income he will receive at the start, but will demonstrate his ability and sales ability to such good advantage that he will deserve and receive liberal increase in salary before many months.
This organization is a million dollar com pany that has manufactured a quality prod uct for over half a century, favorably known and nationally advertised.
All communications will be treated confi dentially. Our present salesmen know about this advertisement. Address C E 25, Tribune.

THE GLOBE TAILORING COMPANY, CINCINNATI, O.

THE KIND OF A MAN WE ARE LOOKING FOR.

A salesman with this company makes $6,000 to $12,000 a year. We are a large and successful Chicago firm noted for giving men a chance to make good. We employ a large number of just the average run of men, many of whom perhaps would never have been given a trial by most business institutions of Chicago. Yet these same men are today doing millions of dollars' worth of business for this firm, and their incomes run very high. You can earn $500 to $1,000 a month with this company without any extended preparation or experience in this line. Our system of doing business is unique, scientific, and almost invariably brings our new salesmen handsome incomes during the first 30 days. We are financially strong, a well known concern, and sell a product with a national reputation. We have openings in our Sales Department at the present moment. If you wish to make a good connection and believe that your character and ability merits our confidence, come and see us. Perhaps we will give you a chance to show what you can do. Apply GENERAL OFFICE, Rm. 1101 Lake View Bldg., 116 S. Michigan-av.

THE BLANCHARD CO., Aurora, Illinois, recognized as today's fastest growing organization in exclusive Art Calendars, Holiday Greetings, Direct-Mail Advertising, Pencils, and Specialties, has real opportunity for experienced salesman, not necessarily in this line. Our sales to August 1st bigger than entire year of 1923. Fall season now starting. Permanent connection; exclusive territory, liberal commission contract with weekly checks; splendid future guaranteed. Write full experience to T. H. GRADY, Vice President.

THE BEST CHANCE YOU EVER HAD.

Experienced salesmen easily make $7,500; specialty men, $15,000 annually. Must be well educated, neatly dressed, a convincing talker, and between the ages of 30 and 45. Old stocks, bonds, and insurance not wanted, but a proved field, decidedly underworked. Specialty selling experience valuable, but not essential; energetic man can be trained by us. We will provide free training to men of real ability and judgment, whether they have had previous selling experience or not. This company is a hundred thousand dollar company. Colorcraft salesmen make splendid incomes, and the opportunity is now open for nine more men to fit themselves, with our aid, for the positions. In first letter please give complete details, your age, your experience, your references, and your photograph, if possible.

THE COLORCRAFT CO., CLEVELAND, OHIO.

Poetry and Facts

are not always the same.

EDNA ST. VINCENT MILLAY best beloved modern poet, says:

"Safe upon the solid rock
The ugly houses stand.
Come and see my shining palace,
Built upon the sand."

BUT MR. AND MRS.
SENSIBLE PERSONS

find that the fallacy precludes building their family future on a sound foundation.

THE SOLID ROCK

is the firm foundation of people who own something and who let dollars work for them instead of working for dollars.

SHIFTING SANDS

are what the procrastinating renter stands on, and about 80% of the people of Chicago seem to be in that class. What a lot of poets, and how nice for the landlord!

DECIDE RIGHT NOW

to locate permanently in one of the most beautiful locations on the North Side, with its beautiful park, golf course, gun club, yacht harbor, and ever delightful lake, an apartment home here, finished to your order, will cut expense to the absolute minimum and be the best investment you've ever made since you bought the ring.

ALDINE APARTMENT HOMES

are like that. They will suit you, satisfy you. You will be happier here. Offered on the 100% co-operative plan.

Come over to 507 Aldine-av. and let us show you.

YACHT HARBOR DISTRICT.

A new building of refinement. Consisting of 4, 5, and 6 room apartments, real homes. The owners have spared nothing in order to make these apartments convenient and comfortable for you.

The rooms are of generous dimensions, with ivory trim and canvased, painted walls; large open fireplace in living room; wrought iron and crystal lighting fixtures, unusual closet space, built in ironing boards, incinerators, etc.

Located only one-half block west of Sheridan-rd. — far enough away to escape the whirr of automobiles and near enough to enjoy the privileges and advantages of beautiful Lincoln Park, its harbor, Chicago Yacht Club, bridle paths, golf links, Gun Club, bathing beach, etc. One of the choicest locations along the North Shore. Only a few left. Reasonable rentals. Inspect today. Agent on premises, or phone

TO RENT — WE HAVE A NUMBER OF stores for rent in the new McJunkin Bldg. on Broadway at Wilson, and others on Howard-st. Now offered at extremely low rental or on small percentage basis of gross sales, to merchants who have proved their success. We are more interested in the character and ability of the merchant than in the rent we get.
Broadway south of Wilson has been made over. The McJunkin Bldg. is beautifully illuminated at night in varied colors. The new street lighting system has been installed between Leland and Montrose on both sides of Broadway. This is a part of the plan of property owners. All trolley poles and other posts removed. Twice as much light as on Chicago-av. Exceptionally fine building offers opportunity for expansion or new location not to be found elsewhere in Chicago. Agent on premises.

BUYS ANY ONE OF MY NEW 47 Brick Bungalows
$5,450.
Located on 'Newland-av. between Grand-av. and Diversey-av.

These 4 room brick bungalows are built with the same quality of material and workmanship that was used in the construction of the 50 five room bungalows, which I lately built and sold in this district for $8,250, on terms of $1,500 cash and $75 per month. These are similar to these 5 room bungalows with the dining room left out.

These 4 room brick bungalows are built on solid concrete walls 4 feet in base and 12 inch thick, which in turn rests on a footing of concrete 18 inches wide. The brick used is of the best quality pressed brick. These houses each contain 2 large bedrooms, a kitchen, and a large living room, and front and rear porches. The basements are as large as the entire first floors and are 7 feet high, with concrete floors. A white enamel kitchen cabinet is installed in each building; shades, electric light fixtures, medicine cases, etc., are installed without further cost to make of these houses complete homes, with all modern improvements.

Gas, water, sewer, electric light, cement sidewalks and paved streets thoroughly modernize these beautiful homes.

Remember these bungalows, which can be bought from me on terms of only

$39 Per Mo.

Including all interest
AND A FIRST PAYMENT OF ONLY

$350

Would readily rent for from $50 to $60 per month.

While buying one of these houses from me your rental is monthly reduced to ONLY $39 PER MO. Balance of your monthly payment of $39 is only $25, all of which is credited to the purchase price. In other words, while buying one of these houses on terms of only $39 PER MONTH you are actually saving $25 PER MONTH OR $300 PER YEAR.

These buildings are selling fast. If you really want a home on these wonderful terms, see me.

Deerfield.
DEERFIELD.

We are about to erect two attractive residences in one of DEERFIELD HEIGHTS' development to be ready for occupancy April 1. The plans are being prepared and can be changed now to meet buyer's requirements if early action is had. These houses will be built on beautiful lots 100x200 amid fine large forest trees, with all improvements in and paid for, viz.: sewers; water, concrete walks, reinforced concrete pavement, telephone, gas, and electricity. Convenient to school, church, stores, and transportation. DEERFIELD HEIGHTS will especially appeal to those living along the North Shore. The opportunity offered in DEERFIELD HEIGHTS today for home or investment is somewhat similar to that which prevailed in the North Shore lake villages ten years ago. We are still offering lots at $40 per foot, with all improvements of the best type in and paid for. DEERFIELD HEIGHTS property is sold only by written application to approved purchasers. Our Deerfield office on Waukegan-rd., 3 blocks north of the Bank corner, is open today.

Our Service Is at Your Disposal. It Costs You Nothing to Investigate.

We inspect and investigate all properties at our own expense. If we can not assist you in turning your property into cash we will tell you why.

Property values usually keep up with the growth of a city—taxes and carrying charges always do. It is therefore the better part of discretion to dispose of large or small tracts the minute they become suitable for subdivision.

We have successfully sold hundreds of subdivisions throughout the United States. Success is the magic word that persuades scores of subdivision owners to entrust us to place their properties in our hands for disposal. Our organization stands for efficient service, quick action and aggressive salesmanship. Our vital principles that have built up our reputation as "live wire" real estate operators who are in the habit of obtaining results.

We operate so rapidly that it is a manifest impossibility to finance and prepare a sufficient number of subdivisions to keep our sales forces working exclusively on our own properties, and for this reason we can offer you this same service for your unimproved acreage on commission basis. Kindly direct all correspondence to C F 24, Tribune.

WANT FARMS, SMALL ESTATES, HOTELS, and summer resort properties; no commissions charged. Mail full descriptions, tell what is wanted in exchange. Results obtained. LASHER & LASHER, 1476 Broadway, New York City.

PROPERTY OWNERS ONLY

We have clients who will purchase your equity. They want 6s to 30s.

A NEW CAR

AT THE PRICE OF A USED CAR

We still have a few 1924 Light Six Studebaker Touring Cars. To close them out in the next week we are pricing them so low that you cannot help but buy.

The price of these NEW cars—complete—is very low;

$895
Only $295 Down
Only $12.50 per Week thereafter until fully paid up.

They are new, not used. Perfectly new—new tires, leather, batteries, tops, curtains and paint—even the tools are new.

They have never been run a mile—each car is sold to you with a new car guarantee and with new car service privileges.

They are STUDEBAKER LIGHT SIXES—a proved and acknowledged success. Very economical to operate—20 miles to the gallon of gas—15,000 miles on a set of tires.

These cars have specially fitted side curtains for fall and winter driving—there is a "weather-valance" to make them storm tight with the doors. They are hand fitted—made of extra fine material with extra large windows.

You can drive one of these cars for a year or even longer, perhaps—and turn it in at about the price you pay today.

You have the use of a new car almost FREE until you buy your next car.

COME IN TODAY.

JORDAN

JORDAN TOURING CAR. We are offering the public a late model car in sound condition at a price that dealers are eager to pay. Is equipped with 5 excellent cord tires. Top and upholstery very good. Mechanically will bear the most rigid examination and demonstration. Don't judge this car by its low price, but come in and drive it; $450.

JORDAN "PLAYBOY" 2 PASS. For those who appreciate beauty and design and a "kick" in mechanical performance, this high grade roadster will more than come up to standard. This car's owner believed in having every comfort, together with smart appearance, such as 4 wheel hydraulic brakes, balloon tires, spare with cover, disc wheels, snubbers, bumpers, automatic squeegee, visor, wind wings, stoplight, etc. Traded to us as part payment on a new Jordan Great Line Eight "Playboy." Carefully driven only 3,000 miles and virtually a new car. Color scheme is snappy Apple Green. New car warranty. A value such as this rarely stays here over night. Save $500. Price $2,000.

NASH 1924 6 CYL. SPORT. Will appeal to the person contemplating the purchase of a new Nash Sport. Paint, tires, top, special upholstery, and details like new in every respect. Has disc wheels, 2 spare tires on sides never used, bumpers, wind wings, spotlight, etc. Cost over $1,000 less than 6 months ago. Your immediate action necessary because this model difficult to buy; $1,300.

JEWETT ROADSTER, 1923. Refinished in Jap blue, bright parts renickeled; smart appearing; mechanically very fine; has disc wheels; 5 excellent tires, 2 bumpers, motometer, etc.; top, upholstery, etc., good; $750.

HUDSON SEDAN, 7 PASS. This late model closed car is in very nice condition in every way and a real value. Has seat covers, spotlight, mirror, excellent tires, 2 bumpers. See this smart looking car today. The price is only $850.

CLEVELAND '22 LIGHT 6 5 PASS. TOUR. Motometer, bumper, 5 good tires, lock, etc. Paint, top and upholstery very good. Mechanically sound. Remarkable value at $400.

What Is a Bargain?

A bargain in a used motor car is that car which most surely guarantees the purchaser the utmost in economical service, comfort, resale value, and pride of ownership at the least cost consistent with this combination.

We are firm in the belief that our stock ranging in price from a Ford Coupe at $100 to a perfectly equipped current model Peerless Berline Limousine for $3,000 is fairly alive with "BARGAINS," each one of which measure up to this definition of a bargain.

The importance of this message to you is that from this stock you can unquestionably be entirely satisfied with such a motor car bargain as best suits your purse and your requirements.

If you have a phone we will run your Want Ad and send the bill later — Central 0100

THERE are times in every man's life when a quick sale of something he possesses enables him to grasp an opportunity which may mean a long step forward in his business or domestic life. It may mean selling the car in order to snap up a bargain in vacant, or it may mean selling his property here and taking a bigger job in another city.

When that time comes remember that Tribune Want Ads are the shortest and quickest road to a sale. The 950,000 copies of The Sunday Tribune are circulated to people who are able to buy what you have to sell.

At this moment there are probably several ways in which a Sunday Tribune Want Ad could make or save you money and effort. Read the Want Ad Section and use it!

Remember that your Want Ad must be in The Tribune office by 9 o'clock Friday evening to make all Sunday editions, or by 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon to make all Sunday city editions. Call Central 0100 today and ask for an Ad-taker—now.

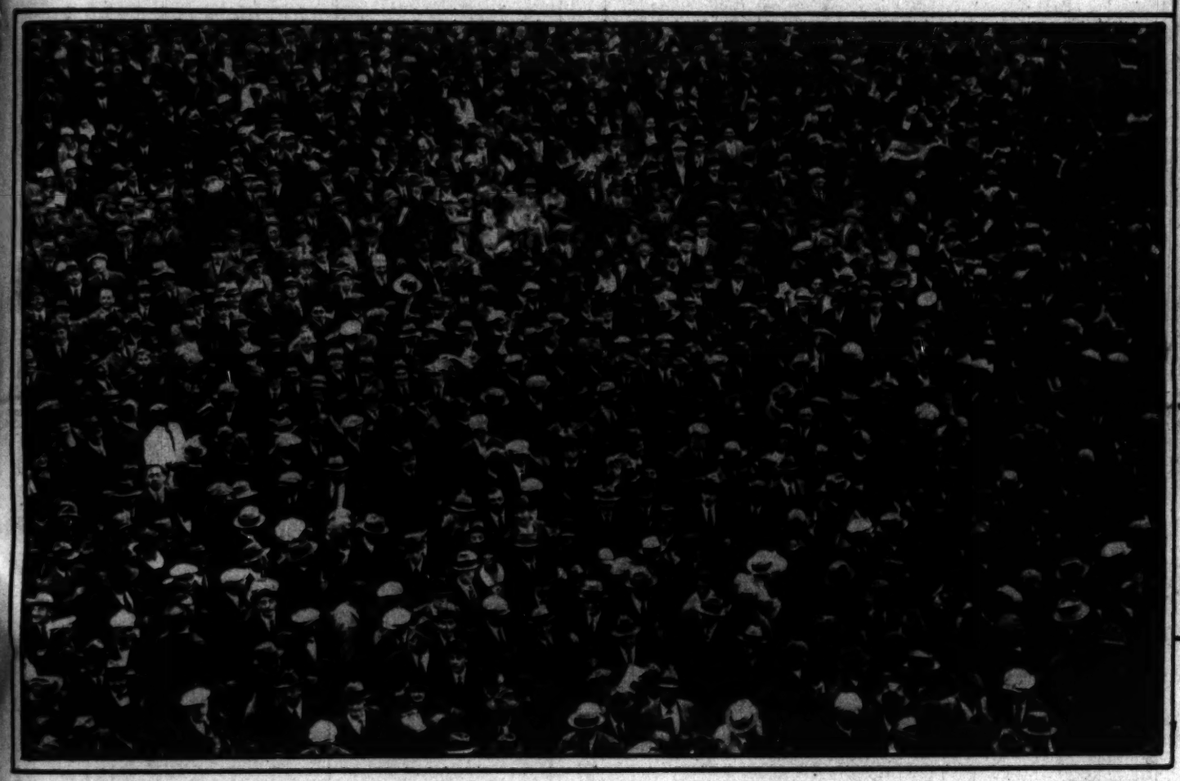
THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

October 19, 1924

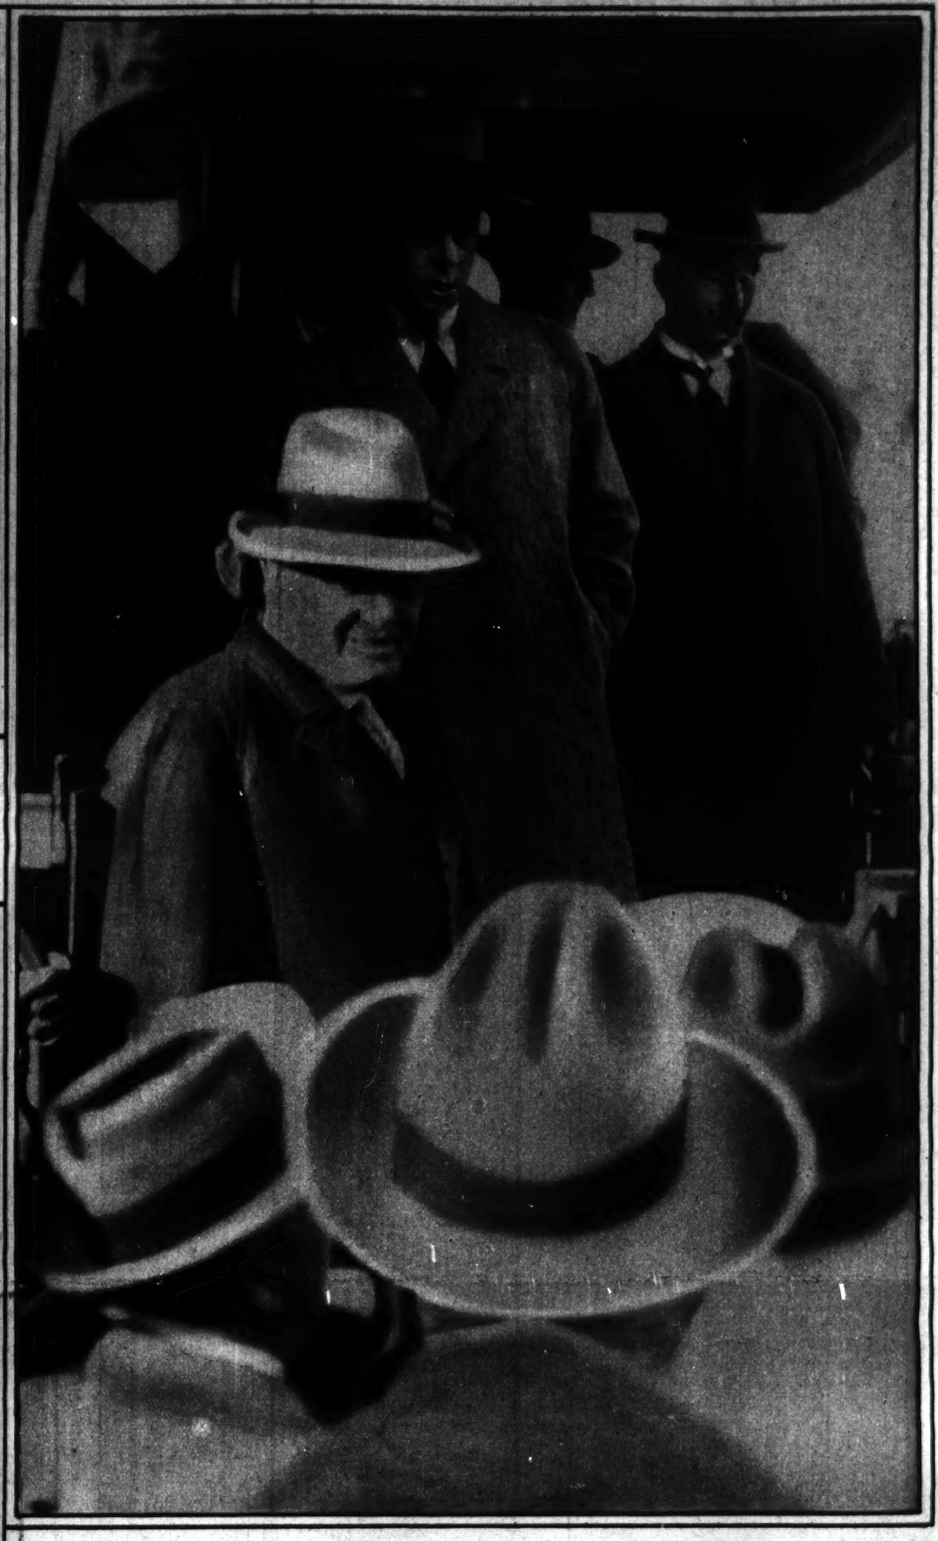
AMID SCENES OF THE WILDEST EXCITEMENT, the Senators, who haven't been much in baseball hitherto, won a world championship in Washington the other day. You may have read about it. Here are two of the spectators—Calvin Coolidge, President of the United States, and Mrs. Coolidge—registering the wildest excitement. A home run by Stanley Harris, boy manager of the Senators, was the immediate occasion of the quite unrestrained handclapping and the pleased presidential grin, both of which phenomena are, as you might say, rare.

(Photograph from Pacific & Atlantic.)



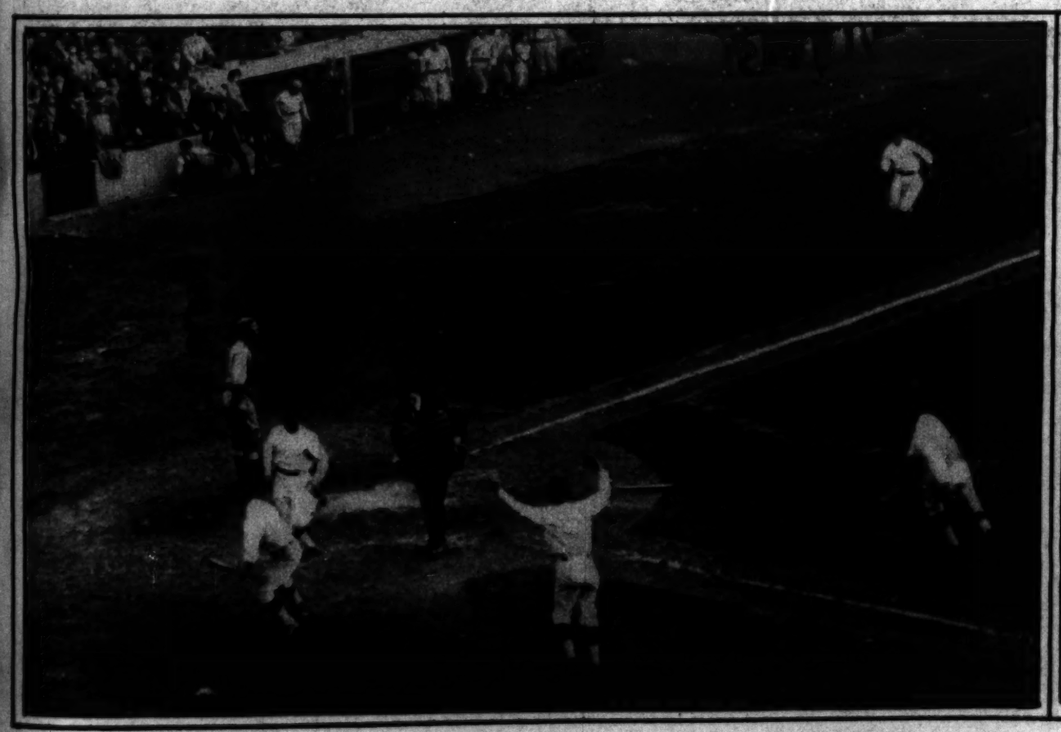
WHEN THE FINAL GAME WAS OVER, with the Senators victorious and the Giants beaten, 35,000 crazy, jubilant fans surged onto the field and staged the maddest demonstration ever seen in the history of baseball. The camera here has caught only a little section of the mob, but it shows what the crowd was like.

(Photograph from Pacific & Atlantic.)



MR. WINDSOR ARRIVES—Chicago's first glimpse of the Prince of Wales Monday was vouchsafed the waiting citizenry not in Chicago proper, but in Lake Forest. Here is the royal visitor leaving his train in the north shore suburb, ready for a day of seemly excitements. The man in the foreground, with the lightish hat, is Louis F. Swift, the prince's host in Chicago.

(Photograph from Pacific & Atlantic.)



THE WINNING RUN—Darkness was approaching and nerves were near the breaking point when McNeely of the Senators hit what looked like a harmless grounder toward third. Something happened to the ball; it bounded over the Giants' third baseman's head, and "Muddy" Ruel, who had been biding his time on the bases, charged over the plate. His score brought the Senators their first world title. 'Twas a dramatic moment.

(Photograph from Pacific & Atlantic.)

AT THE TURN OF THE TIDE—"Nemo" Leibold sliding to second—and making it—in the crucial eighth inning, when the Senators' ebbing fortunes began to rise. The Giants had been ahead, and the case, for the Senators, seemed hopeless. Then Leibold smashed his double down the third base line, the "break" of the game arrived, and, with the score tied at the end of the inning, the struggle became an even one.

A Skin of Dazzling Loveliness in spite of days and nights brimful

HOW is it that the lovely society women you know have learned to keep that dazzling thing we know as youth? Yet their very lives seem made up of activities that tend to bring deep shadows and lines into the face, to make the skin sallow and old before its time.

How do they guard the freshness, keep the undimmed radiance of their skin?

They searched to find the way to keep their complexions protected from every trace of fatigue in spite of a whirl of late suppers and balls, theatres, luncheons and teas.

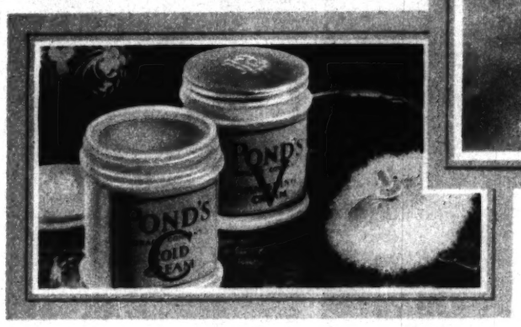
At last they found the method that Pond's Laboratories have for years been perfecting—Two Creams which provide the balanced care every normal skin should have.

Once Every Day a Cleansing with Pond's Cold Cream. It gets down into the pores, and brings up their day's collection of dust and dirt, rouge, powder and excess oil. Apply the cream generously, spreading it over face and neck; let it stay on a few moments. With a soft cloth take off all the cream and dirt. And now apply the cream anew and wipe it off once more. Such undreamed-of cleanness! Your skin, just rosy-clean, heaves a sigh of relieved, refreshed delight!

Next a Lovely Finish and Protection with Pond's Vanishing Cream. Smooth on a little of this greaseless cream, just the amount the skin will absorb. Now see what a lovely surface it gives your skin. And like a soft garment it protects your complexion from "Winter and rough weather." So you should always use it just before going out, the very last thing before you powder.

You'll find now, too, that you never could hold your powder so long before or make it go on so evenly as it does over this soft, utterly vanishing, exquisitely finishing cream!

Learn from the lovely society women who keep their skin perpetually fresh and youthful. Buy Pond's Two Creams today. Your complexion will respond immediately to their deft services, showing a new, undreamed of loveliness in spite of days and nights brimful. The Pond's Extract Company.



Pond's Cold Cream to cleanse the skin, Pond's Vanishing Cream to add a soft lustre, hold the powder and protect against wind, cold and dust

How to take your daily life "on high"
Do you know the power of this amazing food?—the secret of its action?

Clearer skin · Easier digestion · Regular elimination

THESE remarkable reports are typical of thousands of similar tributes to Fleischmann's Yeast. There is nothing mysterious about its action. It is not a "cure-all," not a medicine in any sense. But when the body is choked with the poisons of constipation—or when its vitality is low so that skin, stomach and general health are affected—this simple, natural food achieves literally amazing results.

Concentrated in every cake of Fleischmann's Yeast are millions of tiny yeast-plants, alive and active. At once they go to work—invigorating the whole system, clearing the skin, aiding digestion, strengthening the intestinal muscles and making them healthy and active.

Dissolve one cake in a glass of water (just hot enough to drink)—before breakfast and at bedtime. Fleischmann's Yeast, when taken this way, is especially effective in overcoming or preventing constipation. Or eat 2 or 3 cakes a day—spread on bread or crackers—dissolved in fruit juices or milk—or eat it plain.

Write us for further information, or let us send you a free copy of our latest booklet on Yeast for Health. Address: Health Research Dept. 596, The Fleischmann Company, 701 Washington Street, New York.

"A martyr to indigestion and constipation I was as thin as a rake with a complexion like mud. I had tried many different kinds of tonics and laxatives without permanent relief. I was advised to try Fleischmann's Yeast. In about four months my constipation and indigestion had disappeared. I am now in perfect health and look it. My complexion is clear and the envy of all who know me. I have more vigor and look many years younger than I did."

(A letter from Mrs. P. F. Robin, Mobile, Ala.)

"I was only 24 years old, my health, my good looks and the old-time dynamic energy, which I had believed so permanently mine, were gone. A man of wisdom is my physician, but I thought him indeed crazy when he prescribed three yeast cakes a day. But at the end of a month I was surprised to find that the world looked much better to my tired eyes. For two months more I took the Yeast and now I am well and happy, the old-time buoyancy and energy are mine again."

(A letter from Miss Elva Tanner, Clover, Utah)

"Youthful freshness made way for lackadaisical indifference—headaches and constipation were my constant companions. Splotches appeared upon my face, and with seven large carbuncles, in a short time my neck and back resembled a shell-torn battle-front. When Fleischmann's Yeast was proposed I readily accepted it as a possible means of escape. The effect was miraculous. The invaders withdrew, and in ten days the last of the carbuncles was healing, and very soon my health was restored."

(Miss Lydia M. de Fuentes, Waukegan, Ill.)

"When I was constipated, I was always gloomy, melancholy, and unhappy. I got so I did not believe in any remedy at all. But I found on taking Fleischmann's Yeast that I did not have to have faith in it. It is one thing that will do its work whether one has faith in it or not. At the end of about three months I was as well as any man could possibly be. My constipation was gone, all my old headaches, listlessness and gloom left me. It does seem strange that these little yeast cakes can do this thing, but as sure as the sun shines, they can."

(A letter from Mr. T. C. Hinkle, of Baldwin, Kansas)

FLEISCHMANN'S YEAST FOR HEALTH comes only in the tinfoil package—it cannot be purchased in tablet form. All grocers have it. Start eating it today! You can order several cakes at a time, for Yeast will keep fresh in a cool, dry place for two or three days.

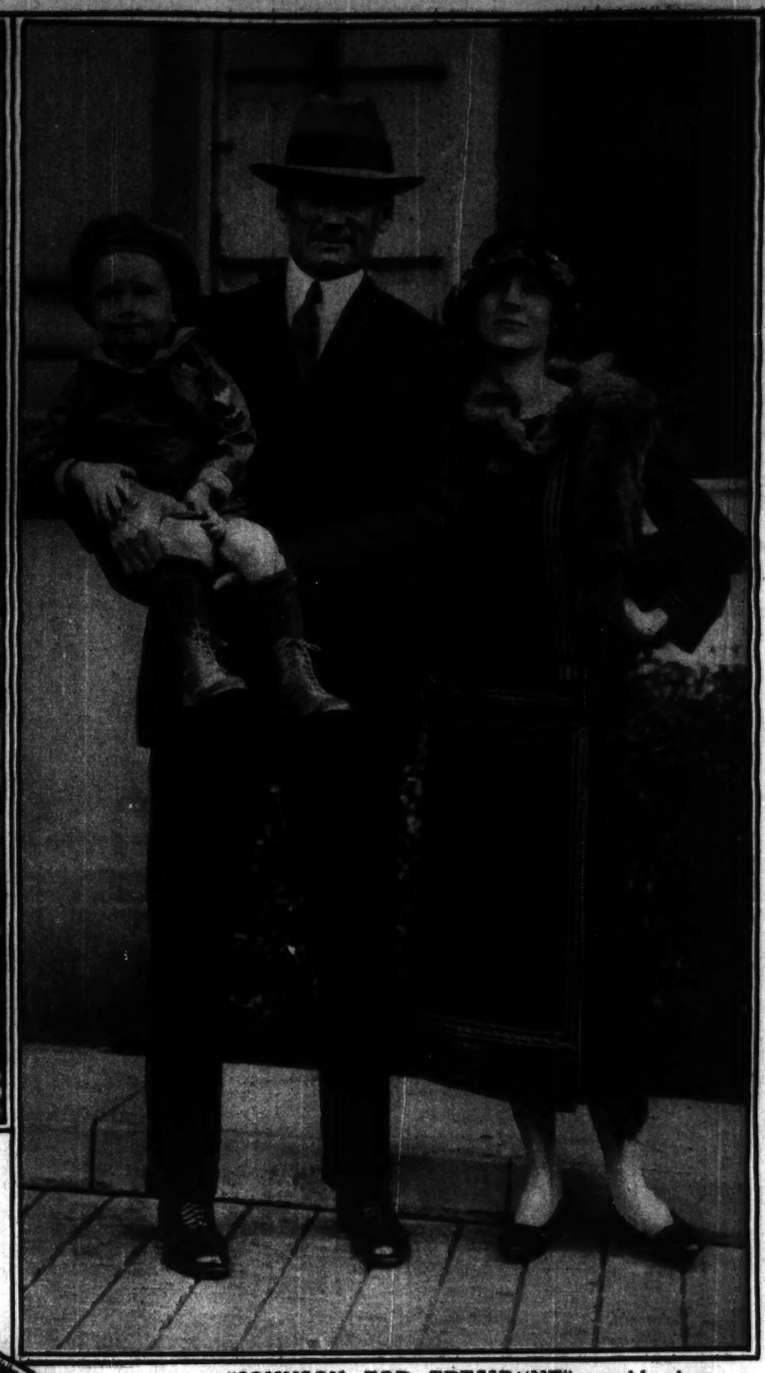
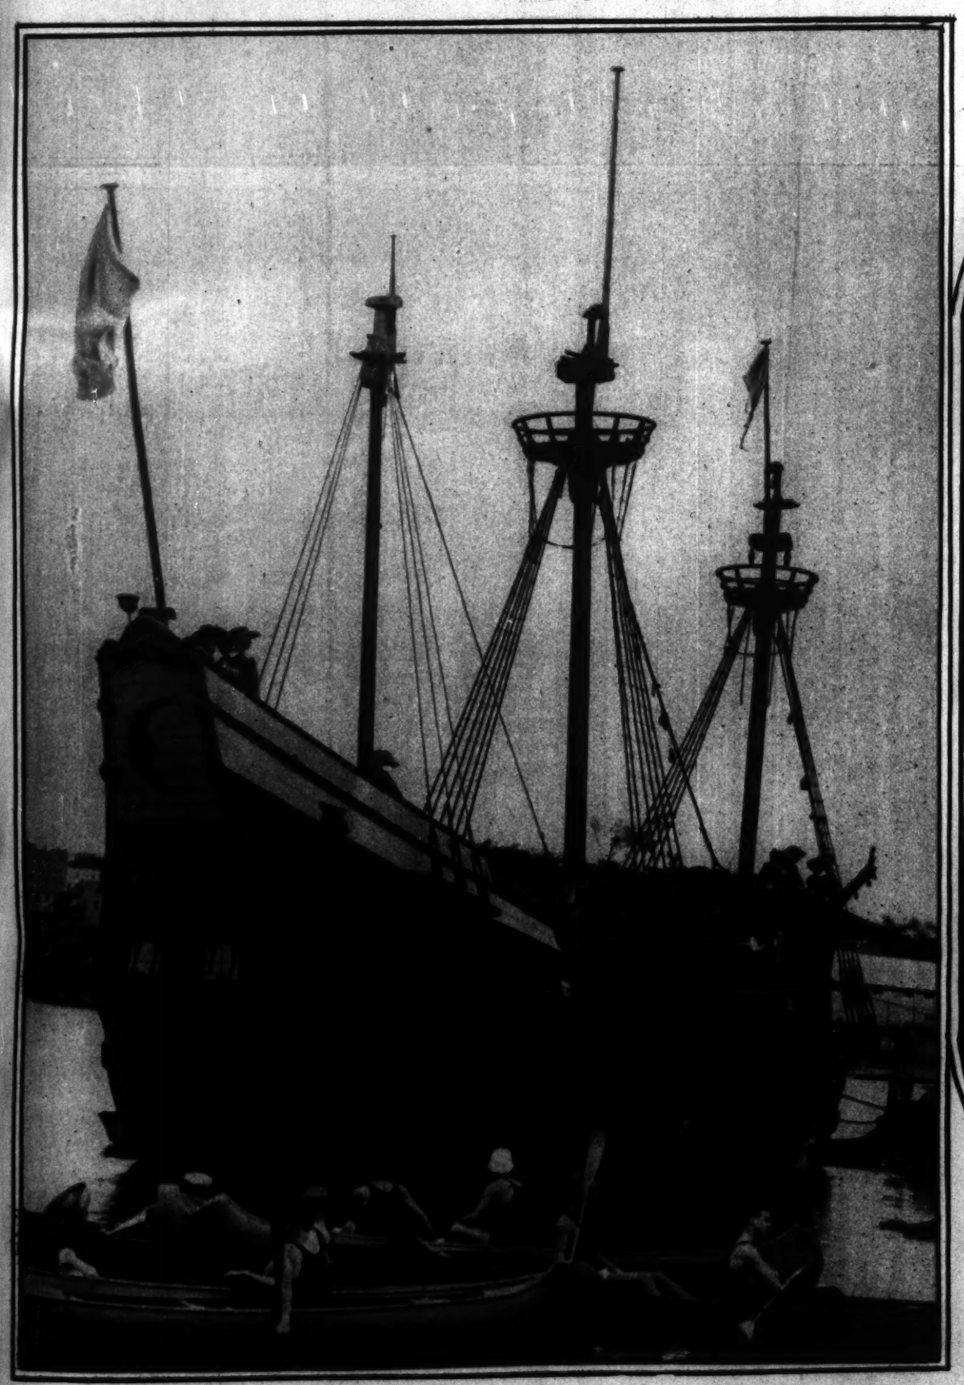
"One day the chef at the country club suggested that I try Fleischmann's Yeast. I was haggard, anaemic, and had lost all interest in life. I smiled, reminding him of my previous experiences with 'tonics.' He began serving me with what he called a special cheese sandwich daily. A month elapsed, and everyone marveled at my complete transformation. One day I saw the chef spreading Fleischmann's Yeast on sandwiches and realized that I had been the butt of what he thought was a good joke."

(Mr. Herbert J. Hoffman, Philadelphia, Pa.)

THE LAST PICTURE OF THE WORLD FLIGHT—Here are the army aviators who wrote history in the sky lined up at the end of their journey on the landing field in Seattle for the final camera record of their adventure. From left to right they are Lieuts. Leslie P. Arnold, Erik Nelson, Leigh Wade, Lowell H. Smith (commander of the flight from Alaska on), H. H. Ogden, and John Harding Jr., and Maj. Frederick L. Martin, the original commander, who came to grief when his plane was wrecked in Alaska. Behind the flyers is their flagship, the Chicago. (Photograph from Wide World)



"JOHNSON FOR PRESIDENT" would please Washington, D. C., about as well as any other ticket these days. But don't get the wrong Johnson in mind. We mean Walter Johnson, pitching ace of the new world champions, the Senators. This is he, with Mrs. Johnson and their son Bobby. The veteran twirler pitched great ball for eighteen years without ever having had a chance to show his prowess in a world's series. Then along came this one, and in the final game, with the score tied, he stepped in and won. (Photograph from Kadel & Herbert)



THE HALF MOON SAILS THE HUDSON AGAIN—A modern replica of Hendrik Hudson's famous ship navigated the river to which the explorer gave his name when they celebrated, down east, the 315th anniversary of the Englishman's landing. (Hudson wasn't Dutch, though he was in the service of Dutch merchants.) This picture shows the quaint craft at anchor at Spuyten Duyvil, where Hudson went ashore. (Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic)

THE NEW JACK DEMPSEY—New nose, achieved by plastic surgery; new togs, rather of a Beau Brummel sort, and everything. Also, it may be observed, new weight—the fistic champion has taken on some added pounds. The serene and dignified portrait here achieved was made at one of the world's series ball games in New York, where every one but Jack was rather inclined to be excited. (Photograph from Wide World)

IMAGINATIVE BEAUTY in a picture of a woman with brains. She is Mrs. Clare Sheridan, celebrated as a traveler, sculptress, and author, and known particularly for a series of vivid stories on life in soviet Russia. Lenin knew and liked her, and permitted her, when she was in Moscow, to model a bust of him. Her home is in London. (Photograph from Wide World)

THE SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES, impressively reassembled in Washington for the opening of its new sessions. Attorney General Harlan F. Stone is the man at the left, he having made the convening of court the occasion for an official visit or something. Next in order come Justices Pierce Butler, Louis D. Brandeis, Willis Van Devanter, and Joseph McKenna; Chief Justice William Howard Taft, and Justices Oliver Wendell Holmes, George Sutherland, and Edward Terry Sanford. Be the one who outwits Pyorrhea —use Forhan's twice daily

Study the crowd as it hurries to and fro. Four out of five over forty years of age, and thousands younger, will pay Pyorrhea's dreaded toll.

Don't wait for bleeding gums —Nature's warning. Check Pyorrhea before it begins. Go to your dentist regularly for tooth and gum inspection. And brush your teeth at least twice daily with Forhan's For the Gums. It's pleasant to the taste.

This healing, refreshing dentifrice, if used in time and used consistently, will help to prevent Pyorrhea or check its progress. It will keep your mouth clean and healthy, preserve your teeth, safeguard your health. Used and recommended by foremost dentists everywhere.

There is only one tooth paste of proved efficacy in the treatment of Pyorrhea. It is the one that many thousands have found beneficial for years. For your own sake, make sure that you get it. Ask for, and insist upon, Forhan's For the Gums. At all druggists, 35c and 60c in tubes

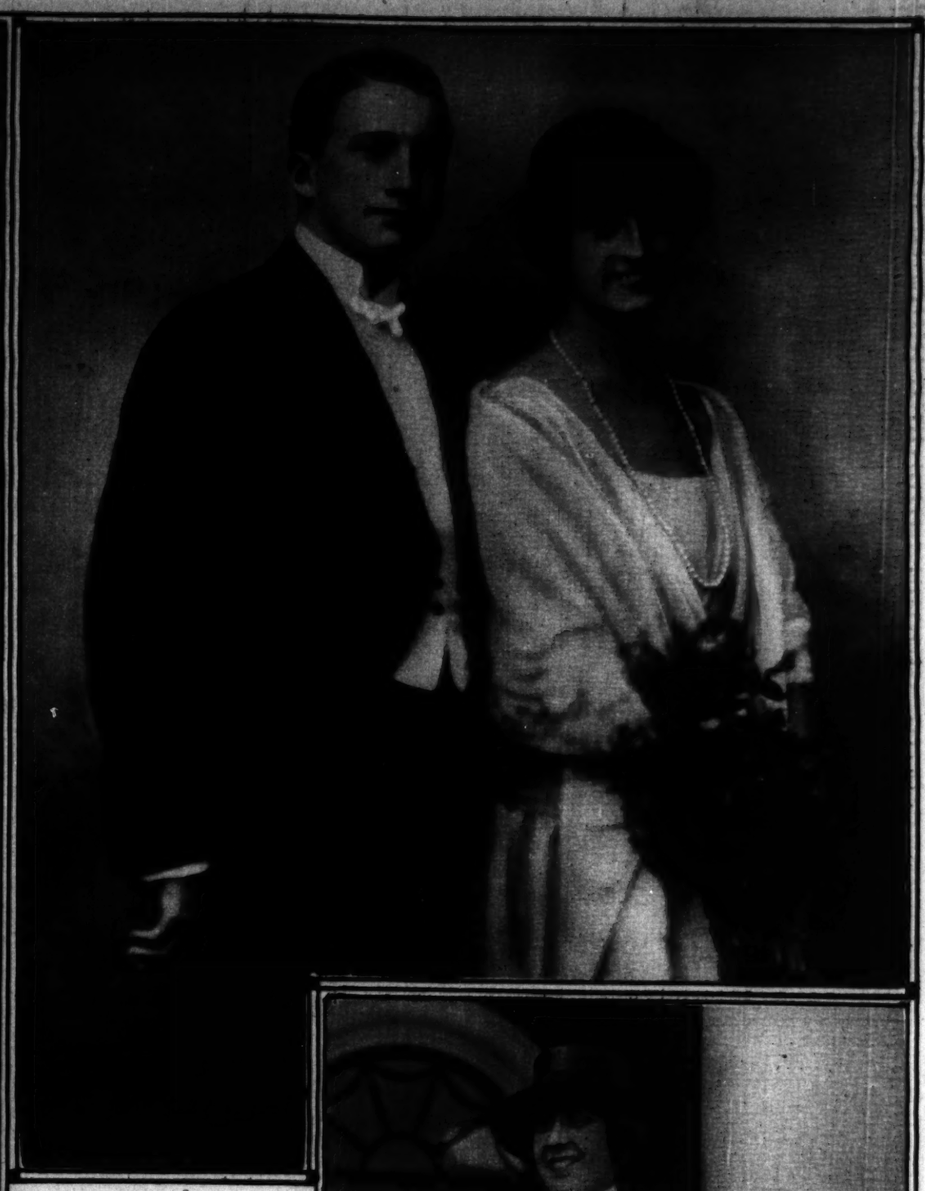
MRS. WOODROW WILSON'S first photograph in many months was taken when the widow of the former President emerged from her retirement to attend the big Democratic rally at Frederick, Md., and hear John W. Davis give his reasons for aspiring to the place once held by her husband. Mrs. Wilson is seen at the right, receiving the greetings of a younger Democratic enthusiast. Between the two, and smiling, is Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, one of Woodrow Wilson's earliest and most active supporters. (Photograph copyright by Underwood & Underwood)



GHOSTS OF THE PAST arose when the Princess Pia Monica of Saxony and Archduke Franz Josef of Hungary were married this month at Castle Sibyllenort, in Silesia. For the princess' mother, once Crown Princess of Saxony, was the central figure in a famous romance. Years ago she eloped with her children's tutor; now she is living in poverty in a little Swiss village, with her story, and all the discussion of Pia Monica's paternity, virtually forgotten.

DIMES AND DIMES AND DIMES gave Mrs. James P. Donohue (to the right) the distinction of paying more personal property taxes than any other woman in the country. She is the daughter of the late F. W. Woolworth, who practically invented the 10-cent piece, as you might say, and her assessment is $1,000,000—just a little less than that of John D. Rockefeller.

THEIR FIRST VISIT TO A CITY IN 25,000,000 YEARS—The University of Utah's "dinosaur caravan" (at the left), bringing the prehistoric past into vivid contrast with the present by making its way through the business center of Salt Lake City. The quarry from which the incredibly venerable bones were taken is pictured at the right. It was discovered in the Uintah basin, near Jensen, Utah, and in it five fine specimens were found, each of a different species. One is a huge carnivorous dinosaur, with the head practically complete. Nineteen wagons were loaded with the bones and, in true western fashion, made their slow way 220 miles from Jensen to Salt Lake City.

SHOOTING A PLANE FROM THE DECK OF A BATTLESHIP—Huge catapults are now used to launch flyers and their craft from vessels at sea. This one, being sent on its way from the U. S. S. California, figured in the Defense day maneuvers off San Francisco. The catapult, operated by compressed air, shoots a plane along a 50-foot track, giving it a speed of 54 miles an hour in less than two seconds. How would you like to be the aviator?

BACK FROM ABROAD—Edward H. Sothern and Miss Julia Marlowe (Mrs. Sothern), who alternate, nowadays, a season of acting in Shakespeare with a season of rest, photographed on the Aquitania as they arrived in New York from England. As he devotes less time to acting, Mr. Sothern devotes more to writing, but neither he nor Miss Marlowe has announced any intention of retiring from the stage. (Photograph from Pictorial Press)

Increasing the action of the Mouth Glands prevents tooth decay

The only permanent way to keep your mouth healthy and your teeth safe

INACTIVE mouth glands may not cause you any pain but they often lead to serious tooth trouble.

They leave your mouth dry instead of bathed in the natural alkaline fluids. Then the acids that cause decay collect.

Everyone's teeth need more than brushing

Our soft, cooked foods are not in the mouth long enough to start a normal, full flow of the mouth glands. From sheer lack of exercise these protective glands have dried up.

Brushing is only a temporary remedy. Five minutes later the acids of decay are forming again. The only way to keep your teeth clean all the time is to keep the glands working.

Now men and women both use this tooth paste that gently stimulates the glands

Pebeco is the simple, natural way to prevent tooth decay. It acts directly on the mouth glands.

As soon as Pebeco enters your mouth you feel the new flow of the protective fluids. Every day this tingling, clean sensation lasts longer.

After ten days of Pebeco care you realize your mouth is feeling clean all the time. The acids of decay are being neutralized as fast as they form.

Your mouth has been entirely revitalized. You will never go back to the old temporary cleaning. All over America this sound new teaching is spreading, "Keep your mouth glands active and you keep your teeth clean and safe."

Start now to find permanent tooth cleanliness. Send today for a trial tube of Pebeco. Made only by Lehn & Fink, Inc. At all druggists.

When you are with people, talking and smiling—are you proud to show your teeth? Keep them always white and shining for your own sake and your friends'—with Pebeco.

"SOUND"
A solid Mahogany Clock, 20 inches wide, with genuine Normandy Chimes. Satin-silvered dial.

The Clock for the Prudent Shopper

A SUBTLE charm lurks in the graceful lines and mellow chimes of this exquisite clock.

Its cabinet is fashioned from woods of delicate grain, hand-rubbed to a velvet-like richness. A simple golden sash frames the sheen of its silvered dial. Slender jet-black hands point out its graceful figures.

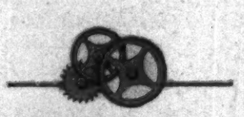
But the prudent shopper asks more than this of a clock.

She knows she can trust a Gilbert Clock—that its beauty covers a faithful mechanism. Gilbert has been making dependable clocks since 1807. Each year has added its improvements and refinements.

A Gilbert Clock is not a lazy clock—it ticks on and on, for years. When it leaves the Gilbert shop it has been doubly inspected. With it goes the Gilbert guarantee.

A Gilbert Clock gives no hint of its price. For Gilbert prices are surprisingly moderate. Dozens of charming styles and sizes, eight to thirty dollars. It is easy to find a merchant who sells them.

WILLIAM L. GILBERT CLOCK CO.
WINSTED, CONNECTICUT, U. S. A.



Every wheel and gear is DIE-CUT

ALL Gilbert movements are assembled from wheels and gears die-cut from tested metals. Just one reason why a Gilbert Clock is a faithful timepiece.

Do you know what to do when your clock runs slow? This and many other valuable hints on the care of your clock are explained in the booklet, "What Makes it Tick?" It is FREE. Send for your copy today.

Just a Parting Kiss

By W. E. HILL

(Copyright by The Chicago Tribune Syndicate, 1924)

The anti-climax. It wasn't Cousin Grace's train after all and the good-bys and the kissing will have to be gone through with all over again. "Well, Grace, I do believe you'll have a nice day for traveling after all," Cousin Madge is saying for the third time, and still there's fifteen minutes before the Bridgeport local is ready. Nothing much to say.

Cold kissing. This is known as the New England peck, or the kiss of the loving sisters-in-law about to part company temporarily.

The duty kiss. "Why, Roscoe Bartlett, aren't you going to kiss Cousin Hattie good-by? Poor Cousin Hattie hasn't any little boy like Roscoe at home!" O, those grown-ups, always expecting a regular fellow to kiss somebody!

The encore. Just one more parting kiss and then Walter will say good night—unless Walter's Lillian calls him back for just one little teeny kiss extra. It's dreadful—having to part till tomorrow night.

The perfunctory kiss. This is the morning dab on the cheek, just before he dashes for the office of a morning.

The kiss of desire. "And, Harry darling," Eleanor love is saying, after a little wifely good-by-for-the-day kiss, "I'll want a little spending money, if I look at blouses and toweling."

The maternal kiss. "Now, George, you must write me every day—and you must be sure to keep your bureau drawers in order." How is a guy to get anywhere at boarding school, when some member of his family insists on seeing him off, and just will kiss him good-by before a whole station of people!

The wafted kiss. A southern belle is throwing one last kiss from the car window to the northern folks, seeing her off for Savannah.

The very hasty kiss. Raymond was late getting to the train which, like as not, will pull out any moment. Raymond's good-by kiss has landed on the tip of the little wife's nose.

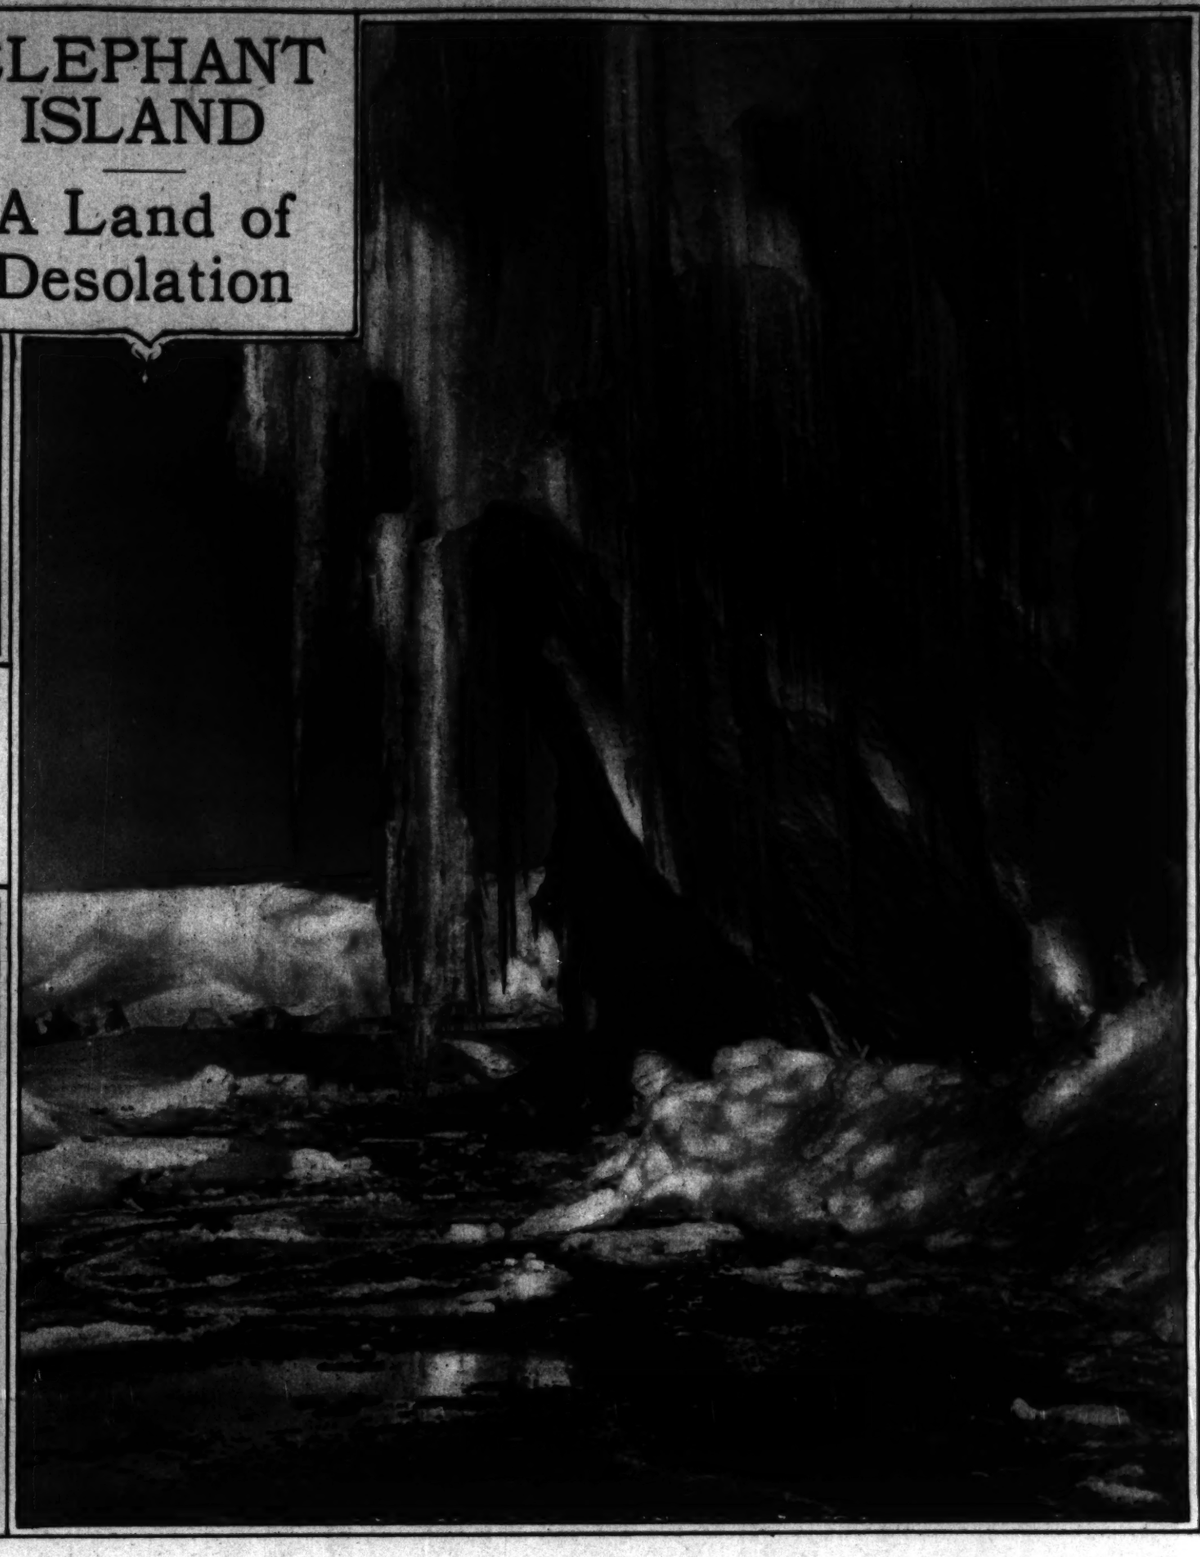
ELEPHANT ISLAND

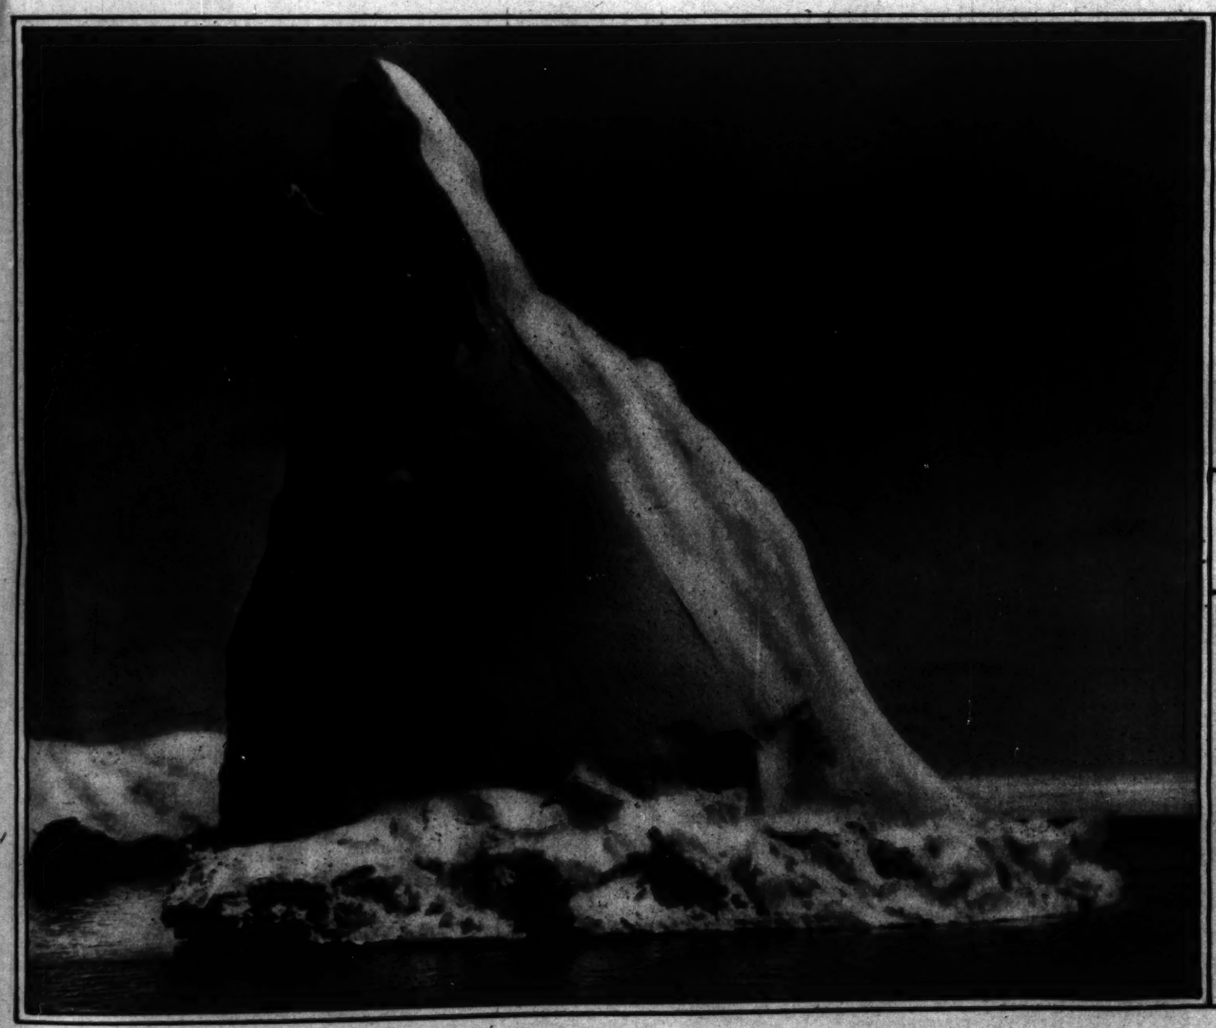
A Land of Desolation

BEYOND THE TIP OF SOUTH AMERICA, 500 miles nearer the pole than Cape Horn, lie the South Shetland islands, as bleak and barren an archipelago as the mind of man could imagine. On one of these, Elephant island, Capt. Frank Hurley, explorer and photographer, elected recently to spend eight months. Hurley is known to fame as the discoverer of the Sambio tribe of cannibals in New Guinea, but he found no cannibals on Elephant island. Huge ice mountains, such as the one pictured herewith, and caves, and desolation were his discoveries, and his trophies were the photographs reproduced on this page. (All photographs copyright by Capt. Frank Hurley; from International)

TUNNELING TO AN ICE CAVE—Some of the natural wonders of the island were inaccessible except by burrowing. Capt. Hurley and his men did not hesitate to dig their way through when they could not climb over.



NO VEGETATION exists on any of the twelve islands in the group, as this typical scene clearly indicates. Mostly, the landscape is composed of rocks and ice. Here is a picturesque formation which Capt. Hurley called "The Weeping Widow," because of the tear-like icicles drooping from its surface.



A MOTHER OF ICEBERGS, too, is Elephant island. When enough moving ice projects into open water to overbalance itself, monsters such as this one, curiously like a French helmet, break off and float away.

MARVELOUS NATURAL CAVES, deep in the recesses of mountains of ice, are to be found on Elephant island. Many of these were penetrated by the exploring party. Note how the entrance to this one is brilliantly lighted from above.

WHERE REAL BLIZZARDS ARE BORN—Storms from our own Medicine Hat are insignificant compared with the antarctic howlers that rage on Elephant island. Here is a glimpse of one of them, taken when the explorers were battling their way through the open back to their headquarters.

ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY YEARS OF AMERICAN HISTORY were recalled with stately ceremony in Philadelphia last month, on the anniversary of the meeting of the first continental congress, in 1774. Here is the famous First City Troop passing the reviewing stand in front of Independence Hall, venerable now, but still hale and hearty, as buildings go.
(Photograph copyright by Underwood & Underwood.)

PRINCESS PRAGATIPOK!—Yes, it's her real name, though it does sound as if some one made it up. She's from Siam, where her husband is a brother of the king, and she has been visiting in Washington, much to the delight of the diplomatic corps, whose members have had the time of their lives feting her. Lingette

To have the daintiest underthings at the least cost —make them of Lingette!

IT'S a joy to own underthings made of Lingette! They're flower-tinted, petal-soft, and yet—when you send them off to your laundress—you don't have to give them any more care than you give the household sheets and towels! That's because Lingette is made of remarkably fine, long-fibre cotton, which assures an amazing amount of strength and wear resistance.

But—in order to enjoy Lingette's beauty, Lingette's extra service—you must make sure that what you buy is Lingette. We want to save you the disappointments that are almost certain to come from poor materials.

Before you buy, won't you see that Lingette is marked on the selvage, or that a Lingette label is in the ready-to-wear garment? The satisfaction you will get is worth this care!

the fifth series of photographs with character and handwriting analyses, for which $100.00 each is being paid in our $15,000.00 offer.

FAYE HARTMAN, 844 W. 7th St., Des Moines, Iowa. Occupation, Office Girl.

Faye Hartman

She may be an office girl now, but she probably will not be an office girl long. She possesses too much fire, too much artistic ability, dramatic sense and lively imagination to keep to any routine. She is Cromagnon, with beautifully typical features. She loves approbation, and has emotions that are so strong that they may blind her good judgment. She gravitates naturally to beauty and luxury, and may spend her hundred dollars toward this end.

DONALD B. BEAKELEY, 412 North 1st St., Oskaloosa, Iowa. Occupation, School Boy.

Donald B. Beakeley

Abruptness, independence and fearlessness appear in this little boy's face. He is stubborn and hard to convince, but once he has been shown, the idea sticks. He will grow up to possess plenty of energy. He likes people, is friendly, not a bit moody, is keen to grasp situations, and likes to apply himself hard. Warm, generous affections appear in his writing. He knows how to suppress his own desires when some one else's seem to him of more importance.

MRS. GLADYS ABBOTT, 702 W. Mary St., Bucyrus, Ohio. Occupation, Housewife.

Mrs Gladys Abbott

A face like this denotes a bundle of highly sensitive emotions. She reacts strongly, too strongly, perhaps, to all stimuli. Her handwriting shows that her emotions are still childish, and have never grown inhibition. Her imagination is vivid. Her imagination and emotions make moods that must dominate and sway her. She is credulous, and lets other people make her unhappy because she believes too much in their opinions. She will spend on others impulsively and without stint.

M. C. J. BILLINGHAM, 719 W. Cedar St., Kalamazoo, Mich. Structural Engineer. (Robinson Photo.)

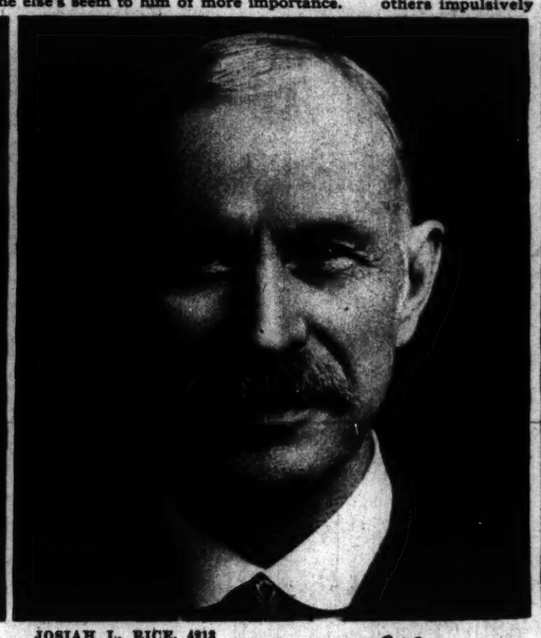
M C J Billingham

A man whose mind is open to conviction, but whose habits are set. He finds it easy to learn along the lines that he has been interested in, but hard to accommodate thoughts outside of them. This makes him tend to be conservative and given to too much self-control. His writing, with the little curled letters, tells this; in build he is motive-mental. He drives himself better than he can urge others on. His expenditures will probably be practical and methodical.

MARGARET F. BIEDERMANN, 7043 S. Green St., Chicago, Ill. Occupation, Housewife. (La Marche Photo.)

Margaret F. Biedermann

A woman of a dreamy, reflective type. She thinks well, but always with an impractical, emotional bias. She hates to be coerced or forced to opinions before she has made up her mind. When her feelings are hurt she has unrelenting resentment. Her chin and mouth show this. She is at her best when there are abundant details, each one of which can claim her attention. She likes details, and takes great pains with them. Her expenditures will be prudently and thoughtfully done.



JOSIAH L. RICE, 4213 N. Ashland Ave., Chicago, Ill. Occupation, Architect.

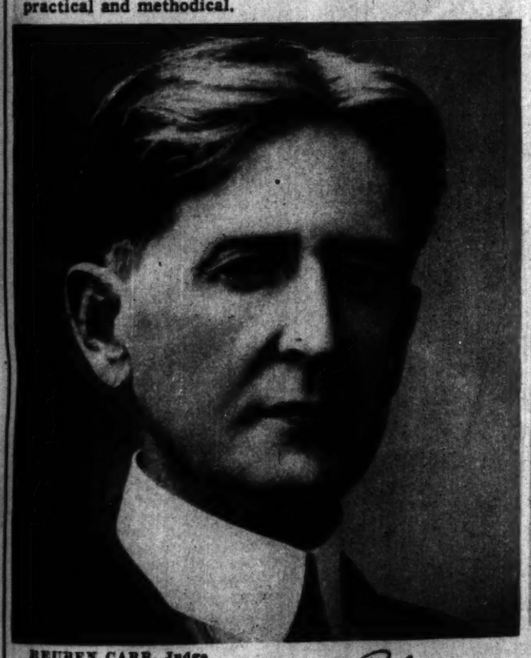
Josiah L. Rice

Eyes that show grit and a nose that shows shrewdness go with a face like this that reveals the ability to both plan out and carry through. Being Nordic, this man is wholly materialistic, with keen judgment about things and conditions. He may not like to fight, but he can fight and win when he sets his mind to it. Not understanding people, his affections leave him somewhat in a daze as to their meaning. He is impulsive in emotion, and practical in affairs.

IDA MAY CONNELL, 921 McKinley St., Janesville, Wis. Occupation, Housewife, Mother. (Mott Photo.)

Ida May Connell

A woman is shown here who has the power to analyze people most acutely. Few motives or impulses escape her comprehension. She has good judgment of material values also, and is well balanced and idealistic to no little degree. Her profile shows dauntless courage, great self-respect, faithfulness and devotion. Her writing shows that she possesses foresight and affection. For this reason she will probably spend her hundred dollars on her family, but in no frivolous way.



REUBEN CARR, Judge of 41st Judicial Circuit, Rochester, Ind.

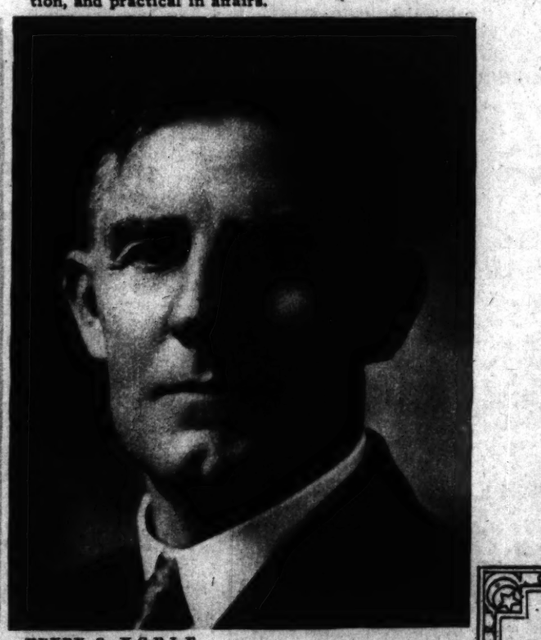
Reuben R. Carr

Here is the face of a lover of beauty and proportion. He has a fine sense of harmony, and of the fitness of things. This sense, in every day life, gives him a keenly analytical mind. He is sensitive and affectionate, devoted to ideals and principles, but too susceptible to criticism. He suffers from introspection or looking at his own mind too much. These narrow jaws and sharp nose show it. He will spend his hundred dollars in a moderate and thrifty manner, perhaps on some one else.

RUTH F. PETERSON, 5137 N. Robey St., Chicago, Ill. Occupation, Office Worker. (Krehne Photo.)

Ruth F. Petterson

She shows moderation in every quarter. Her whole existence seems evenly balanced, calm and philosophical. She lives by her ideals. Cheeks and nose like hers denote shrewdness and perspicacity, tempered here by a forehead that has "toleration" written on it. She is lenient with the faults of others. She understands both people and things; things probably the more. She is unselfish, and will perhaps ask others to share in the spending of her hundred dollars.



HENRY S. NOBLE, Balcom, Ill. Occupation, Telegraph Operator. (Cahn Photo.)

Lots of Four Father

This man would spend his money on every one except himself. He is dominated by his affections. His nature is humanitarian and reserved. He is fitted to endure work, privations and suffering. His writing shows a man who "feels" things out rather than thinks them out. The eyes reveal shrewdness, and the mouth firmness without limit for what he considers right. His temperament is constructive, and his heritage appears to be Nordic.

THE CONDITIONS:

1. The public is invited to submit Photographs to Doris Blake of The Chicago Tribune for Character Analysis. The Chicago Tribune will pay $15,000.00 in cash for photographs and hand-writing specimens which, in the opinion of Doris Blake, reveal the most interesting characters. $1,000.00 will be paid each week in ten cash prizes of $100.00 for each photograph published.
2. The Character Analysis privilege is open to everybody except employes of The Tribune and their families. It does not matter where you live.
3. Any kind of photograph will do—a cabinet photo, a snapshot, a post card, any kind! Quality of the photograph will not be considered. Photographs will be returned after all subjects have been selected if proper postage is enclosed with the photograph.
4. The name, address and occupation of the person must accompany the photograph. When possible, this information should be written in the person's own hand writing. When photo is sent in as a surprise send along any sample of the person's handwriting.

   A coupon will be published in The Chicago Tribune every Sunday. You may use this or write on a separate sheet of paper of the same form.
5. Photographs should be sent by first class mail to Doris Blake, Post Office Box 1539, Chicago, Illinois.
6. No photographs will be received after December 17, 1924.

See your bathroom through guests' eyes

DID you ever look at your bathroom—particularly the toilet seat—through your guests' eyes? Familiarity often blinds us to uninviting details, but if the toilet seat is old and worn, your guests will quickly notice it, just as you would in someone else's home. You owe it to yourself to remedy this condition if it exists.

Thousands now have nicer bathrooms

THOUSANDS of women who have always wanted nicer bathrooms have found that they can easily have them, not by making the bathroom all over, but simply by installing a new, Church, all-white toilet seat.

The difference a spotlessly white toilet seat makes in the looks of the whole bathroom is certainly a pleasant surprise. Some women say: "Looks hundred per cent better;" some, "Looks dozen times better;" and others, "Now I am proud to have guests go into my bathroom."

Church Seats Fit Any Bowl—Installed in Few Minutes

CHURCH Seats fit any bowl and can be installed easily in a few minutes; so easily that you can install one yourself, although any plumber will be glad to install it for you at small cost. If you move to another house or another apartment the seat is easily taken with you.

The handsome white surface of Church seats is a smooth, ivory-like sheathing which won't wear off as paint is apt to do, and it won't crack, split, discolor, absorb moisture or retain odors. It is as easy to clean as porcelain and is perfectly sanitary. It is above the criticism of any guest.

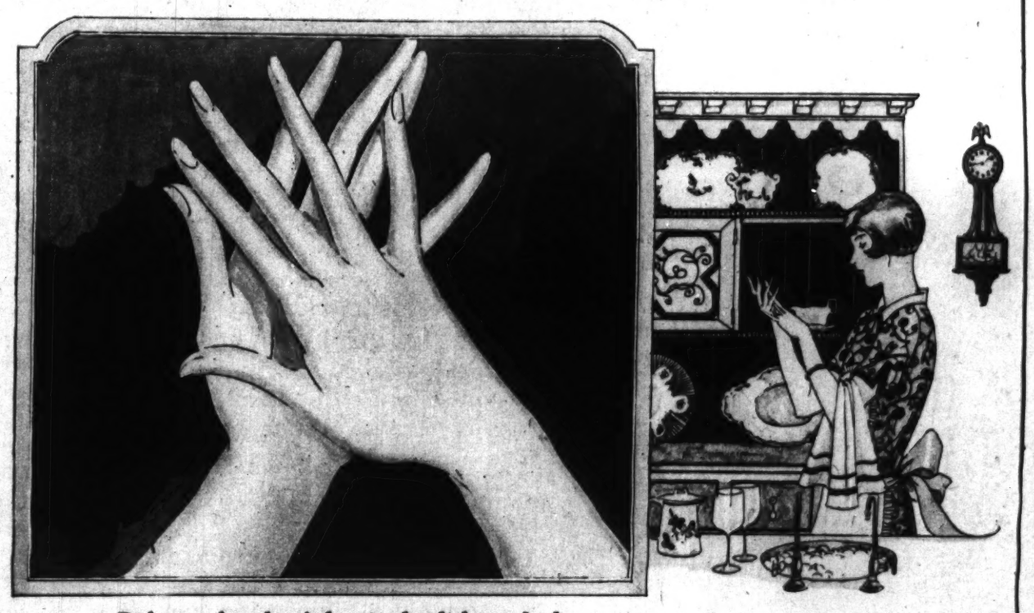
REGINALD DENNY is the gentleman who elevated the prize fighting profession to the place it holds in our movies today. No doubt you remember him as the brainy, brawny and beautiful hero of H. C. Witwer's "Leather Pushers" series.

IN "THE SAINTED DEVIL," Paramount's latest, the popular Rudolph Valentino plays the part of a gallant Spaniard again. From the above picture one would guess that we are to be treated to some more tangoing. The lucky lady is Helena D'Algy.

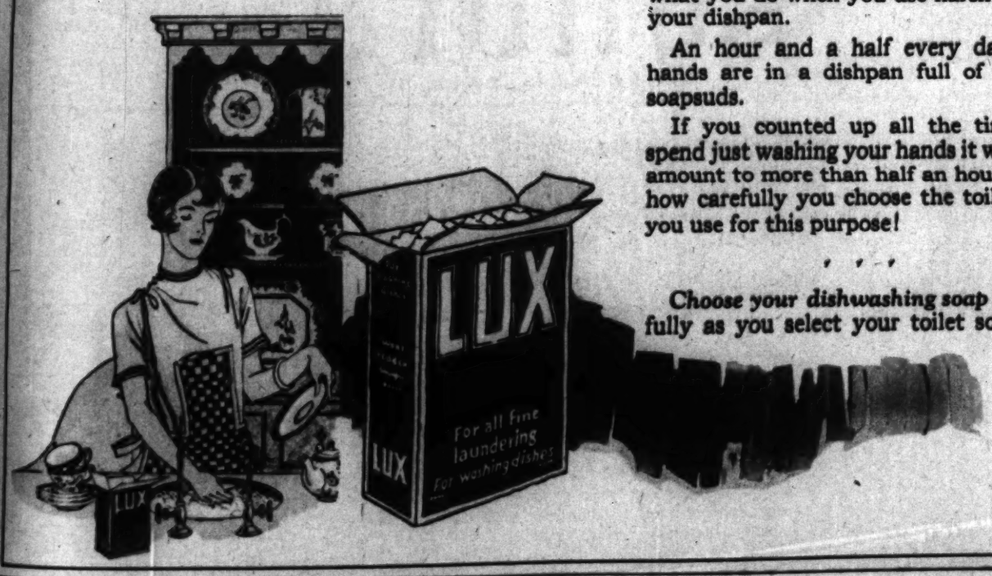
ALEXANDRESCO! Queer name, isn't it? Sort of queer lady who bears it. She's a Roumanian actress—exotic and peculiar looking—and she has an important role in "The Arab," if you remember. Vurr', vurr' striking!

Imagine washing your hands with kitchen soap an hour and a half every day!

That is exactly what you do when you wash dishes with it ..



Rid your hands of that in-the-dishpan look



IT seems unbearable to you — the idea of deliberately choosing kitchen soap to wash your hands with.

But when you stop to think of it that is what you do when you use harsh soap in your dishpan.

An hour and a half every day your hands are in a dishpan full of kitchen soapsuds.

If you counted up all the time you spend just washing your hands it wouldn't amount to more than half an hour — yet how carefully you choose the toilet soap you use for this purpose!

Choose your dishwashing soap as carefully as you select your toilet soap and your hands will instantly respond.

Use Lux for washing dishes. Just take your package, throw a teaspoonful into your dishpan. The quick, rich suds are every bit as easy on your hands as fine toilet soap.

Kitchen soap irritates. You know how your hands sting and burn after you've finished the dishes with harsh soap.

It's the free alkali in kitchen soap that causes it — robbing your hands of their important beautifying oils. This harsh ingredient irritates your skin — makes your hands rough and red.

Lux is mild and gentle,— there is no free alkali in it to attack the beautifying oils.

It helps your hands retain their satin smoothness. You don't have to dread that in-the-dishpan look when you use Lux for washing dishes.

One teaspoonful enough. Incredible! Yet you've only to try it to prove it. As one woman said, "I just throw a pinch of Lux in the pan and the minute I turn on the hot water the suds bubble up."

When you've a quantity of dinner dishes you may need two teaspoonfuls, but ordinarily one teaspoonful is enough.

Get Lux today. There's a big new package made especially for kitchen use, as well as the package you know so well. Lever Bros. Co., Cambridge, Mass.

The SONORADIO
A combination phonograph and radio — the latest triumph of Sonora tone reproduction. Will instantly reproduce tones received from the air or from a record.

A voice from the Air
A song from the Record reproduced with the same clear tone in all its original beauty

THE air is full of music—countless waves darting over the world with the speed of light, bearing joy to those who can catch and guide them into their homes.

Science has done this—as it previously worked another miracle: compressing into "records" the music of the masters of song and string.

Yet the full glory of it all can easily be missed.

* * *

Sound and tone are delicate. To be perfectly reproduced, whether from record or radio wave, they must be freed from mechanical imperfections—made to flow forth again in all their original loveliness.

For eleven years Sonora has had one single aim—perfect tone reproduction. Into the heart of every Sonora instrument — phonograph, radio-phonograph, or radio speaker — is built the famous Sonora tone chamber.

This tone chamber is an exclusive patent — to build it requires over one hundred separate and distinct manufacturing operations.

The Sonora tone chamber is all wood—but not solid wood, for, like solid metal, thick or thin, solid wood will add vibrations of its own.

Instead, ply upon ply of thin, seasoned wood is moulded around a form as perfect as the science of acoustics can make it. Each wafer-thin layer is set at cross-grain to the next. Between each pair of plies are spread sheer films of gum which function like the quicksilver coating on a mirror, neutralizing vibration and reflecting every faintest sound—not a single tone is added—none taken away. Whether it be a symphony interpreted with the delicate beauty of stringed instruments — a marvelous voice or the exhilarating rhythm of a foxtrot—Sonora reproduces it in all its original color.

ONLY in Sonora instruments will you find this mellow beauty of tone. That is why Sonora is a favorite today among music lovers all over the country.

Sonora exclusively specializes in the making of sound reproducing instruments. There is a Sonora for every home—and to fit every purse: from the Radio Speaker for $30 or the compact portable at $50 to the most beautiful period models—gems of the cabinet maker's art. In every Sonora you find two things—matchless tone reproduction built into an exquisite piece of furniture.

Go to your music dealer and ask him to play the Sonora for you. You will find after hearing it that tone reproduction has taken on a new meaning for you. Sonora Phonograph Co., Inc., 279 Broadway, New York.

SOUND WAVES set up vibrations in solid wood or metal horns that produce discordant overtones. These are eliminated in the Sonora by making the horn of many thicknesses of wafer-thin veneer—laid in alternating grain to neutralize vibration.

CLEAR AS A BELL

In the SONORA RADIO SPEAKER for $30.00, the famous Sonora tone chamber has been made available for all radio users. You can now have the same pure tone in radio that Sonora has made possible in the phonograph.

BABY GRAND
A favorite Sonora upright phonograph. The graceful curved design is an exclusive Sonora feature. Price, $200.

CHIPPENDALE
One of the exquisite line of Sonora de-luxe period phonographs. All the finest periods are represented, ranging in price from $400 to $3000.

CANTERBURY
One of the many beautiful Sonora console phonographs—a perfectly proportioned cabinet that harmonizes with almost any interior. Price, $200.

SERENADE
The compact Serenade is a true period phonograph at moderate cost. Especially suited for rooms of moderate size. Price, $150.

SIDNEY SMITH

CHESTER WANTS TO HEAR FROM ALL HIS LITTLE FRIENDS AND OF COURSE THAT MEANS YOU- HE WILL GIVE AWAY THREE BEAUTIFUL PRIZES FOR THE BEST LETTERS- JUST TELL CHESTER WHAT YOU WOULD LIKE TO HAVE FOR A PRESENT AND YOU MAY BE ONE OF THE LUCKY ONES— ADDRESS CHESTER GUMP-% THIS PAPER-

I WONDER WHY UNCLE BIM SAID FOR ME TO WEAR MY SAILOR SUIT TO-DAY-

GOOD MORNING-

GOOD MORNING, SIR- YOUR UNCLE WOULD LIKE TO SEE YOU IN THE LIBRARY, SIR, ON A MATTER OF VAST IMPORTANCE - THANK YOU SIR-

GEE, I WONDER WHAT UNCLE BIM WANTS- HE TOLD ME TO BE SURE TO WEAR MY SAILOR SUIT AND NOW HE WANTS TO SEE ME- I'LL BET HE IS GOING TO DO SOME OTHER NICE THING FOR ME - HE IS ALWAYS PLANNING SOMETHING TO MAKE ME HAPPY- I BELIEVE HE IS THE BEST UNCLE IN THE WORLD-

GOOD MORNING, UNCLE— SEE, I'M WEARING MY SAILOR SUIT-

GOOD MORNING, CHESTER- I TOLD YOU TO WEAR YOUR SAILOR SUIT BECAUSE I HAVE A LITTLE SURPRISE FOR YOU-

YOU WILL NEVER BE ABLE TO GUESS WHAT I HAVE FOR YOU TO-DAY-

YOU HAVE GIVEN ME SO MANY BEAUTIFUL PRESENTS I CAN'T THINK OF ANYTHING THAT A BOY COULD WANT THAT I HAVEN'T GOT- SO I GIVE UP- WHAT IS IT?

THIS IS THE SURPRISE I HAVE FOR YOU- A PRIVATE YACHT THAT IS ALL YOUR OWN-

THIS YACHT WILL BE AT YOUR SERVICE AT ALL TIMES TO TAKE YOU WHEREVER YOU DESIRE TO GO- YOU WILL ENJOY WATCHING THE NATIVES IN THEIR QUAINT DUG-OUT CANOES- IN SPITE OF THE SHARKS THAT INFEST THESE WATERS THE LITTLE NATIVE BOYS DIVE TO THE BOTTOM OF THE SEA AFTER PENNIES- I KNOW YOU'LL ENJOY WATCHING THEM - AND THEY'LL ENJOY THE PENNIES YOU CAST OVERBOARD-

THEY HAVE ALL DIVED FOR PENNIES EXCEPT THE KING- WHAT'S THE MATTER- CAN'T HE SWIM?

YES, THE KING IS THE CHAMPION SWIMMER AND DIVER BUT BEING A KING HE HAS TOO MUCH ROYAL DIGNITY TO DIVE FOR PENNIES- BUT I'LL TRY HIM WITH A DOLLAR-

LUNCHEON IS READY-

OH UNCLE- LET'S EAT- I NEVER WAS SO HUNGRY IN MY WHOLE LIFE- I HOPE WE HAVE SOMETHING NICE FOR LUNCH-

I HIRED A CHEF WHO'S SPECIALTY IS COOKING THINGS THAT LITTLE BOYS LIKE-

THIS IS SCRUMPTIOUS- YOUR CHEF COOKS ALMOST AS WELL AS MY MOTHER DOES- I'D LIKE TO GIVE A PICNIC ON THIS BOAT AND TAKE A CROWD OF POOR LITTLE BOYS ON A TRIP SO THEY COULD HAVE FUN EATING THIS SWELL STUFF-

YOU ARE A TRUE GUMP AND IF YOU WANT TO INVITE A LOT OF POOR BOYS REMEMBER THE YACHT IS YOURS.

UNCLE IS GOING TO GIVE ME A HYDROPLANE THAT WILL GO OVER A HUNDRED MILES AN HOUR AND WILL BE FITTED OUT LIKE AN OCEAN-GOING STEAM-SHIP- WHEN IT IS BUILT I WILL BE ABLE TO FLY FROM AUSTRALIA TO MY HOUSE IN FOUR OR FIVE DAYS- I BET THE KIDS IN MY NEIGHBORHOOD WOULD OPEN THEIR EYES IF THEY SAW ME COME FLYING DOWN OUT OF THE CLOUDS IN THE SWELLEST AIRSHIP IN THE WHOLE WORLD - AND WOULDN'T MY PAPA AND MAMA BE ASTONISHED?

REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.

THE WORLD'S SMALLEST PEOPLE.

WM. DONAHEY.

"O, what a lovely pea pod canoe!" exclaimed the Lady of Fashion as she stopped to watch Gogo at work on his tiny boat.

"Yas, ma'm," said the little colored fellow. "Ah always done take mighty good care of mah boats. They's mighty good friends to have on de watah—Ah knows, fo' Ah was done macarooned once on a island."

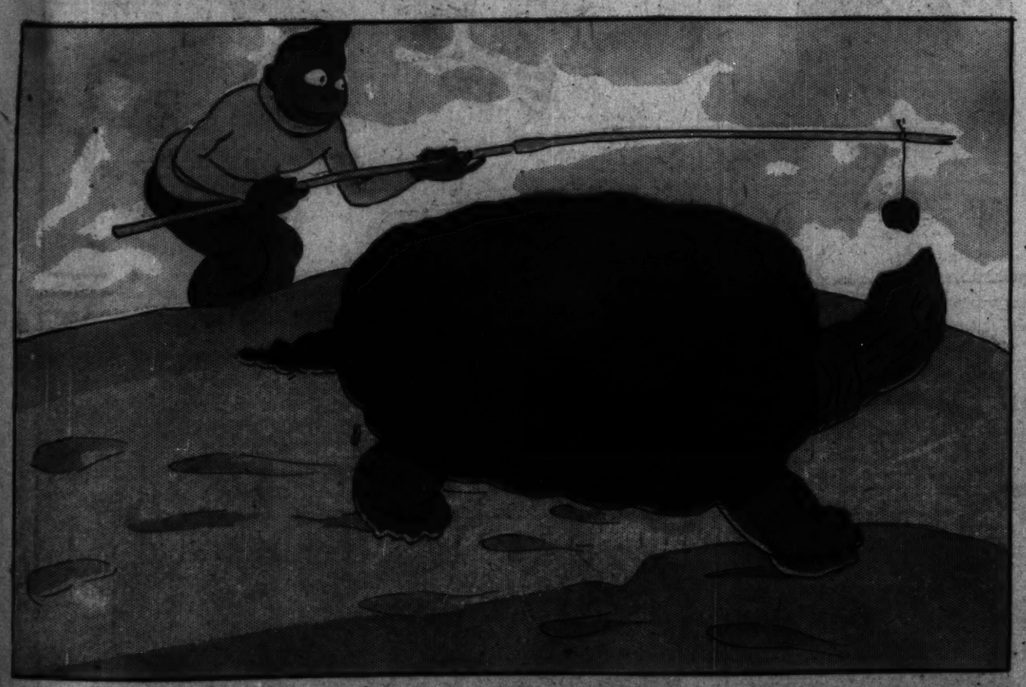
"O, tell me about it!" cried the little lady. "It must have been exciting."

"Well," began Gogo, "Ah was paddlin' down de big rivah one time lookin' fo' turtle eggs. Ah didn't have no luck findin' any, so Ah was about to turn 'round and paddle fo' home when Ah done remembah they was a little island 'round de bend where turtles sometimes done lay de eggs and Ah done set out fo' it. It was a little island, but it was nice, soft sand, just de place where de turtle likes to bury his eggs.

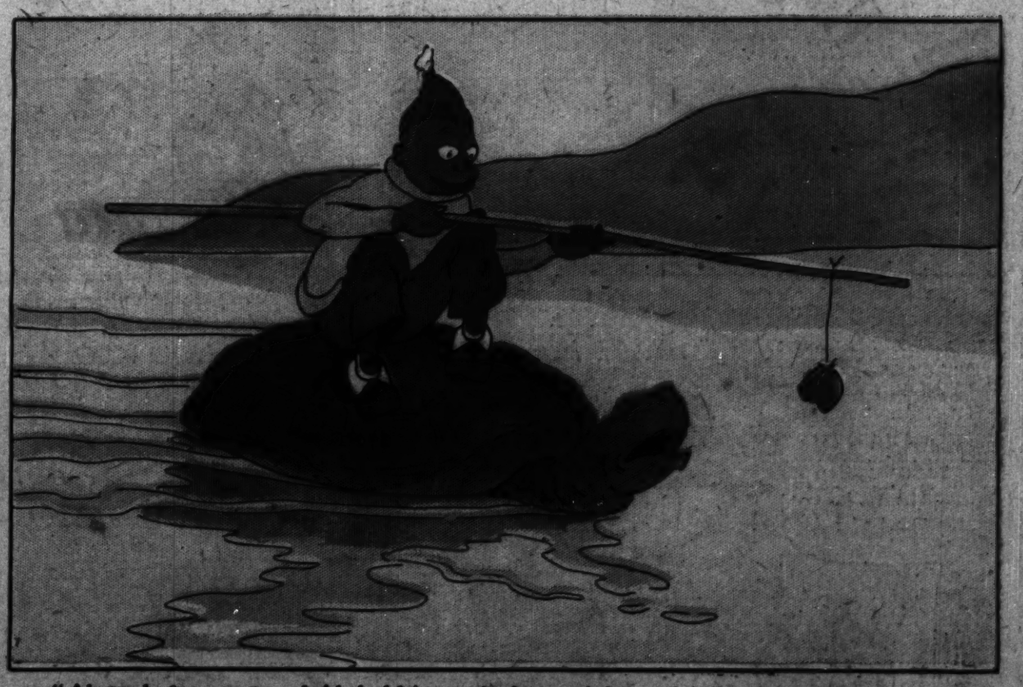
"Ah done searched dat island like a monkey done hunt fleas, but Ah couldn't find a single egg, so Ah done trot back to mah canoe. When Ah traipsed back to the place where Ah done left mah canoe it was gone. Ah reckon Ah had not pulled it up fah enough on de bank and de wind done blow it off, so there Ah was macarooned on dat island. It was too fah fo' to swim and besides Ah suttenly didn't want to take no chance of a frog or turtle makin' a meal off me.

"'Well, Gogo,' Ah says to mahself, 'yo' suttenly is Robinson Crusoed.' There wasn't anything on de island what Ah could done make a raft out of—it sure was a desert island. 'Well,' Ah says to mahself, lookin' around at de watah, 'yo' sure won't get thirsty.'

"Pretty soon Ah done see a turtle, 'bout as big as a cake of soap, and he done climb up on de shore—then Ah done got to thinkin'.



'Now dat turtle is puffectly able fo' to carry me ashore, Ah agrees with mahself. But how's we gwine fo' to do it? If Ah git on his back he's gwine fo' de bottom of de rivah and that's no place fo' me, so Ah got to thinkin' and pretty soon Ah done hatch a idea. Ah done get a straw about fo' inches long an den Ah take a piece of string and a little piece of dried frog ham, what Ah happened to have in mah pocket, and Ah fixed up a fishing outfit with de frog meat fo' bait.



"Ah took dat meat and Ah held it out in front of de turtle's nose and pretty soon he done sniff it and started fo' it. That's just what Ah wanted, so Ah done step on de turtle's back and Ah kept dat meat hangin' in front of his nose. De turtle think he done catch de meat and so he swim as fast as he can, but Ah kept it just out of his reach. Wherever Ah wanted to go, Ah would done point de meat and de turtle would follow—dat's how Ah done got unmacarooned."

GRADE SCHOOL

ALL RIGHT- TELL HER I'LL I'LL BE AT TH' POOL PARLOR AT TWO O'CLOCK.

MOON, ME SCHOOL TEACHER WANTS TO SEE YOU.

I GUESS SHE'S ONE A THEM BABIES WHICH HAS SEEN MY PICTURE IN TH' PAPERS AN' GOT STUCK ON ME.

MAYBE YOU'D BETTER COME OVER TO TH' SCHOOL HOUSE, MOON- SHE DON'T PLAY POOL

THE MAIN TROUBLE WITH THE BOY IS THAT HE'S A LITTLE DUMB MR. MULLINS- WHY, HE ALWAYS GETS P IN SPELLING.

IS ZAT SO? WELL, I WUZ DOIN' SWELL TILL YOU COMMENCED CHANGIN' TH' WORDS ON ME!

I WOULD SUGGEST THAT YOU PUT HIM BACK IN THE FIRST GRADE AND HELP HIM WITH HIS WORK YOURSELF.

AW- I THINK I'LL JES TAKE HIM OUTTA SCHOOL. HE'S GOT ALL TH' LEARNIN' HE NEEDS- TAKE MYSELF FR INSTANCE, I NEVER WENT TO SCHOOL SO MUCH.

WHY, MY DEAR MAN- I WENT TO SCHOOL UNTIL I WAS EIGHTEEN- THEN I ATTENDED COLLEGE FOUR YEARS AND I CONSIDER THAT I KNOW VERY LITTLE.

WELL YOU KNOW HOW IT IS- 'SOME FOLKS LEARN FASTER'N OTHERS.

HEL-LO ♫♫ KAYO!

WELL, WELL, WELL.

HOW DE-DO, MISS PICKLES.

YOU DON'T SAY SO, KAYO?

THAT'S TH' LADY WHICH TEACHES TH' FIRST GRADE, MOON.

SAY- YOU RUN HOME AN' GET ME MY SUNDAY SUIT AN' BRING IT OVER TO NICK'S BARBER SHOP.

THAT'S IT, NICK- SQUIRT SOME MORE A THAT BAY-RUM ON MY KNOB- I'VE GOT SOME BUSINESS TO TEND TO AFTER LUNCH.

HEY MOON! THIS QUARTER YOU GAVE ME- IT DON'T RING RIGHT.

WOT-DIDJA EXPECT IT TO DO FOR A QUICK SHAVE LIKE THAT- PEAL LIKE A CHURCH BELL?

YESSIR! THAT SECOND-GRADE TEACHER WAS RIGHT, KAYO- AB-SO-LUTE-LY.
